REAL ESTATE

AT Public Auction
Will be sold at public auction.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 13th, 1889,
AT 4 O'CLOCK P. M.

On the premises, the desirable real estate owned by the Waltham Savings Bank, Located on Maple St., Watertown, near Newton line. The property consists of

About 9000 Square Feet of Land with Buildings.
The lot has a frontage on Maple street of about 100 feet; is well graded; has fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs. The buildings consist of a good TWO STORY HOUSE and SMALL STABLE. The house is large and contains many good sized, light and airy rooms very conveniently arranged, and is in good order. The premises are such as would make any one a very comfortable and desirable home. The estate being located near depots on two different railroads and with horse cars passing within sight, it possesses advantages over many estates offered for sale. The sale will be positive as the bank which acquired this property has no desire to hold real estate. A deposit of $300 will be required of purchaser. Terms made known at time and place of sale.

—The police raided Andrew Elamin's place, Gardner street, yesterday morning and captured one half gallon of hard stuff. In court this morning, Judge Kennedy after listening to the evidence, imposed a fine of $75 and costs and sentenced him to 6 months in the house of correction. He appealed.

On account of the dampness of the weather, the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday afternoon was held in the vestry of the M. E. church. A large audience was present to listen to Mr. H. L. Hastings, who gave an earnest and thrilling address upon "Pressing forward to prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus." A few testimonies were added at the close. Next Sunday the meeting will be in charge of Mr. W. F. Story, the city solicitor. Come and help us sing.

—The report of the board of health for June shows 7 cases of diphtheria in that month, of which three were in Ward One, and one each in Wards Two, Four, Five and Six. There were no cases of scarlet fever and only one of typhoid fever. The report says: "It now seems quite probable that diphtheria has about run itself out for this season, and it is hoped for good. Premises where this dreaded disease has appeared have been thoroughly fumigated and it is gratifying to know that but a very few cases have reappeared where fumigation has taken place."

—A small wooden house on Gardner street was the scene of a disgraceful row Wednesday afternoon. The premises are occupied by Andrew Slamin and John Kennedy and their families. The place has been repeatedly complained of, and Slamin has been in court for maintaining a liquor nuisance. People who live in the locality went to the landlord and entered a complaint, and he appeared on the scene Wednesday afternoon and had a talk with Kennedy. It is supposed that Slamin took offense and as a result of the visit a general row ensued, Kennedy getting pretty severe punishment. Both men were arrested.

—Mrs. Mary Hamilton, mother of Mrs. W. D. Bickford of Jewett street in the Watertown district, died at the residence of her son-in-law on Monday. She was born in New Ipswich, N. H., May 20, 1791, and had reached the advanced age of 93 years. Capt. Benjamin Simpson of Boston, who captured the British vessel Speedwell, and carried the prize to Portland, Me., in the war of 1812, was her father. She was a niece of the late Daniel Simpson, the veteran drummer. A lady with remarkable memory, she could narrate all the circumstances relating to her life, and would always amuse a company with reminiscences of "the olden time." Many relatives and friends will mourn her loss, and consider hers a well spent life, and one worthy of being held as an example to those she leaves behind.

—Newton has 4,201 children between the ages of 2 and 15 years, an increase of 114 over 1888. Ward Three leads with an increase of 10, and has the largest number, 27. Ward One 24, Ward Five 21, Ward Six 12, Ward Four 11 and Ward Seven has lost 22, and has also the smallest number of children, 23. Ward Two second with 23, which is nearly doubled by Ward Five, the next smallest ward, which has 533, while all the other wards have over 600 and Ward Two has the largest number, 635, nearly three times as many as Ward Seven. Although one of the richest wards in the city, most of the residents in the ward have large estates and their children have been brought up in the country.

There are many to whom I have ministered during these three years who have not yet declared their faith in Christ as a personal Saviour. For all such I shall pray as earnestly in the future as in the past.

"I have a Saviour, He's pleading in glory. A dear, loving Saviour, the earth's truest friend. And now He is watching in tenderness o'er me, And oh, how His Saviour were your Saviour too!"

My parting prayer is that you will unite your hearts in asking that the Great Head of the Church send you a Shepherd of his own choosing, who shall lead you into the green pastures of thought and feeling and life.

Your affect, Pastor,
P. HUNTER, JR.

Steam Storage Power Car.

The "power car," which in appearance resembles the grip car on the cable roads, now being built by the Pullman Palace Car Company of Chicago, will be in practical operation, with street cars attached, in September. It is believed that this system of storing steam will completely revolutionize the method of using steam for power, and that no invention relating to the application of steam has been introduced for the past quarter of a century which can compare with this in its value to the general public. Rapid and wonderful progress has been made in the development of electrical appliances for motive power during the past few years, but it is a very significant fact that the foundation of electric power is steam, except where water power is available; hence it would seem to be conclusive that steam must rank first, electricity second, and such must continue to be their respective positions until some new method shall be discovered for the production of the electric current without the aid of steam and at a less cost per horse power.

The Bryant & Stratton Commercial School of Boston, which our readers will notice advertised in this week's issue, will reopen Tuesday, Sept. 3rd. This school needs no recommendation from us, as its present standing and reputation gained during the last 28 years, places it at the head of all schools of a similar character. It can be patronized with full confidence that nothing that is possible to be done for its pupils will be left undone.

PICTURESQUE NEW ENGLAND.

A Few Hints on Summer Vacations—Where to Go and What to See—Model Trips for Weary Workers—Views by Ocean, Lake and Mountain.

NORTHERN New England is the summer park of America. Amid its grand and beautiful scenery, of mountains, lakes, forest and intervals, beach and bay, the nervous and weary American finds his annual rest and recuperation, absorbing, by all his senses, the deep contentment of the scene, and storing up strength of body and pleasures of memory against the coming season of stress and hurry.

The system of park-roads covering this great four-State pleasure-ground of the republic is the Boston & Maine Whitefield's grave. Look from the bridge down to where the great Merrimac flows into the sea, past the light-houses and ruined fort.

Next it is a score of miles of New Hampshire that the line crosses, amid villages nestling under immemorial elms, and brimming salt-marshes, overlooked by the vivid blue sea, and the hotels of Hampton and Rye. Portsmouth next appears in a rosy aureole of poetry and legend, with Newcastle and Kittery, and the renowned Isles of Shoals far out in the ocean. Another branch whisks away along the beaches and headlands of York. Up the coast looms the blue mountain of Agamenticus; and then comes the beach of Wells. From Kennebunk a branch runs out along the sea-marshes and sandy beaches to Kennebunkport, with its sheltering Cape Arundel studded with summer hotels.

Another run brings us to Saco river, flowing down from the far-away White Railroad, with its northern and eastern connections, and branches, winding around the coast and through the mountain-passes for many hundreds of miles. Perfect in equipment and liberal in management, this great company covers the central and northeastern counties of Massachusetts with its network of rails, and controls the traffic to the White Mountains and the lovely lake country of New Hampshire, and the coast of Maine for a great distance. Swift express trains, parlor cars, and all the possible luxuries of travel are provided for tourists on this great system of railways, and so the task of exploring northern New England, or seeking a congenial summer-home, becomes a positive pleasure. The main lines traverse the country on roadbeds and over bridges of Roman strength and security; and on either side frequent branch lines diverge, wandering out on breezy and spray-swept capes, where

Old Eastern Point the schooners round, And leave Cape Ann on the larboard lee; or winding up the long valleys of mountain streams,

By hills hung with forests, through vales wild and free. The first fifty miles of the shore route running eastward from Boston traverses a region more richly endowed with history, poetry and legends than any other in America, and also abounding in the grandeur of ocean scenery, and the quaintness of ancient seaports and harbors famous in naval and East Indian annals. Running out of the Puritan City, under the golden dome of the State House, you pass within sight of Bunker Hill Monument and the city of Boston, and the great cities of Cambridge, Somerville and Chelsea. For miles the blue sea fills the eastern horizon, as you cross the salt marshes to Lynn. Off shore you see Nahant and Egg Rock, and an ocean plain that is not broken until the shores of Europe rise above it. Out on the point beyond the many summer villas and hotels of Swampscott, quaint old Marblehead crouches round its little harbor, with the sea roaring outside. The gray old houses of Salem come into view, recalling the old-time knights of where known for its Phillips Academy, now more than a century old, and the school of Webster, Everett, Cass, Bancroft, and many other famous men. Another run by several lonely rural stations, wide pastures, leagues of stone wall, and bits of forest leads to Dover, connection for Alton Bay on Lake Winnipegesaukee with Str. Mt. Washington, on the Cocheco, which was settled in 1723, and often destroyed by Indian raiders. A few miles beyond, the railroad runs out on the coast and so keeps on to Portland.

Among the many natural beauties of New England, its lakes and its streams command a noble and conspicuous place. From the placid loveliness of the lowland ponds, environed by grassy hills and rich farmlands, to the wild picturesque of the far northern lakes, where the weird cry of the loon is heard

England, Puritan warriors and divines, the East India sea-kings, Hawthorne and his heroes. Here another branch line turns seaward, following the coast for nearly a score of miles, by the lovely summer colonies of Beverly, Manchester and Magnolia, to Gloucester and Rockport, near the tip of Cape Ann, at Pigeon Cove. Northward again from noble and venerable Salem, through Beverly, by Wenham Pond, and the home of "Gail Hamilton," and the birthplace of Rufus Choate, and the antique Puritan village of Ipswich; and then for leagues along the edge of Zealand-like salt marshes; and so into beautiful and quaint old Newburyport, Garrison's birthplace and by night, and the moose and deer come down to drink, there is almost every variety of water scenery, and attractions for the lover of Nature and the sportsman.

There is Winnepesaukee, mirroring the grand blue mountains of New Hampshire; and Moosehead, buried in leagues of ancient forest and the ranges of the Adirondacks; and the broad Champlain, its silvery tide flowing between the Adirondacks and the Green Mountains; and Lake St. John, far away in the wild northland, cooled by the breezes from Hudson's Bay. Boating, fishing, bathing, driving, climbing, and many other forms of recreation may be enjoyed amid these tranquil and restful localities, at light expense, and within easy reach of the cities. To the mosses who are wearied of the sea and the mountains, the great lake-country of New England offers new and unusual attractions.

Of all New England lakes, Winnepesaukee is the most popular. Winnepesaukee is an Indian word phrase meaning "Beautiful water in a High Place," and the scene is admirably portrayed by this amazing polysyllabic word, which has been spelt in old documents and histories in 131 various ways. There may be more lovely lakes elsewhere in this pleasant world, but Lucerne could envy the islands of Winnepesaukee, and Lake George could wish for its true mountain vistas, and Yellowstone could sigh for its sweet and tranquil farmlands.

WHITE ISLAND LIGHT, ISLES OF SHOALS.

ing in width from half a mile to a league. There are six beautiful islets near the middle of the lake, and several others in the northern part; and a dozen or more of wooded promontories give great diversity to the scene, and shelter lovely and sequestered bays. On all sides rise high and richly wooded hills and mountains, clothed in the graceful habitations of nature and surrounding the peaceful scene like mighty sentinels.

At the South, Mount Sunapee overlooks the mirror-like expanse, a huge dark-green pile of forest-clad rocks and ridges. To the eastward, the bare crown of Kearsarge salutes the sky; Crocodon Mountain hems in the westward view; and on the north loom the lonely cliffs of Ragged Mountain.

Some one has called Sunapee "the Loch Lomond of New Hampshire," but it more nearly resembles Loch Katrine, with its secluded beaches and wooded shores. The low hills in the vicinity repay the toil of ascent by charming views, covering the bright lake and its islands, the defile of the Sugar-River Valley, and line after line of tall and picturesque mountains, reaching far away into the dim blue distance. The edicts of fashion, moreover, are held in abeyance on these happy shores, and broadcloth gives place to flannel, and tennis costumes and boating suits are preferred to the more arduous garments of artificial civilization. So it naturally happens that the frequenters of Sunapee return to it year after year, and the pleasant explorations of its nooks and corners, bays and coves and islands, furnish ever-new themes of interest and delight.

"I go to meet the winds of morn, Blown down the hill gaps, mountain born. Breathe scented pinns and satisfy The hunger of a lowland eve."

Stretching away northward for thirty-three miles, between rocky-bound shores and ancient forests, with a chain of high mountains brooding along its western shore, and many a graceful island rising above the clear waves, Memphramagog truly merits its strong name, which means "Beautiful Wat'r." The usual standard of comparison for Memphramagog is the exquisitely beautiful Lake George, like this, mountain-bound, and adorned with pretty islands. Other people find here resemblances to Loch Lomond; and those who have been farther afield call it the Lake Geneva of Canada. The Northern air is strangely exhilarating, cooled by the mountain elevations, or by blowing over the crystal ice-cold waters of the lake; and overhead extends a transparent blue sky. One of the most lovely and least-known lakes of New England may be reached by going up the Bristol branch from Franklin, on the Northern railroad, alongside of the swift Pemigewasset river. On the little plateau over the gorge of the Newfound river stands the bright manufacturing village of Bristol; and five or six miles to the northward the sparkling waters of Newfound lake open away among the hills, seven miles long and three miles wide, and well populated with lake trout, landlocked salmon, black bass, pickerel, chub and perch. The kindly and hospitable farmers of the surrounding hills take many summer boarders into their homes; and along the shore, now in low and sandy beaches, and again swelling into rocky promontories, scores of white tents of peaceful campers blink at each other over the water. The little-used pastures are occupied by battalions of berry bushes; and myriads of sweet northern flowers bloom all summer long around the peaceful bays.

low, and a stately panorama of the mountains beyond. From Faynan's we may ride to the top of Mount Washington, all the way by rail, and or we may visit Bethlehem, or the bright summer-capital of the White Mountains; or go down by railway into the incomparable Franconia Notch, with its Echo Lake, and Mount Lafayette, and the Flume, and the wonderful Profile. On this side, also, are the famous summer resorts of Jefferson Hill, looking square into the deepest ravines of the Presidential Range, and across at its noblest peaks; and Lancaster, dreaming on the lovely meadows of the Connecticut; and Littleton, and Whitefield, and Sugar Hill, and many another.

"Gaze o'er New England underspread, South from St. Lawrence to the Sound, From Catskill east to the sea-bound;"

The Lowell system of the Boston & Maine Railroad affords the best route to NEWFOUND LAKE.

As one who is most familiar with the region has said: "The scenery of Memphramagog is incisive, vigorous, robust. Its features are distinct, salient, characteristic. It cannot claim, like Winnepesaukee, a wealth of island jewelry, but the brooch and studs it wears are enough to adorn without destroying the unity of its shining bosom. Its shores are heavily wooded, and for the most part bold and rugged, but at times gently subsiding into sloping beaches."

But it would be impossible within the space at command to enter into detail regarding all the lake charms that lie to the northward of Boston. There is Champlain, a sapphire-paved amphitheatre between the ranges of the Adirondacks and the Green Mountains; Willoughby, which deserves to be known as the Vermont water gap; and then St. John, Connecticut, Farmacheene, the Rangeleys, Sebago, and Moosehead—all these are reached by the outlying branches of the Boston & Maine and excursions are arranged in such a way as to give the tourist the greatest liberty in choice of route, while the expense is reduced to a minimum.

The favorite route to the White Mountains follows the beautiful seashore line through Lynn and Salem, Newburyport and Portsmouth, and then bends off and traverses the lowlands of New Hampshire and the pond-towns of Milton and Wakefield, and so reaches the lovely shores of Lake Winnepesaukee and the shadows of the Ossipee Mountains, and the magnificent alpine wall of the Sandwich and Tawmworth glens. The majestic rocky peak of Chocoma, purple and white and silver-gray, looms on the left of the route for a long time, and the beautiful expanse of Silver Lake glimmers on the right. So we pass on into the Saco Valley, the royal gateway of the White Mountains, up whose far vistas appear the dim blue peaks of Mount Washington and his comrade giants of southern New Hampshire, around Monadnock and Kearsarge; of central Massachusetts and the idyllic beauties of the Connecticut valley; of the unfamiliar grandeur of the northern Green Mountains from St. Johnsbury to Lake Champlain; of the quaint foreign ways of Montreal and Quebec; of the mountain lakes and Norway-like fiords of "hundred-harbored Maine."

If, however, the reader is sufficiently interested to pursue further a study of all these different localities and routes, the means are at hand for that most agreeable undertaking. The passenger department of the Boston & Maine Railroad has issued a triad of exquisitely printed volumes, all beautifully illustrated and equipped with useful indexes. They bear the general title of "Here and There in New England and Canada," the subtitles setting forth the character of each. They number in the aggregate about four hundred pages, and they were written by Mr. M. F. Sweetser, whose

In which it seems always "afternoon," wrapped in dreamy charm, and enfolded amid majestic forest and grand mountains and serene deep blue-skies.

A few miles above, between Intervale and Kearsarge, the happy Mount Mountain, a dozen inns are scattered on the hills around the white-spined hamlet of Jackson; and a dozen miles beyond, through the Pinkham

Of these books "All Along Shore" (12mo., pp. 148, 62 illustrations, 2 large maps) describes the seaside resorts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine; "Lakes and Streams" (12mo., pp. 96, 63 illustrations, 3 large maps) is devoted to the hunting and fishing resorts of New England and Canada; while "Among the Mountains" (12mo., pp. 128, 40 illustrations, 2 large maps) is a complete guide to the northern highlands. Each one of these volumes will be sent to any address post paid, on receipt of ten cents in stamps by the Passenger Department of

Notch, the great Glen House, alone in a high glen, faces the five greatest peaks in all New England. Or from North Conway we may take a train up through the White Mountain Notch to Crawford House, or Faynan's, a ride of about thirty miles, certainly unequalled elsewhere in America for the impressive and astounding grandeur of its scenery, as the train rushes along its gallery cut midway up the sides of the great cliffs, with the deep valley of the Saco far be-the Boston & Maine railroad, which will also send free on application a copy of the new edition of "The Boston & Maine Railroad Excursion Book" (12mo., pp. 96), giving a list of many hundreds of hotels and summer boarding houses, costs of round trip tickets on many routes, and details of parlor and sleeping cars, express trains, etc. Armed with these comprehensive official authorities the happy vacation tourist can plan intelligently, economically and at his leisure for an outing, whether it be for a week, a month or the entire season, in the most interesting and comfortable region between the Arctic Sea and the Gulf of Mexico.

Our Manufacturing Industries.

THE GAMEWELL COMPANY.

In 1852 the first fire alarm was sounded by electricity in the city of Boston to-day nearly three hundred cities and towns are warned of fire by the same mysterious agent. But this wonderful extension of the system of electric fire-alarms is less remarkable than the progress shown by a comparison of the simplicity, perfection, and ingenuity of the mechanism in use with the first rude beginnings nearly forty years ago.

A fire is discovered in a village store. The clerk takes down a key from a nail behind the door, runs a couple of rods up the street, opens the iron door of the fire alarm box, and pulls a lever. The work is done—somewhat of man's intelligence has been built into that box. In a moment, in a dozen or more buildings miles away and in a dozen different directions, gongs are ringing and numbered cards are displayed. Ear and eye tell hundreds of brave men that there is a call for help, and almost before the runner is at the store again those men are fighting the flames. Let the lightning-strike the pole, let the wires of telegraph, or telephone, or electric light company fall across the fire-wires, let some accident injure the wires within the iron case, let moth or rust or decay attack them, let an incendiary fell a pole or cut a connection—let what happen may—that little iron box holds within itself a marvellous power which will either cure its own hurt, or send word at once to every station in the city—"I am number 67—something is wrong—help me." Right here in Newton we make these magical boxes—here are brass and iron and steel and German-silver and gold—here are wood and rubber and glass and garnets and silk—here are punching and planing and turning and testing, cutting and grinding and boring and sawing—here are wheels and pinions and belts and screws—here are eighty busy, skillful mechanics making apparatus to save property, perhaps human lives, in Texas or Oregon. Where there is so much of interest in such a large part, and so much of wonder in the completed result, it is hard to stop with suggestion only.

To speak truly, it is rather absurd to talk about Tariff Protection to the Gamewell company. It reminds us of the little hole which Sir Isaac Newton made for the kitten, after making a large one for the cat. The Gamewell company has patents in this country and in England, which make a wall about it more than seven times higher than the Tariff. Reduce the Tariff, or abolish it, and the "Gamewell" will go out; and when we consider how far beyond the French and German and English are in electric appliances, it is safe to say that were patent-rights and tariff-wrongs removed to-day, the only competition that could affect this company would be the competition of AMERICAN enterprise and ingenuity. So we might stop here, but it is fair to perhaps to ourselves to show that a reduction of Tariff rates not only would not be harmful, but on the contrary would be actually helpful.

Brass, iron, and steel are the three materials used most largely in this manufacture—and free iron, copper and copper will give the Gamewell company a lower rate than it can get them to-day. This would be the greatest saving. Some other material—as wood and glass—would also be cheapened by Tariff reduction, and though the gain would be very slight, even a little. In the matter of repairs the company would save expense also—we think we showed that clearly last week in regard to the Lower Falls Paper mill—and the same is true of any mill or factory. Now consider a moment these two facts and what must result from them—1. Near- ly three hundred communities use the alarm-boxes and signals furnished by this company. From every quarter comes commendation; each town or city annually adds new boxes to its system. (Newton adds a few every year.)

2. A reduction of the Tariff will enable the company to lower its price—"Newton" himself will admit that the market will be—must be—better. We see then that there is a gain for the company—cheaper raw materials and a larger market. But the public has gained, also, for everywhere cities are putting up five boxes instead of three, or three instead of one, or one instead of none. And how about the eighty workmen—their wages in the face of new and enlarged orders? Scarcely. To do the extra work new workmen must be called for, and a demand for more help always tends to raise wages. To conclude:—A reduction of the Tariff, such as the club advocated, would help—1. The Gamewell company; by causing a decrease in expenses and an increase of orders. 2. The workmen of the company; by causing a greater demand for labor which always tends to strengthen wages; 3. The public, because they would get more protection from fire with an equal expenditure of money.

An Inquiry into Kirkup.

In a communication to the GRAPHIC last week Mr. Gardiner with childlike naïveté remarks:

"Until these gentlemen were unwise enough to reply to 'Newton,' I had supposed that they considered free trade a panacea. It appears that they consider that it may be a dangerous and destructive poison."

Mr. Gardiner's opinion as to our beliefs until we were "unwise enough to reply to Newton" is ignorant enough, but of his conversion, we can only say, "the last state of that man is worse than the first." In regard to Newton's industries we do not hesitate to state our position plainly:

We believe that a wise measure of Tariff Reform, (free raw materials and substantial reduction upon the necessities of life), would cause a prompt and ultimately very great improvement in the industrial, social, political, and moral life of this great nation—of which Newton is a part. Believing that, we shall forward the cause of the reform even if it shuts every factory within our city borders. If that be treason, make the most of it. Meanwhile, he who reads this column from week to week will find good reason to conclude that Newton's Industries fear not Tariff Reform, but rather look forward to it in hopefulness.

But Kirkup, we are assured, agrees not with us. Who is Kirkup? Never mind; let us hear what he says. Mr. Gardiner quotes three passages correctly. From page 76 he quotes a passage about cheapness to which we assent at once. Kirkup perhaps "does not agree with" us, but we agree with Kirkup.—"After all, cheapness is only one of the coming days of well-being." From pages 27 and 41 Mr. Gardiner quotes passages to show that English "Industrial supremacy whitened the plains of India with the bones of the cottage weavers;" and that in England there is a host of workers divorced from land and capital, and that this is the result of the industrial revolution and of that marvellous supremacy in the markets of the world of which the English are proud. Mr. Gardiner seems to imply that England's free trade is the cause of this. Mr. Kirkup makes no such statement anywhere. In the 188 pages of the Inquiry into Socialism he scarcely mentions either protection or free trade. The unfortunate condition of the wage-earners he considers to be the result of what he calls the wage-system, the power of capital, the invention of machinery, and the principle of competition. Kirkup does not confine the evils he sees to his own country by any means.

"In the United States the process of 'struggle goes forward with an intensity which even in this country is hardly known.' Can we wonder that the industrial development is one of competition resulting in the ruin of capitalists, and workmen, and of combination tending to monopoly?" (Page 68.)

Kirkup denounces the wage system the world over, and his cure is—Socialism. But he has one paragraph about free trade; let us hear it.

"In Economics the great teacher of freedom was Adam Smith, with whom it was 'no mere formula, but the well considered result of wide research into the circumstances of his own and of preceding times, and therefore maintained with constant reference to fact; it was a philosophic principle verified and limited by history.' His exposition of the principle was founded on inductive evidence that the true interests of men and nations suffered from 'industrial and commercial restraints.' Those restraints had been imposed by the 'short-sighted and selfish policy of classes and nations.' No wonder that the 'principles of Adam Smith were by clear-sighted and progressive men hailed as the 'true and reasonable word for the age.' The repeal of the corn laws in 1846 'and the accompanying legislation marked 'the definite triumph of the revolutionary forces embodied in modern industry.' 'The world was undoubtedly one of the 'greatest gains of the new era, personal and political freedom, freedom of commerce, freedom of trade.' But 'even with the gift of freedom the lot of 'the worker was exceedingly bad.' 'Yet it was better than the old system, and 'the beginning of better.' (pp. 50-51-52-53.)

Mr. Gardiner says Kirkup does not agree with us, we do not infer that Mr. Kirkup and Mr. Gardiner do agree?

POLITICAL CAPITAL.

The Boston Journal recently had a very able article under the above heading, in which a pronounced stand is taken against any return to the spoils system, and it is conclusively shown that such a return will be of serious injury to the party. It says and says truly:

The Republican party in its platforms and by the promises of the campaign can take no backward step without experiencing a rebuke at the polls. Let us avoid the possibility of a set back, and add to our number by making political capital which shall promote the welfare of the whole people in preference to that bogus article which only benefits the few at the expense of the many.

The best political capital, according to the Journal, is clearly-cut principles, and that the manufacture of political capital, at the expense of the good of the greatest number, is a great wrong.

"The next Presidential election will, in all probability, be largely influenced by the fifteen hundred thousand young men who will then cast their first Presidential vote. Their party affiliations will depend very largely upon the claim which the two parties will put forth for their suffrage, and the claim that is based upon an honest civil service will prove the strongest."

It would not seem possible that any argument was needed at this late date to show that a yielding to the demand for spoils does infinitely more harm to a party and to an administration, than the most strenuous carrying out of reform principles could do, yet the Journal evidently thinks such is the case, for it argues to that effect to the extent of a column, and it concludes that:

"The political capital that is needed is that which is engendered by the respect that the citizen feels for an Administration which refuses to remove competent men from minor offices because of their political faith."

The Journal's editorials of late have showed a good deal of vigor and frankness, and it will be in danger of leading instead of following its party if it continues. Such words are needed however, and it is fortunate that the leading Republican paper in Boston should rise above partisan zeal so effectively. The young voters will be needed at the next Presidential election, and the Republican party should be the one to attract them. It used to do this, and would continue to do so, if it were true to its principles. But the making of political trades with Mahoney, the counsels of such men as Dudley and Quay, and the surrender of the federal offices to the "horn-blowers," is not the way to make political capital that will prove a paying investment.

THE TAX ON IRON.

Hon. Peleg McFarlin, treasurer of the Ellis Foundry Company, South Carver, and a firm believer in protection, is not afraid to answer the queries of the United Question clubs, and in a letter which appeared in the Boston Herald, he shows that the manufacturers of New England are awaking to the necessity of caring for themselves. He says that "no exigency exists which can justify a duty of $6.72 on a ton of pig iron." "Protection," he says, "as a salutary regulation, should be very carefully gauged. Carried too far, it becomes locally prohibitory, and thus destroys that which it was calculated to conserve. When the tariff on any item becomes unreasonably high or unduly low, the true friend of protection will call for a modification."

"So far as New England is concerned, this duty ($6.72 a ton) is sufficiently excessive to subvert the very foundations of protection. A glance at the most reliable statistics will show that the iron trade of New England has steadily declined during the last decade in a ratio that is alarming. Unless our New England congressmen stand together as one man, and demand and secure a sharp reduction in the duty on iron, a once flourishing industry which rightfully belongs to us, which was the pride and glory of New England, and which, properly fostered, will afford support to 70,000 people, will be swept away and no appreciable compensating benefits will accrue to any other section."

"It is sometimes but a step from the condition which threatens disaster to that which insures success. Restore the former reasonable tariff rate of 25 per cent. ad valorem on iron, and while Pennsylvania will not sensibly suffer, New England will feel a stimulus in all her avenues of traffic. Scores of mills within her borders, now deserted and silent, will throng with workmen, and renew the hum of industry."

This is a similar stand to that taken by the Tremont Nail Company, by Senator Blair of New Hampshire, and by an increasing number of iron manufacturers, and intelligent Republicans generally. Whether the recommendation will be followed and New England's iron industries be again enabled to flourish is another thing. The Pennsylvania iron men have a powerful lobby at Washington, a delegation in Congress that is always solid for Pennsylvania, and that State only, and the most prominent political leader in the country, Senator Quay. The New England Congressmen would have to be a very strong and courageous body of men to undertake such a contest. The reform is bound to come in time, however, as it is of vital interest to a great number of States besides New England.

THE STATE CAMPAIGN.

The selection of September 25th as the date for the Republican State convention will be apt to infuse a little more life into the campaign, which has been very quiet of late.

Boston is the place selected and Ex-Governor Robinson will be asked to preside, which will give the convention a good impulse towards making the best use of its opportunities, and he will probably make a forcible and timely address.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge will be the chairman of the committee on resolutions and the members at large are Hon. John D. Long, Judge Putnam of Uxbridge, L. G. Spaulding of Northampton and John S. Brayton of Fall River. They will have an example to avoid in the resolutions recently passed by the Ohio Republicans.

The arrangement of a new basis for representation of the State at conventions was left in the hands of the Hon. Theodore C. Bates of Worcester, the Hon. Joseph O. Burdett of Hingham, Mr. J. Otis Wardwell of Haverhill, Judge Henry J. Wells of Cambridge, E. A. Buffinton of Leominster and the Hon. Myron P. Walker, and they will report at the next meeting of the State committee. A change in the basis of representation is made every four years, and the present one hinges upon the Harrison and Morton vote which was cast last year.

HIGH SERVICE.

The movement to locate a park on the summit of Waban Hill will probably not be carried out, owing to the lack of public spirit of the owner of the land. What will be done is probably to secure enough land for the water tower on the summit of the hill, which can be done, it is said, without going on to Mr. Sargent's land, and to place the tower there without any attempt at a park or a driveway. This is the best that can be done, as it is felt to be out of the question to go to Institution Hill against the wishes of the owners, and the elevation on the part of Waban Hill that can be secured by the city is all that could be desired. A park would be a nice thing, but it would be expensive, and the city fathers do not feel warranted in going to any great expense for more luxuries. High service is the great thing and it should not be delayed longer than is absolutely necessary. It will do more for Newton than any number of parks, and as nearly as every street in the city is a park in itself, extensive breathing places are not needed here, and will not be unless the character of the city is totally changed, which is not probable. Only hurry up, he high service and the people will be satisfied.

THERE has been a silly attempt made to prove that the overseers of the poor were doing something illegal in buying goods of Councilman Moody at Lower Falls, he being a member of the City Government. As a matter of fact the question was referred to the City Solicitor at the beginning of the present year, and he decided that there was no possible objection to buying supplies for the almshouse from Mr. Moody. Mr. Moody's store is convenient to the almshouse, he has never been charged with not furnishing honest goods at satisfactory prices, and we have it on the authority of the writer of the article in question that the city ought to patronize home merchants as well as printers. Besides, the almshouse supplies bought of Councilman Moody for 1888 only amounted to $213.59, which is certainly hardly worth much discussion. It is an excellent thing for the city to set a worthy example in patronizing home industries, and citizens in the vicinity of Lower Falls can not do better than to follow suit, as far as Councilman Moody and the other local stores are concerned.

The Waltham Free Press looks at the Indian policy our government has pursued with more or less faithfulness as "curious" and says:

"As nearly as we can make out from the complications in which the matter is continually involved, a treaty, morally having as much binding force and effect as though made with the strongest foreign power, has been made to quiet the Indians, and lands have been set off to them to all intents and purposes in perpetuity. In course of time a mob of marauders appears on the borders of the reservation and threatens to occupy the land. Our government, yielding to the behest of this mob, calls a council of the Indians and, while pretending to permit them to freely decide their lands, puts upon them so much pressure that they have no alternative. It is money or your life; yield willingly or by force of arms. And we call this dealing honestly with the Indian tribes and observing treaties solemnly made."

A SPECIAL meeting of both branches of the city council has been called for next Monday evening, to take action upon the vacancies that exist in the board.

A special election will be ordered for some date in September, far enough ahead to allow of the aldermanic city convention to be held, at which Councilman Hamblin will undoubtedly be nominated without opposition, and then an election to fill the vacancy thus caused can be ordered for the same date, thus avoiding any extra expense and trouble.

A man who has had experience in city affairs should be chosen for alderman, and Councilman Hamblin fills the bill so satisfactorily to the people of his ward, that no other candidate has been mentioned.

THE Drainage Commission muddle seems in a fair way to be settled, as the Council has confirmed Mr. Kingman and Judge French and Mr. Mills have withdrawn their names. Mr. Kingman is certainly very far from being an ideal selection, and he will have to prove his fitness for such an important place. Governor Ames has at last decided to recognize the wisdom of choosing a man from the district most interested, and has sent in the name of Tilly Haynes of Boston, who is a business man of the first rank and will do much more than Mr. Kingman to gain public confidence for the commission. The third member is yet to be chosen, and it is reported that the Governor is looking for some sanitary engineer of the first rank. He is now pursuing the policy that should have been followed in the first place.

THE American Economist thinks all these trusts and combinations, such as the sugar trust and the salt trust "will work for good and tend to promote the welfare of mankind." They evidently are working for the good of the trusts and possibly it is for the "welfare of mankind" to pay three cents a pound more for sugar, than would be required without the combination. The Economist probably reasons that too much sugar is hurtful for mankind, and besides it is only a little tax on each consumer which enables the trust to make fifty millions profit a year. A small fraction of that would help pay the expenses of the Economist for a year.

President Harrison will arrive in Boston, Wednesday, August 7th, and be given a cordial reception by the state officials, the military and the people. One of the plans for his entertainment is to take him on a carriage drive, Wednesday afternoon, to call on some distinguished citizen in Brookline or Cambridge. It would be much better to bring him to Newton, where we have citizens more distinguished than either of those towns, and more beautiful streets, residences and scenery. Perhaps it is not too late to have this part of the plan changed.

THE heavy rains of the week have done thousands of dollars damage to the streets, and washouts are reported in every direction. Considering that about two inches of water fell on Thursday and that this is only a little more than the daily average for the past week, the damage is not to be wondered at. It is certainly a phenomenal season, and has exploded all the old theories about the cause of the rainfall. The worst of it is that the clerk of the weather is unable to predict anything better.

THE Milford Journal would like to see every veteran's name on the pension roll, and the expenses of every Grand Army Post and every Soldiers Home paid by the general government, because the country is rich and there is plenty of money in the treasury. Corporal Tanner's efforts to favor the claim agent's, Senator Manderson's back pension of $4,000 and all such acts meet the Journal's full and hearty approval. Such is the soothing effect of a post office on a political organ.

To place a duty on Canadian car would be one of the severest blows that New England ever received, and it seems hardly possible that this administration ever contemplated such a step. The visit to New England of President Harrison and so many members of his cabinet ought to result in a better understanding of the needs of this section. The New York railroads should not be allowed to have everything their own way.

THE Philadelphia Press in speaking of the steady progress of Mr. Crapo's boom says:

"The expressions in his favor come from all parts of the State, and from that element in the party that desires to see Republicanism take an advanced standing in favor of reform and purity in politics."

An illustrated article will be found on another page giving a description of some of the many delightful summer resorts reached by the Boston & Maine road, which are of especial interest just at this time.

LORING—At Newton, July 29, Mary T., widow of George H. Loring, aged 85 years, 9 months.

It is pleasing to note the remarkable success of the American Polypathic Medical Institute, 2 East Brookline St. (corner Washington St.) Boston. The writer called at their elegantly furnished parlors a few days ago and was surprised to find such a throng of people, who had come from far and near, by the advice of former patients, and also to find themselves of their most generous offer to give one month's treatment free. This institution is the largest of the kind in New England, employs the largest number of eminent physicians and is making hundreds of remarkable cures. If you have a chronic disease don't fail to visit them.

THE IMPROVED SYSTEM OF PROPELLING STREET CARS.

A new system for developing and utilizing steam for power, without smoke, clinders, noise or escape of steam, at much less cost than by any other known method for obtaining and maintaining power. There is no failure nor uncertainty in its operation, and it is absolutely safe. For street cars and other service requiring portable power, it has no equal. Secured by U. S. letters patent. A prominent mechanical engineer says that the possibilities of this invention have not been equalled by any recent invention—except possibly the Bell Telephone and Sawyer-Mann for electric lighting. The Steam Storage Power Company has been organized for the development and introduction of this system throughout the New England States—which territory is owned exclusively by it—with a capital of $200,000—par value shares, $10—and is having a Power Car built by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which will be exhibited in Boston and vicinity in September. The first issue of certificates will be from the office of the company, 34 Broad Street, after August 1. Subscriptions may be made for the stock at par—payable 25 per cent. cash, 25 per cent. 30 days, 50 per cent. 60 days—to an amount not exceeding $25,000.

EDWIN S. THAYER, Treasurer.

Eupespy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupespy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50 c. and $1.00 per bottle by Arthur Hudson, druggist.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

—Mr. Henry F. Ross arrived home yesterday. He sailed from Queenstown to Sandy Hook, making the trip in 5 days, 23 hours, 10 minutes, the second fastest time on record. Mr. Ross had an enjoyable tour abroad and returns in excellent health and spirits.

—Reports are to be made to the County Commissioners of Worcester County concerning the safety of the dams in that county. It might be well for the citizens of Newtonville to call the attention of one to the dam at Bulloughs Pond. A stitch in time saves nine.

—The maps locating the voting places are out and Newtonville rejoices in two precincts. The dividing line runs through Washington, Lowell, Walnut and Water streets and voters who live just over this boundary must go to Nonantum in order to deposit their ballots. The citizens who reside just over the line are not pleased and do not take kindly to the change. It seems to separate them from their neighbors and friends, besides necessitating a good deal of long distance exercise.

—Mrs. Sylvia Mayo Kimball, the venerable mother of ex-Mayor Kimball and beloved wife of James M. Kimball, died at her home in Westboro' last Friday. The deceased was 73 years of age. She was a lady of refinement and culture, whose sympathetic nature ever responded to the calls of the poor and suffering. She was sincerely loved by her neighbors and friends who esteemed her for many beautiful traits of character. The funeral took place from her late residence in Westboro' Monday afternoon.

—A very serious accident was narrowly averted at the Hillside street crossing, Friday afternoon. Just after the 3.15 passenger train for Boston had stopped at the station the gates were hoisted and the car of the poor and suffering. She was sincerely loved by her neighbors and friends who esteemed her for many beautiful traits of character. The funeral took place from her late residence in Westboro' Monday afternoon.

—Next year will probably be an interesting one, certainly so far as the base ball season is concerned in this particular locality, for the equipment of a first-class nine is on the tapis and will undoubtedly be completed within a few days. A large number of gentlemen interested in the national game have formed an association and will later fit up a club room, probably on the corner of Court and Walnut streets. An effort will be made to secure grounds, wholly or partially enclosed, and a small admission fee will be charged. Games will be arranged with the best college and semi-professional nines, and the local club will of necessity be a strong combination of ball tossers. With a series of interesting contests with a suitable number of the people here, and, in fact, arouse them to such an extent that they will go to see the games, gladly parting with their tickets with a sense of value received. It is a suitable undertaking in this city, but with good management the scheme may prove successful.

—Messrs. Bailey and Hargden have been awarded the contract to build the new cottage hospital at Quincy. The building will be similar in design to the cottage hospital in this city.

—Annie Belle Swinamer and Horace P. Lewis were married in Lynn, Monday. They were both residents of this city and the groom is an employee of C. F. Eddy & Co.

—During the month of August the West Newton Baptist pulpit will be supplied by Rev. Mr. Bell of Providence, R. I. Rev. Mr. Gregory of Baltimore, Md., and the two last Sundays by Prot. English of the Newton Institution.

—Mrs. McLane of Providence was a guest at Mr. S. A. Langley's, upon the occasion of his surprise party, Wednesday evening. She presided gracefully at the luncheon.

—Joseph L. Stone's dog was run over by an express train Monday afternoon and died from the effects of injuries received. While in his death agony, Officer Libby pulled the canine from under the cars and revived a severe laceration in his right hand.

—"American Leads at Whist" is the title of a little book containing a new system of leads invented by N. B. Trist of New Orleans. It forms a handy manual for use in a "signal game," and the directions for the new leads are very clear. The system has been adopted by some of the leading whist clubs. The Whist Card Company of West Newton publish the book; price 10 cents.

—City Auditor Benjamin F. Otis has arrived from South Bristol, Me., where he has been enjoying a two weeks' rest from official cares. It is a delightful and restful place and Mr. Otis returns to his labors refreshed and invigorated. He had some excellent fishing and boating and retired Sunday about 8.30 in the evening sleeping soundly for about eight or nine hours.

—Messrs. Fuller & French have made two important real estate transactions in this ward during the past week. The Godfrey estate on Otis street, comprising about six acres of land, lying between Otis and Highland streets, has been sold to Henry N. Baker of Boston. Mr. Baker and a friend of his have purchased the estate with the intention of putting it up for sale. The street will be built between this estate and that of Rev. Mr. Lindsay, running from Otis street to Highland street, a distance of 70 feet, and will open up some of the choicest building lots in the city. The Tucker estate, comprising house, stable, and about 5.400 feet of land on Cherry street, has been sold to Mr. C. F. Eddy on private terms. Mr. Eddy will at once improve this estate.

—A visitor from the city of Somerville, a former member of the city council in that place, expressed his surprise at the poorly arranged collection in this city. He cannot blame him for this expression of honest criticism, for the Garden City, boasting of its well kept roads, its excellent schools, its well equipped fire department and its many other advantages, is a hind city of about the same number of inhabitants. The central police station is merely a look-up and a poor one at that, and the office of the city engineer is very unsatisfactory. Newton needs a suitable building for a police station and the necessity becomes more apparent with the constant growth of the city. In a short time the patrol force of the city must be increased at least one-third, in order to bring about a continual police protection. This can only be accomplished by an additional number of men. A suitable building necessary for the men on the first morning relief, usually called out at 1 a.m., to sleep in the station, which even now is hardly large enough to accommodate the judges and prisoners. A suitable building, therefore needed and must be provided for in the near future.

—Mr. Samuel A. Langley, officer of the day in Charles Ward Post 62, G. A. R., has recently moved into a new house on Margin street, and his comrades of the post are determined to give him a surprise. Shortly after 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, one of his comrades called at Mr. Langley's house and induced him to take a pleasant ride to the city. In the meantime a company of 30 of his comrades, armed with their rifles, had assembled at his house, and upon Mr. Langley's return he was greeted by many friends. He was completely surprised, and was more than astonished to find himself surrounded by a large number of his friends. He was then stepped forward and in behalf of the comrades of the post, presented him with $100 in gold, expressing the good wishes of his friends, and his long continued happiness and prosperity. Mr. Langley responded appropriately, and remarks followed by Senior Vice-Commander Fiske, Junior Vice-Commander, Adjutant, Quartermaster, Chaplain, and Past Commanders Downs and Vassal. Capt. S. E. Howard, Mr. Shepard and Prof. Bragdon of Lasell Seminary, Commanders Hargden, and others. The adjutant, Adjutant Gott and Comrade Bradshaw read poems, and war songs were rendered by the veterans. The company then enjoyed a very pleasant social features and partook of refreshments. Mr. Langley was also the recipient of a beautiful bouquet, the gift of Mrs. Benjamin Hopkins.

—Rev. Dr. Faunce of Washington, D. C., who has been called to West Newton Baptist church, is in the city. He is frankness, and judging from a passage from his farewell sermon in Washington, he is the kind of pastor which every church ought to have. It is a good doctrine and in the line which a pastor who does his duty must follow, and for doing which he gains the respect of his people. In his farewell to his people on Sunday he said: "When I came among you, little more than eight years since, to preach the gospel of this grace of God, it was with the intention of a limited pastorate, for it has always been my belief that a minister could be more free and frank and honest if he should put aside all thought of making in a church a permanent home for himself; that by such a limitation of his efforts to be a braver man in private repute and public utterance; that he could afford, if need be, to make an occasional enemy by Christian plainness. I can claim," he continued, "not to my own praise, but to that of God's grace, that he has enabled me to be faithful to my honest convictions; that never for any man, high or low, in or out of the church, if he be honest, the slightest suppression of the truth; that when any of you have needed to be told in private that you were getting astray in any error or wandering into any sin, I have not failed, but I have been bold to tell you of the mistake and the wrong. It may be that this is not the way to gain a cheap popularity, but it is the way to discharge a solemn responsibility. I have been bold to say that cheap popularity can be gained by favoring looseness of doctrine and of living."

—Dr. Elisha F. Thayer, for many years a prominent veterinary surgeon, died at his residence on Watertown street, Monday evening. The deceased had been in failing health for some time. About ten years ago he had a stroke of paralysis and he had never fully recovered from the effects of the shock. Dr. Thayer was born in Dedham and was 73 years of age. Many years ago he kept the livery stable in West Newton, now owned by Mr. Stephen F. Cate. He was always attached to animals and was a lover of horses. When he disposed of his livery stable, he commenced his professional studies and was the pupil of Dr. Wood. He studied in Glasgow and London and became a special pupil of Prof. Gange, one of the most prominent veterinary surgeons in Europe. Returning to this country, he commenced to practice and was very successful, soon acquiring a prominent place in his profession. It was his aim to elevate the profession in this country and he was one of the few men who labored zealously to secure proper schools and colleges where young men could receive necessary instruction, and acquire the knowledge for successfully entering the field as veterinary surgeons, the colleges at that time making no special provision for such students. Through his efforts assisted by a few others, such schools were established, but the graduates, strange to say, quite looked down upon Dr. Thayer and his associates because they had never received a diploma. His aim in his profession needed no such recognition, however, his reputation having been firmly established. He served on the Massachusetts cattle commission over 25 years. Among his colleagues during this time were Prof. Levi Stockbridge of Amherst, Horace W. Jordan of Brighton, ex-Mayor Ritchie of Roxbury and Mr. Sabin of Williamstown. He was for several years a member of the U. S. Treasury Cattle Commission and had as associates Prof. James Law of Cornell University, and J. H. Saunders of Chicago Breeder's Gazette, to his persistent and untiring effort, in spite of the opposition of the medical profession and prominent agriculturists of the state, Massachusetts today can truthfully say that there has not been for more than 20 years an outbreak of contagious pleuro pneumonia, and that such disease is not now present in the state. All the cattle afflicted with pleuro pneumonia were killed and the disease exterminated in that way. Dr. Thayer's residence in Newton covered a period of half a century, and few men have won greater respect and esteem from their fellow-citizens. He was a man of firm convictions, conscientious and honorable in all his dealings. He cared little for the glamor of social life, but loved his home. A kind father, a loving husband and a devoted friend, he will be sincerely mourned and his memory will be cherished by those who knew him best. A widow, a son and one daughter survive him. His son, Dr. Fred L. Thayer, is a very successful physician and his daughter was married to Mr. W. L. Dubear, a respected resident of this city. The funeral took place from his late residence, 100 West Newton street, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance, including many of his professional associates, among whom were Dr. J. S. Saunders, Dr. Coburn, Dr. Peters and Dr. Very. The Rev. E. H. H. Stickney of the Church of the Messiah, officiated, and appropriate selections were rendered by the Ruggles Street quartet. The floral tributes were very beautiful, and included a wreath and cross from the family, a cross from the American Veterinary College, New York, a wreath of immortelles from Prof. A. Lantard, dean of the American Veterinary College, and a pillow from the Massachusetts Veterinary Association. The remains were interred in the Newton cemetery. The pallbearers were Dr. O. H. Flagg, Dr. J. F. Winchester of Lawrence and Dr. Madison Bunker of Newton.

—The town of Weston has awarded the contract to build its part of the South avenue bridge connecting with the Newton bridge and crossing the Charles river above Riverside, to Mr. J. H. Leavitt of Boston. Work will be commenced at once.

—Prof. C. C. Bragdon has an article in this week's Zion's Herald, in which he discusses the question "Is Education at large good for Girls?" He thinks that girls should be trained with some reference to their probable future and especially for "home-making." This would be practical education in its best sense.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1.50. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

FOR SALE.

On OTIS STREET, West Newton,
(adjoining the estate of Wm. F. Lawrence).

The Estate formerly owned and occupied by the late Rev. Charles Barnard.

It comprises about eighty thousand feet of land, superbly situated on an elevation, commanding an extensive and charming prospect to the south and west. The position which this estate occupies in the landscape of its picturesque and attractive surroundings is one that renders it peculiarly desirable, as it lays upon the crown of the hill an almost level surface. The house was built in 1864 and contains 14 rooms, supplied with city water, gas, and steam furnace, and is a well appointed dwelling for a comfortable home.

Beautiful Shade and Fruit Trees,
Fine smooth level lawn, grapes in abundance, small fruits, with an attractive flower garden, makes this a very choice property. There is a SMALL BARN on the place of suitable size to keep one or two horses and a cow, with carriage room in proportion.

A LITERARY VENTURE.

The Experiences of a Society Woman as a Novelist.

BY ALBERT FLEMING.

Mrs. Lovell always maintained that the terrible business of her novel and the dire pains and penalties that resulted from it were entirely due to the Bishop of Crowborough, and to the bishop alone. She admitted she was encouraged by Anthony Troloope and other literary swells, who all wrote articles proving convincingly that literature was the easiest and most lucrative trade in the world if you only hit the right vein, but it was the bishop who first started her on that untoward literary venture. Every time she told the story (and during the subsequent 30 years of her life she certainly told it a hundred times) she deepened the turpitude of the bishop and the bloodthirsty character of his conduct until her husband, the Rev. Aubrey Lovell (a hilarious country rector, with a tremendous voice), would shout out in his general way: "Now, Nellie, my love, the bishop had really very little to do with it, and behaved very nicely, I think, it was all your ridiculous vanity and greed."

It is necessary to clear the ground by telling you something of the bishop and Mrs. Lovell. The Bishop of Crowborough was the oldest prelate on the bench. He was appointed to the see in the days when a scholarly edition of Juvenal or Euripides was a most direct road to a mitre.

His appointment dated so far back in the past that no one living exactly knew what particular service to scholarship obtained for Dr. Octavius Mackereth the see of Crowborough. He had held it for 45 years, and for the greater portion of that period the bishop had been engaged on a gigantic book, a profound but little-read history of the Monks of the Thebaid, a volume appearing at intervals of about six years.

As no one ever bought the book, far less read it, the publication cost the learned author a small fortune. The bishop was not only a celibate but a confirmed woman-hater, or perhaps one might say a woman-ignorance—he seemed to realize the sex with an effort.

What one may call the woman motif occurred regularly once in the life of each of his Thebaid monks, but they were all mere dream women, emissaries of Satan sent in vision to tempt that particular monk back to the pomps and vanities of the world. This, the bishop perceived, was evidently the chief function of woman. Meanwhile, the bishop being permanently engaged in the Libyan Desert, the diocese fell into a lamentable state of decay; dissent flourished and waxed fat, yea, even under the shadow of the cathedral itself. Twice a year the bishop emerged from historical research, and gave a reception at the palace, but of course, as he had no wife, no ladies came. The bishop never had the least idea how many of his clergy would come, and made random preparations of a helpless kind, the fare provided being of the meagre description. Some stringy sandwiches, some weak negus and parboiled tea formed the Episcopal menu. The High Church clergy struggled fiercely for the negus, and the Low Church lapped up the weak tea. Nobody under the rank of a prebend had the least chance of securing a spoon to himself. The bishop was practically a stranger to four-fifths of his clergy.

At the beginning of these lamentable receptions he tried to identify his guests and say something appropriate to each; but he soon gave that task up, and adopted a stereotyped kindly smile to accompany each handshake. This was a far safer plan, as the poor bishop had a dreadful habit of cheerfully inquiring after newly buried wives; and to this day they tell the story of his asking old Canon Jenkins after his wife when all the diocese was ringing with the news of her elopement with his curate.

So much for the bishop, now for Mrs. Lovell. She was a woman of about 40; the ordinary healthy type of English matron, quite ignorant of art and literature, but entirely satisfied with herself, her children and husband. She was ambitious in a kindly way, and tried to push her husband up in the world; but this pushing business was a herculean task, for her excellent husband was quite without any upward tendencies, being of the steady, slow, easygoing order, that quietly holds on and always ends in being an arch-deacon. As regards herself, Mrs. Lovell used to say:

"I don't pretend to be clever or learned but I really do consider I write a very good letter."

She said this so often, and with such an air of conviction, that all her friends grew to think so too. Now there was a grain of truth in this claim. She wrote a thoroughly reckless, rattling, feminine letter; she could not have described a sunset or a landscape to save her life, but she gave her a bit of village gossip, and she would dress and touch it up till it became a very lifelike and amusing sketch; then she touched off all her friends' peculiarities with such a good-natured and lively pen that every one said when they heard a letter of hers read aloud: "What a very amusing person that Mrs. Lovell must be!"

It happened just about now that, by an odd chance, the bishop's brother, who was an old literary bachelor living in "the Albany," went on a visit of three days to the palace at Crowborough. The brothers became dimly conscious of each other's existence about once in five years, then the bishop asked the Albany bachelor to visit Crowborough, and the latter went, always limiting his stay to exactly three days. He used to say at the Albany: "The first day is chastened affection, the second indifference and weariness, the third hatred and despair; if I staid a fourth I should murder the bishop or die myself."

During his visit he pumped into the bishop all the gossip of the clubs and all the literary news, though of course neither the one nor the other mixed at all well with the monks of the Thebaid; but the Albany brother said it was his duty to post the bishop up to date. It was just at this time that the "Life of George Eliot" appeared.

The bishop had the very vaguest of notions as to George Eliot and her achievements, but he knew that she was a woman though it puzzled him beyond measure why a woman should assume a man's name.

That a woman should write books was an astonishing fact; that any one should read them was another; and the most astonishing fact of all was that any publisher should pay her £7000 as his brother assured him had been paid for one of her books. The bishop's experience of publishers and the public was so altogether different.

The week after this many brotherly bishops, by the most unusual combination of circumstances, had to go to lunch at Mr. Lovell's to meet another bishop, who was a stirring, enthusiastic creature of quite modern creation and very modern ideas.

He hated, too, the very thought of the lunch, but he had to go. How to provide for light conversation for two hours the bishop did not know; so as he drove along he tried to recall a few topics that might be appropriate and interesting, and he endeavored to recollect and make use of the London gossip his brother had told him, but the only thing he could recall was a few details about George Eliot, and chiefly that she actually had £7000 for writing one book.

He launched this fact at Mrs. Lovell's head, he dilated upon it, he returned to it again and again. It had astonished the bishop, and it astonished Mrs. Lovell.

When the bishop had left, Mrs. Lovell sat and thought. Seven thousand pounds for one book! Why, the bishop only got £4000 for being a bishop, and it was nearly 18 times as much as her husband's stipend. Mrs. Lovell slept upon the idea, and the next day it had grown and developed. She had a ready pen—what if she wrote a book and got £7000 for it? She looked the idea in her matrimonial bosom. Her excellent husband had very old-fashioned notions about women and their vocations. Once she put out a feeling, and challenged his admiration for George Eliot. The rector blinked at her with his big, blue eyes.

"What's that, my love?" he said. "Thank Heaven I haven't married one of your scribbling women; there's only one thing worse, and that's the political woman."

"But, my dear Aubrey, the scope and field of woman are enlarging so rapidly."

"Now, my dear," answered the rector, in his hilarious trumpet-toned voice, "don't talk nonsense. My mother was the best of women, and her scope and field were the looking after her family and feeding her poultry."

But when once an idea took root in Mrs. Lovell's mind it was not easily eradicated, and before a week was over she had determined to go in for literature. She had a widowed sister who lived at Hunstanton, and just then came an invitation to spend a month with her. Mrs. Lovell was of too prosaic a turn of mind to look for signs and wonders, but this she accepted as a signal indication from on high that she was to write a book, for a visit to her sister would give her just the quiet time she wished to get her ideas in order.

Her sister was a very pious High Churchwoman, entirely given up to philanthropy and church work, quite content to let Mrs. Lovell go her own way if she would only consent to eat fish on Friday and go to duty service. Mrs. Lovell went to Hunstanton with a letter in a literary ferment. She had to tell her sister of her plans, but all the widow said was:

"Well, Ellen, of course you'll see that the tone of your books is religious and healthy."

"Of course I shall see to that. I intend to give every morning to my novel!" continued Mrs. Lovell, loftily; "and I must beg of you to see that I am undisturbed."

Mrs. Lovell had secured a little hand-book to young authors, and had mastered the elementary details of suitable paper, writing on one side only, and so on. She had also gone so far as to concoct in her head an outline of a plot—it was a mere skeleton of a plot—but she thought to herself that she would develop it as she went on.

The next morning she arranged her dressing table suitable for writing. She opened her desk, took out the lined foolscap paper, and set to work. She said to herself, "My hero shall be 35, and he shall marry a merry girl of 20; after marriage he shall look for his cousin of 25, shall make love to her, and all but bring about a catastrophe. I shall introduce a designing widow and two or three subordinate characters to fill up." She plunged at once into chapter one, but found her ideas did not come as quickly as she had hoped; it was nothing like as easy as writing a letter. She wrote for an hour, read it all over and tore it up in despair. Then she tried again, and found herself at a dead pause for something to say. She sat with her head on her hand, racking her brains for nothing came; then, suddenly, she dropped her pen and clapped her hands.

"Goodness me!" she cried, "why, Aunt Jane when she gave us drawing lessons used to say, 'Remember, my dears, always draw from nature, go straight to life.' I will; why invent?"

And she did. She wanted a clergyman, and down she pounced on the Bishop of Crowborough. She lifted him bodily into her book. She changed him into a dean, but all his little peculiarities she retained and gave them a touch or two more. Her pen flew and the pages quickly filled; she read over the description of his dean and his sayings and doings, and she leaned back and laughed at the intense vitality of the thing. Then there was a Mrs. Marchmont in the next parish; she would exactly do for the designing widow. Mrs. Lovell hated her with consuming hatred. Mrs. Marchmont dressed better than she did, had taken precedence of her on several occasions, and had patronized her openly before all the county; besides, she had many weak points, there were some little questionable matters in her career; scandal had not spared her, and that certainly Mrs. Lovell would not. Mrs. Marchmont appeared as Lady Holloway, but in all other respects it was a photograph from life.

In her parish there were two excellent old maids, the best of creatures—a little rigid, very quaint in dress, with pretty little affectations, and one with a remote longing for gentlemen's attentions. Mrs. Lovell had put them into many a letter, and they both went bodily into her book. Having adopted this method, to her delight and surprise Mrs. Lovell found all went merry as a wedding bell; after all, once master of the method, and it was just as easy to write a novel as to write a letter, and letter writing had always been her strong point. For some weeks she worked hard at the book; it amused and interested her. She had a little bit of money, something under £100, put by in consols, and that she intended to devote to the expenses of publishing the book. She called it a "Midsummer Madness."

We may pass over the record of how she got a publisher, and the labor and difficulty she had with proofs and revisions. The greatest difficulty of all was to keep the rector in the dark; luckily he was the most unsuspicious of men. He saw masses of papers coming by post, and set it down in his mind as new music. He observed that his dear Nellie was always writing; but he merely said, "Really, my wife's correspondence is enormous, and I don't wonder at it for she writes an excellent letter."

Our story stops some six months later on. Every morning she now expected an advance copy from the publishers. She always came down before breakfast and swooped down on the letters and parcels, and at last this 10th day of June brought the long desired copy. There it was, in the three orthodox volumes, 31s. 6d. in price, dainty in binding, nice big margins, and good print and paper. She opened the title page and read with a quivering heart, "A Midsummer Madness. A Novel. By Mrs. Aubrey Lovell." Then she dipped here and there into her favorite bits—that droll scene where the two old maids encountered the designing widow; really it was humorous and had shot her in it. Mrs. Lovell laughed aloud. Then the love scene in the garden, and the despair and madness of the hero; then that pathetic deathbed scene, how true and real it seemed, really Mrs. Lovell felt, if George Eliot walked into the room now, she would have claimed her as a sister artist.

Meanwhile the rector came noisily down stairs, and entered the room with a bang. "Hullo, my love, anybody's birthday? I see a parcel of new books that look like presents."

"No," replied Mrs. Lovell, "only the last new novel," then blushing furiously, "It looks rather nice."

To his wife's disgust the rector did not exhibit the least curiosity about the last new novel. Ah, she thought, if he only knew, wouldn't he be proud of his wife? But he actually ignored the three pretty blue volumes, and stretched out his hand for the Guardian. Then Mrs. Lovell brought matters to a head by saying: "Tell me what you think of the new novel."

Thereupon the rector drove his wife to the point of distraction by his exceeding slowness; first of all he couldn't find his glasses, then began a long history as to a letter in the Guardian about Queen Anne's bounty, then wasted another five minutes in polishing up his glasses; ultimately he took up Vol. I. and read in his sonorous voice, "A Midsummer Madness. By Mrs. Aubrey Lovell."

"Goodness gracious me, Nellie! Why, it's by a namesake of yours; they'll be putting it down to you."

"It is me," said Mrs. Lovell, being too thrilled to think of grammar.

"You!" replied her husband, dropping the book with a bang, and no number of marks of admiration can convey the surprise he put into his voice; he took off his glasses and rubbed them again. Then she told him how the bishop had sown the seed in her aspiring bosom, and this was the full harvest.

"Well, my love, of course I knew you wrote a good letter, and had a ready pen; but a three-volume novel I did think beyond your powers."

She was well content when he took the whole three volumes into his study. She had expected he would have abused her for wasting her time and ordered her back to domestic duties, but he had been so surprised and taken aback that he had half blessed instead of entirely banning her. During the morning Mrs. Lovell was gratified by hearing hearty peals of laughter from her husband's study, and at lunch he said: "Really, my dear, your book is extremely good, but you've made frightfully free with our poor dear bishop. I only hope he won't come across it."

"Oh, I've disguised it all well," she answered; "I have only used a few of his peculiarities."

Mrs. Lovell subscribed to Romeike's Agency, and for the next few weeks she had a very jolly time; the press notices were fairly favorable—all the critics thought the plot exceedingly poor, but the bishop, the widow, and the two old maids were greatly praised. Evidently drawn from life, one or two critics said.

Then Mrs. Lovell had the joy of presenting her friends with copies of her book, and altogether her poor head was like to be turned with success. Her publishers were very well content, and said the book was making its mark. Her husband basked in the reflected glow of her fame, and began to be proud of his wife.

One day at breakfast Mrs. Lovell said: "This is an appreciative review of the book in the leading society paper; that makes the 17th flattering notice I have had."

Of course "the book" was her book, there being only one book in the world to her then. Her husband did not answer for a moment; he was absorbed in a paper; she knew by the way he stirred his tea as he read it that he was not pleased.

"My dear," he said, "I'm afraid you and your book have got me into a scrape. Here is the bishop writing; he seems exceedingly angry."

She took the letter and read it. The bishop evidently was exceedingly wrath. The letter was to the effect that Mrs. Lovell's book had been forwarded to him, and his attention drawn to the character of the dean; it was beyond all question that the character was intended to be a caricature of his own; the bad taste and want of courtesy shown. Toward the end of the letter the bishop gave himself rein, and wrote of it all as a gross breach of ecclesiastical etiquette; he then pointed out the necessity of an apology and the withdrawal of the book, and he even remotely hinted at proceedings being taken.

As she read the letter Mrs. Lovell's heart sank within her; her husband had the baseness to say he had warned her that she had taken a great liberty with the bishop.

"The rector found it very embarrassing, but he wrote and tried to smooth the bishop down. The next day at breakfast Mrs. Lovell received a copy of Special Notes. There was a marked paragraph to the effect that the new novel, 'A Midsummer Madness,' was likely to create some little sensation."

Some of the characters had been drawn from life with a too-marked fidelity, and it was said that the originals of the dean and Lady Holloway and those diverting old maids, the Misses Sloper, had determined to take steps against the brilliant treatise. Of course it was delightful to appear in Social Notes, and still more delightful to be called a brilliant author.

ess, but Mrs. Lovell's heart sank within her at those terrible words, "taking steps."

She had the very vaguest idea as to what "steps" might mean; for aught she knew they might refer to a chancery suit, premature, or proceedings at the Old Bailey; it might mean all or any of these frightful measures. All this took place at breakfast; she did not dare to tell her husband, but at lunch he had seen the Social Notes and read it for himself. It took a good deal to rouse the rector, but undoubtedly he was roused now. He said dreadful things to his wife, Lunch was a most uncomfortable meal. Mrs. Lovell sank as low as a woman could sink; she ended by settling in her heart that she would probably be torn from her home and flung into prison. She anatomized the unlucky Continued on page 7.

No Other

As good. This is the statement of Professor Smith, analytical chemist: I have analyzed all of the popular blood purifiers and medicines now sold. Many of them I found to be worthless, some dangerous to use. Sulphur Bitters contains nothing poisonous, and I think it is the best blood purifier made.

All persons having a Cough, or any Pulmonary disease may be relieved by Dr. James M. Solomon, Jr.'s Cough Cure. 50 cents per bottle at all Druggists.

"Pearl-top" lamp-chimneys do not break in use; they are made of tough glass by Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh. Your dealer probably has them; if not he will thank you to make him acquainted with them.

The makers will send you a primer on glass, tough glass, lead glass, for lamp-chimneys. Lead glass is tough.

Chimneys are mostly made of brittle lime glass, partly because it is cheap, and partly because it is brittle. Makers are apt to think the sooner things wear out or break the better for business. It may be for business; but not, we suspect, for their business.

Macbeth & Co. pay a dealer to give new chimneys for any that break in use.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known.

This Great German Sederline is the cheapest and best. 125 doses of SULPHUR BITTERS for $1.00, less than one cent a dose. It will cure the worst cases of skin disease, from eczema to the face, to the scalp, to that awful disease Scrofula. SULPHUR BITTERS is the best and surest cure in all cases—such as skin eruptions, Your Kidney and Bladder troubles, and all other diseases. Do not delay, get it now.

Don't wait! Try a Bottle To-day!

Are you low-spirited and weak, or suffering from the excesses of the stomach? If so, SULPHUR BITTERS will cure you.

E. D. Eaton, president of Beloit College, Wisconsin; Aug. 18, Rev. E. A. Keep of Merrimack, N. H.; Aug. 25, Rev. N. H. Harriman, Evangelist, of Newton Highlands.

—Rev. E. D. Eaton, President of Beloit College, who will occupy the pulpit at the Congregational church, Aug. 11, is a brother of Dr. S. L. Eaton of the Highlands and will be his guest while here. He has just been successful in raising the sum of two hundred thousand dollars for the benefit of the college, one half of the sum having been given by one person, providing an equal amount should be subscribed, which he was able to accomplish in six weeks' time.

—By vote of the Episcopal society, they will proceed at once to enlarge their chapel, by an extension of the chancel six feet in the rear, also an addition on the Lake avenue side, 14x20, for a choir and robing room in place of the room now used for that purpose, which will be joined to the audience room, by the removal of the folding doors and partition, thus giving a seating capacity of two hundred. Pews will be put in, instead of the settees now in use, and the building painted and renovated inside and out to be completed Sept. 1. This society are having good courage after losing several prominent members who joined the new society at the Centre, and increasing their rector's compensation several hundred dollars, now propose to expend twelve hundred dollars for alterations and improvements.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Mr. W. C. Easterbrook is at Nantucket.

—Mr. and Mrs. Josiah B. Newell are at Gloucester, Mass.

—Miss Linda Nickelson is at Hardwick, Mass., for a few weeks.

—The recent heavy rains have badly washed the streets in places.

—Miss Mary Stuntz is with a camping party in the White Mountains.

—Mrs. James Nickelson and daughter Flossie are at North Falmouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Goff from Colorado are stopping with Mr. George Easterbrook.

—E. L. Crandall & Co. are putting in a new water wheel in their paper mill on Boylston street.

—Mrs. N. S. Freeman and Miss Nannie Freeman from Fremont, Neb., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Amos L. Hale.

—Mr. C. E. Hussey is acting as assistant manager of one of the Raynond excursion parties to the White Mountains.

—The city is extending a water main through the new street that leads off of Eliot street, through land formerly owned by Mr. C. H. Hale.

—Mr. C. H. Brown, of the Pettee Machine Works, has returned from a vacation, and has resumed his accustomed place in the office of the company.

—On Monday, a horse belonging to Mr. Giles Dyson became frightened and ran on Mechanic street. He was finally stopped and no damage done with the exception of some scratches on the harness.

—By the courtesy of Mr. Thomas Coughlan, engineer at the pumping house, Newton Water Works, we learn that last Saturday from 5 a. m. to 5 p. m. the water gauge showed the fall of rain to be 2.55-100 inches, and Monday night from about 11 o'clock to Monday morning the fall was 47-100 of an inch.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Mr. Fred Curtis is convalescing.

—The Hosley Mills are running on full time.

—Mr. B. B. Vassall is spending a few days' vacation here.

—Mr. C. C. Thomas has had his Boston wagon remodeled and newly painted.

—Dr. Baker is expected home from his European trip the last of this month.

—A number of people from this village visited the Weirs and Lake Winnepesaukee last week.

—The lumber for the Methodist church has arrived but nothing can be done until it is settled weather.

—Mr. Thomas Hayden has severed his connection with R. S. Bullard. Expressman Rogers will take his place.

—St. Mary's Church—Feast of the Transfiguration, August 6; morning service and Holy Communion, 9 a. m. Evening prayer, 5.30.

—Mr. E. E. Moody and F. W. Freeman are to start Saturday for a week's enjoyment on the coast. They will camp out there.

—The new double gates are now in working order and the railroad company can feel safer than when the other gates were in use.

—Dr. James Solomon's Advertising Co. will appear here Monday evening, Aug. 5. A free open air concert and variety entertainment is announced.

—Mr. W. P. Holden was presented by his friends this week with a handsome gold handled umbrella, suitably inscribed. It was a complete surprise to Mr. Holden.

—There are eight patients at the Cottage Hospital and all are afflicted with either typhoid fever or malaria. This hospital has had good success in treating the former disease.

—Numerous complaints are heard on all sides in regard to the electric light near Washington Street Hill not being in running order. A light is needed here as the road is very defective.

—Mrs. Murphy, wife of William Murphy, employed at the Granite fire alarm Works at Newton Highlands, enjoyed a day's outing on the water last Wednesday. A tug was chartered by that company, and all employed in the factory accepted the invitation.

—Mrs. Rebecca P. Crane, an old communicant of St. Mary's, died at her daughter's residence in New Haven, July 27, aged 84 years, 11 months and 15 days. The funeral took place at St. Mary's on Saturday afternoon, the rector officiating. The burial was at the family tomb in the church yard.

—Alton Reed, a former resident, and an employee of the Fitchburg railroad, died in Charlestown, Tuesday. The deceased was 27 years of age. The remains were brought to this city and the interment was made at St. Mary's cemetery this afternoon.

—Franklin W. Freeman of Lower Falls recently graduated at the medical department of the University of Vermont with the degree of M. D., after a two years' course of study there. Mr. Freeman will pursue his studies still further at the ensuing year at Harvard college. He graduated some years ago at the Massachusetts school of Pharmacy and his ten years' experience as a druggist will give him a great advantage in his profession.

NONANTUM.

—Harry Tarloff has received a visit from his parents this week.

—Miss Lilly Mayell has gone to Ashland, N. H., for a two week's vacation.

—Mr. S. W. Fletcher, who has been sick for two weeks past, is reported improving.

—Mr. J. L. Ballentyne, who is at Juniper Point for the season, made a flying visit home on Tuesday.

—Mrs. Sarah Webb formerly of this village, but recently residing in Lawrence, Mass., died at that place last week.

—Mrs. J. E. Butler has been very sick with malaria the past week. Several others are suffering with the same complaint.

—Mr. Charles Hayward, who recently had his hand severely injured in the "Etna mills," states that his hand is improving slowly, but is very painful; at first it was feared that he would lose several fingers, but we are glad to say that amputation was not necessary.

—On Wednesday afternoon Rev. W. A. Lamb visited the bonds of wedlock at the North church, Mr. Thomas Weldon and Miss Alice Kauback, both of this village. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of persons. Mr. James Galtway acted as usher, Mr. Marshall Jones of Charlestown was groomsmen and Miss Sophia Spidel, bridesmaid. The bride wore a white satin dress with court train and orange blossoms. This was the first marriage that was ever solemnized in this church since it was rebuilt; two weddings occurred in the chapel which was burnt, and solemnized by Rev. Mr. Lowery. A reception was held at the house of Mrs. Cairns on Watertown street, Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Tried and True
Friends are scarce, but if you are suffering with that horrible disease scrofula, you will find Sulphur Bitters will cure you as it did me after suffering eight years, and paying out hundreds of dollars to doctors and druggists.—Jeannette Hanscom, Troy, N. Y.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

TEN THOUSAND VOTED FOR REPAIRS ON THE HIGHWAYS.

Both branches of the city council met in special session Monday evening, and a large amount of business was transacted.

In the board of aldermen all the members were present and Mayor Burr presided.

On recommendation of Chief Bixby, W. J. Riley and J. H. Sanders were granted an honorable discharge from Hose company No. 2, and J. Frank Sanders appointed driver of the same company.

The quarterly report of the overseers of the poor was read and accepted.

On motion of Alderman Chadwick, $2,700 was appropriated for additional heating and ventilating apparatus, for the school houses of the city, on plans approved by the State Inspector. Alderman Chadwick stated that $4,000 was asked for by the public property committee, for work after the same plan as the ventilating apparatus put in last year, but the State Inspector would not approve the plans, as during months of the year in which there were no fires in the building the ventilating apparatus was of no use, and some heating apparatus must be connected with it to make it work more satisfactorily, than the apparatus in the High or Pierce school building. The order was adopted by a ye and nay vote.

Petitions for sidewalks on Walnut street, Newton Highlands, were read and referred.

The annual report of the Board of Health was presented and referred without reading.

Helen A. Mansfield through Lewis E. Coffin asked payment for injuries received by falling on defective sidewalk on Bellevue street, when a stake projected above the walk, and in the fall she suffered a fracture of the femur, on Dec. 25, '88. Referred to the committee on claims.

Notices of intention to build new houses on Pearl and Eliot streets were received.

E. Fewkes & Son petitioned for license to put up two greenhouses.

THE RIFLE RANGE.

A petition was received from W. B. Atherton and E. T. Rice of Newton Lower Falls, stating that last Saturday four bullets from the rifle range in the gravel pit struck their places, one smashing a blind, one striking a chimney, and two imbedding themselves in a stable. Such target practice was dangerous and they asked to have the matter looked into by the board.

Mr. Atherton was present and stated that he was in his yard on the day mentioned, and heard the bullets whizzing by over his head. He did not at first know where they came from, as few in Lower Falls knew that a rifle range had been established in the gravel pit. Mr. Rice also heard the bullets and they investigated. To their surprise they found that the bullets came from the guns of members of Company C, who were practicing in the gravel pit, where the target was at least 40 feet below the bank. It was rather wild shooting, but the officer in charge said they were green men. As the pasture about the pit was a popular resort with children, such shooting was very dangerous and might result in a dreadful fatality, and he hoped the board would take early action. Referred to the committee on military affairs.

SPECIAL ELECTION.

Alderman Pettie read an order appointing Tuesday, the 3rd day of September, as the time for the special election to choose a successor to Alderman Kennedy of Ward Seven, and appointing the usual polling places.

On motion of Alderman Childs it was voted to close the polls at 2 p. m., as very few vote at a special election after that hour, and this would give one hour more than the 6 hours required by law.

A similar order was passed for the election of a councilman in Ward Five, to succeed Councilman Hale.

An order was passed appropriating $300 for the purchase of a horse for the fire department.

HIGHWAY REPAIRS.

Alderman Harbach presented an order appropriating $10,000 to be added to the appropriation for highway general repairs, to be charged to any unexpended balance, or the list of 1889.

He stated that the Highway committee would have been able to get along inside of their appropriation had it not been for the heavy rains which had washed out the roads in places and made repairs necessary at once.

Alderman Pettie said that he had felt all along that not enough money had been appropriated for repairs, to meet the wishes of the citizens or exigencies that might arise. It was bad policy to neglect the streets, especially the gutters on hilly streets, where if they were not paved washouts were liable to occur. Money would be saved in the end by such paving, and he favored the increase and should be glad to vote for it.

PLAYGROUNDS.

Alderman Pettie from the committee on parks and burial grounds, reported on that part of the mayor's address relating to public playgrounds, stating that they were in hearty sympathy with the recommendations of His Honor, and they had voted to recommend that when the citizens of any ward desired a public playground, that the city should pay one half of the cost, provided the said cost did not exceed $5,000, and when the land cost in excess of that sum, the city should give 25 per cent. of such excess.

Alderman Pettie said that the committee had found that it might prove to be difficult to locate a playground and in some cases citizens might decide on a lot where the cost would be very high, and so they had made their recommendation. The report was accepted.

Alderman Pettie reported an order in regard to the Newton Centre playground, of some 20 acres, to cost $24,000, of which the Newton Centre Improvement Society has raised $12,000, that the city give one-half of $6,000, towards the purchase, and 25 per cent. of the cost above that sum.

Alderman Harbach said he was very sorry that the committee had made such a recommendation. After all that money, some $20,000, that the city had expended for Farlow Park, he thought that the citizens of Newton Centre should at least be met half way, and that the city should give one half of the cost.

Alderman Pettie said that he thought the abutters on the proposed park any playground, could afford to pay a larger sum than that, as it would be of great benefit to them. This was one reason, and another was that the committee thought that $6,000 would buy a place large enough for a playground, and as a part of the lot was to be laid out as a park, the abutters would receive so much benefit that they could afford to pay the rest of the sum required. It was only proper to say, however, that the committee were not unanimous in the matter.

Alderman Childs said that he considered the recommendation about the playgrounds to be one of the best recommendations in the Mayor's address, and he hoped to see it acted upon. We have none in Wards One and Seven, and the city paid $20,000 to take away what little playground the boys had and turn it into Farlow Park. Since the boys were driven into the streets, he thought, would rather see a playground, than a park with policemen about warning the boys to keep off the grass. He wished every ward in the city had the public spirit displayed in Newton Centre, and would come and ask the city for money. In Wards One and Seven the boys were driven into the streets to play. He would favor giving one half of an amount asked for by any ward to purchase a playground. The city was an overgrown park anyway and parks were not needed, but playgrounds were.

Alderman Pettie said he favored the city meeting the citizens of Newton Centre half way, but if all the wards should ask for playgrounds, the committee felt that one-half of $6,000 would be all that the city could afford to give to each ward. In some wards, for instance, the citizens might want land valued at a dollar for a playground. If the Newton Centre ground was the only one, the case would be different. He was willing, however, to let the matter lie on the table for another month.

Alderman Johnson said that there was one corner of the land at Newton Centre which he did not think ought to be put into the park. It was the most costly part and $4,000 would be saved by leaving that out.

The matter was finally tabled till the first meeting in September.

THE PIPE YARD.

Alderman Chadwick reported an order which was passed for the removal of the water department buildings on the pipe yard on Austin street, Newtonville, to either Crafts street or Watertown street, where the city owned large lots, as the highway committee and the public property committee should determine, the cost of moving not to exceed $500. The citizens complained of the presence of the pipe yard there, and the city could sell the lot for $1,200 or more, which would pay all the expenses of removal and leave a handsome balance. Besides, it would give the water department more room, which was urgently needed.

The order was passed and a license granted for the removal of the building. The board then adjourned to the first Tuesday evening in September.

GEO. AND MARTHA WASHINGTON.

INTERESTING STORIES ABOUT THEM, TOLD BY MRS. DALL, APROPOS OF LODGE'S LIFE OF THE GENERAL.

Mr. Lodge's life of Washington has the same brilliant characteristics as his life of Webster. It is fair in the main, discriminating and entertaining. The summary of Washington's character in the last pages is masterly. I know nothing like it anywhere in history. It makes one wish that Henry Cabot Lodge would model his own life upon that of the great exemplar which he depicts with such intimate sympathy and tender enthusiasm. If one asked him, I suppose he would say, "But I do try—in so far as it is possible!" Alas!

The manner in which a man applies a historical test to his own career often reminds me of the way in which I look down upon my own person through my own near sighted glasses! Admirable helps—these glasses, when I would inspect my neighbor over the way or the landscape on the distant horizon, but the instant I look down and not up, at myself instead of others, the distortion is so great that I can hardly tell my fingers from my elbows! When Mr. Lodge depicts George Washington's relation to the parties which had begun to form before his second administration, and his warm approval of Hamilton's financial policy, the candid observer can hardly help detecting a special plea for a partisan politics and a modern high tariff! If this be not so, why should no comparison have been made between past times and present, and why, in the index, do we find "George Washington's character" under a capital W in the ordinary sequence of events?

I am sorry Mr. Lodge feels obliged to discard wholly the story of Weems. Weems is not a bad man, but his stories are only dressed them up in a pompous and priggish fashion, but any one who will take the trouble to go through the juvenile papers and diaries preserved in the state department will see that these stories are eminently characteristic. When I first visited the city of Washington and Mr. Vernon, Mr. Vernon was in the possession of the Washington family, and many persons were living who had known the Father of his Country, and liked to talk about him. Mrs. Madison, Mrs. Sam Harrison Smith, Judge Cranch, Mr. Greenleaf of the Point, had all come into the city with him. At Mr. Vernon's there were three colored men, who were respectively 15, 18 and 20 years of age when Washington died. One of these men remembered the day when Washington spoiled Mrs. Martha's new coach horses by putting them to the plow, and the scene that followed! "The General didn't like to wait—never would wait!" said this veteran, and it was because this was true that he carried his country through the struggles of 16 years. Did ever a man wait more patiently? but he never would wait without working, and in fact would plow with race horses if no others could be had.

I never knew any one talk of Mrs. Washington by choice. She was not a favorite, and I think Mr. Lodge is the first person who has ever discovered her to have been "amiable." When her grandchildren had a favor to ask they asked it of the General. "The General was a master hand at keeping his temper as long as he thought best," said one of the men. How many possibilities does that last phrase suggest? It is not Mrs. Washington's account that he parted with the wolf-bounds Lafayette had sent him, and since he could not keep those he would never have any more. Henceforth Mrs. Washington's hams and legs of mutton were safe, but she had to pass the rest of her life in the pen, and destroyed the General's letters. Mr. Lodge seems to think that Washington was responsible for this, but it was not so. In the small chamber where Mrs. Washington passed her life, after the General's death, there was no chimney, she had no fire, she sat by the window wrapped in comforters, with her feet on an old fashioned charcoal foot-stove. She kept the General's letters in a large iron box where he had kept her own, and which is still in existence. This box was set down by her side. She took the letters gradually, in her foot-stove. "Why in the world did she do it?" I asked of her grand-daughter. It was no easy task, for I had a sheet of the tough English paper on which the General always wrote. "She was not very well educated," was the reply; "she never wrote more than a few lines, and then burned them." She began by burning her own letters, and then I suppose she thought she would finish!

At this time there was a still more interesting person alive in Washington—if I had only known. This was the accomplished and elegant lady, Cassy, whom Washington picked up on the field after Braddock's defeat and brought up at Mt. Vernon. I never saw "Cassy," although I've only the two autograph notes of hers, known to be in existence, but I know her grand-daughter well, and her grandson, who was an employee of the Senate in 1879, "going to Charles Sumner's funeral." Cassy's first husband was a Thomas Smith who had as his first wife a niece of Martha Washington. She married twice afterward and lived to be nearly a hundred.

In these volumes Mr. Lodge dismisses Samuel Adams with some few lines, and he was only a "politician," but one must not forget what John Fiske says of him, who was called "The Father of the Revolution." "For more than 30 years no other man exerted so much influence as Samuel Adams. This was because of his keen intelligence and his high, his spotless integrity, indomitable courage, unselfish and unswerving devotion and broad sympathy with all classes."

Horace E. Scudder's "Life of Washington" and John Fiske's "War of Independence" belong to "The Riverside Library for Young People." It is by no means that there are no people in the United States too old to read these two books. Mr. Scudder's "Life" is gracefully written, comprehensive and valuable—just what his work might be expected to be, but John Fiske's book is a miracle. I can never understand why, when a perfect literary work is issued all the criticism does not clap their hands! I think it must be because they never read the books! This story of the war is such a book, brilliant and effective beyond measure. It should be read by every voter in the United States. It is a statement that every citizen should comprehend, but the only man of consummate genius could have written. Have you never felt when talking with 'senators and so-called "statesmen," how little they comprehended this whole period? If not, then you have been more fortunate than I, and it rejoices me to find in the books just mentioned, by Mr. Lodge and Mr. Fiske, tutors such as the whole country needs. The maps which illustrate Mr. Fiske's little volume are admirable, better than the most costly atlases for the purpose, for they confine themselves to the point to be read, and read in outline H. Hall in Springfield Republican.

LOOKED LIKE A CLERGYMAN.

FUNNY CONVERSATION OVERHEARD IN A HORSE CAR.

It is very wrong to play jokes on the clergy, and only very stupid people ever do it, says the Washington Post. There is an ex-newspaper man, well known on the row, who wears the smug face, the ministerial air and the most clerical spectacles of any man in the business. During a recent convention, which drew several hundred clergymen to Washington, Mack (that is his name) got into a fourteenth street car full of ministers, stumbled half-way up the aisle, and caught the eye of a fellow-newspaper man.

"Why, Bro. Thompson, how do you do?" he exclaimed, grasping his hand and shaking it effusively. Mack sat across the aisle and started a running conversation, which could be heard all over the car.

"Let me see, Bro. Thompson, I haven't seen you since the triennial convocation at Chautauque in 1875. How is your Buffalo charge getting along? How is Mrs. Thompson? Did you get your salary raised? No! That is too bad. I did. I worked my congregation nicely. I had a friend in Cleveland who is on the staff of a secular newspaper, and he was unsuspicious enough to work up a bona fide for me there until I received an offer of $5000. Of course, my congregation wasn't going to be outbid—ha, ha—and they saw that $5000 and went them $1000 better. This was in May, one year ago."

The whole car was attention by this time, and Mack was the focus of 30 pairs of curious eyes.

"Along in June I sat for my portrait. I get 40 per cent. gross on those, you know. What do you get? Nothing? Oh dear, Bro. Thompson, you really neglect your opportunities. Let me see, I received from the church fair proceeds, alone last year (the amount was lost in a whisper). But these portraits were very bad. They made me look quite thin and careworn. I sent four dozen of them around to the dear ladies, and it would have cost your heart good to see how they worked and raised $500 to send their pastor off to Europe."

"I hear that you are thinking of taking a new change? Is it so? Want to have a chance to work over your old sermons? Been eight years in one place? Well, I don't think you can do very well. You see I have made a good many investments in my city, and it would necessitate too many sacrifices to break the old ties. Still there are other ways. I succeeded in negotiating an exchange of 150 sermons for an admirable series by Dr. Scott of San Francisco. The good man was much pleased at the exchange."

"There, there, oh dear, dear. I have just called to mind that a family which has been in my church for ten years, has just moved to San Francisco and is going to join Dr. Scott's church. They may remember those sermons. Oh dear, it may make trouble for Dr. Scott."

Mack chuckled and poked "Bro. Thompson" in the ribs with his umbrella. It was a rainy day.

"Where is your umbrella, Bro. Thompson? Is that it? That is not the sort of umbrella you ought to have. Look at mine. The finest of silk and an elegant silver handle. I don't know whether you ever noticed, but I always have nice umbrellas. You see mine is a fashionable church, and there are always a good many strangers at divine service. I have an arrangement with the sexton to pick out on rainy Sundays the best umbrella left in the vestibule and put it away for me. The regular pewholders always take theirs in the pews, and only strangers leave umbrellas in the vestibule so I never have any trouble about umbrellas. Ah, here is my street. Good-by, Bro. Thompson. Come and see me when you can. Good-by."

A babel of whispers ran around the car and indignant glances followed the pseudo clergyman. One venerable party came down to "Bro. Thompson," and, note book in hand, asked the name of "that clergyman." Bro. Thompson struck his forehead with his clenched fist, but for his life could not locate the talkative preacher, and to escape cross-examination left the car at the next corner.

'The Governor's Chas.'

The governor sat in his easy chair, a spyglass at his eye. "Has anyone seen a thousand men and a train of cars go by? A pilot train with the bad men on, one more and another one still; with rattle of wheels and clang of bell, and shriek of the whistle shrill? They travel not as the flying ship, in silence and in fear; they whoop and holler and howl and yell for all the world to hear. They've advertised the place of the fight, for six long weeks or more, and I fear that I cannot find the spot till the brutal fight is over. Oh, rally and squander, my men at arms, and look if you may see where three railway trains and three thousand men have hidden away from me."

They rallied and squandered, those men at arms they searched the country through; and another governor came along and joined the searchers, too. They looked in the clouds and under the stairs, and under the bed they peered, and out in the kitchen and everywhere, but the trains had disappeared. They felt in their pockets and looked in their hats, and lowered a man down the well, but where all those slugs had vanished there wasn't a soul could tell. They asked a boy in Lowery's store and the blind man down by the hall, and the woman who keeps the candy shop, but they hadn't seen nuthin' at all. They dragged the pond at Sawyer's mill, and they panned the tollgate man, and all through the State before it goes away, the governor raced and ran. But all in vain he looked and searched, the people he sought were gone, and the only place that he didn't look up where the fight was on; and he never knew there had been a fight, until a week and a day, when he sent a constable after the men, four thousand miles away.

Long live the State of Massassip! The governor, long live he! If ever the moon should run away may be there to see! Should hostile powers invade his land at some far distant day, may he find the foe that wastes his State before it goes away. And great good medicine had it been, for the land of the sunny South, had the governor closed his smoothbore eyes and looked with his long range mouth.—Robert J. Burdette.

The Cock and the Diamond.

As a Cock was scratching about in the Free-List in search of food for the Hens, he hit upon a Diamond. "Ho," said he, "you are a very fine thing, no doubt; but give me a barley-corn before all the Diamonds in the world."

—Just at present there seems to be a good deal of scratching in New England on the part of the Manufacturers, and a suggestion that iron ore, and wool, and lumber, and tin-plate would be more acceptable than jalap and arsenic.

Alexander Hamilton.

Much has been said of late about Hamilton and his wonderful "Report on Manufactures." The Report by the way is so very wonderful that the Home Market Club and the Great American Tariff League have thought it well not to reprint it. A wise conclusion truly! Hamilton argues for free pig-iron and bar-iron; recommends free copper, and tin; tends that free lumber will not only help our manufacturers but will tend to preserve our forests; and OH YE SHEPHERDS OF OHIO, PROPOSES TO PAY A BOUNTY TO FOREIGNERS WHO SHALL SEND TO THE UNITED STATES THE QUALITIES OF WOOL WE MOST NEED. We have on our desk a little pamphlet of twenty pages containing copious extracts from Hamilton's report. (We will gladly mail a copy FREE to any Protectionist who will agree to read it. Price to Free Traders and Tariff Reformers—cents.) Congress responded to the Report by passing the Tariff rates of 1792. We have searched the Tariff Act of that year diligently but have failed to find any duty above 15-12 per cent. We subjoin a few, and add the present rates. Verbum sat sapienti; sapienti—there's the rub.

Conflict or Compromise?

"O Newtonian, what hast thou not cost me!" —William Penn.

Within a fortnight one of the proprietors of perhaps the largest woolen mill in New England expressed himself somewhat as follows: "Well, we worked for Windom and worsteds, and we got them, but next time I go to vote for the man that stands for free trade, I don't care what party he's in." The signs of a formidable revolt multiply about us with astounding rapidity. First the Bigelow Carpet Co. protests, then the workers in tinplate. One after another the great woolen mills refuse to do homage longer to Ohio millionaires, and the uprising among the iron firms threatens to make New England a unit for Tariff Reform. Even in the Home Market Club a voice is raised against the "blind fanaticism" of those protectionists who want to protect everything. The above words, upon the industry of the country was a very good thing as long as the proceeds of the tax were divided among a few; but to tax all and divide the profits among all has come to be a losing game. Before many years the delegates of New England will be heard in the halls of Congress demanding freedom to purchase flax, coal and iron and wool and lumber in the markets of the world. Will the West accede?

Will Pennsylvania and Ohio heed the call? Are they ready to follow the advice of the Hon. Peleg McFarlin, whose "unwavering faith in the principle of protection" permits him to call for a restoration of the rate of 24 per cent. on iron? In a word will the Protectionists who consider protection a principle yield to the Protectionists who look upon protection simply as a temporary expedient. Let us hear what one of these Protectionists on Principle says on this subject:

"Our danger comes from those who have been and are the beneficiaries of the system, who are listening to the delusive suggestions of free raw material, and with supreme selfishness are disposed to turn a willing ear to the enemies of a protective policy; and while solicited for their own protection against foreign rivals, and unwilling to give it up, are consenting, and I fear in some cases counselling, its withdrawal from other interests, thus assisting in driving a wedge in the very foundation of a system which, if persisted in, will in the end overthrow the entire edifice. I warn you against these false teachers, who appeal to individual greed and narrow selfishness; they are sowing the seeds of destruction and death to a system which has produced results which are the wonder of the present century."

Doubtless if Wm. McKinley, Jr., the author of the above words, had been nominated at Chicago in place of Benjamin Harrison, as was not so unlikely, the "false teachers" would have paid their contributions of "fat" for his election no less readily than they did for that of his successful rival. But will they in 1892?

When the "supreme selfishness," and the "individual greed" of our woolen, and iron, and linen interests come face to face in Congress with the real Protectionists of the McKinley-Sherman—Tribune-Denslow school, which will yield? The latter cannot, and the former we trust and believe will not. The Fifty First Congress is in the hands of the High Tariff Party, but let the delegates from New England beware. In 1891 her voice in and out of Congress will be for Free Raw Materials. The "delusive suggestions" for free flax may appeal to others than Joseph R. Leonard; there may be iron manufacturers outside of Massachusetts who will lend as willing an ear as Mr. McFarlin to the "reduction" of the enemies of Protection; other industries than woolen manufacture may manifest a "narrow selfishness" and "individual greed" in an attempt to buy the materials they use in an open market. They who sat in darkness have seen the first promise of light; as the dawn comes on and the sun of truth dispels the mists of error, more and more will they see that compromise is impossible! Conflict is inevitable—one side says more freedom, the other less freedom. There can be no doubt of the result. As Dr. Warren said of a former struggle against restriction: "The contest may be severe—the end will be glorious."

An Offer of Matrimony.

The Literary World, in a review of Mrs. Brush's new book, "Inside Our Gate," says perhaps the most delightful of all Mrs. Brush's delightful delineations is Tibbie, the Scotch cook, with her shrewdness, her aphorisms, her lovers, and her calm Christian determination toward her own way. The offer made her by "Meester MacFarlane, baker," in the presence of her mistress is something delicious:

"I just called to say, Miss Catherine Elizabeth Drummond, that I made ye an offer of matrimony this day week, an' I wad like an answer."

Tibbie looked as innocent as a lamb. "Weel, sir," she said, "if a' ye require is an answer, I suppose as long as ye get an answer, ye dinna care what it may be?"

"Ye ken weel that I care," replied the suitor doggedly. "The last time I was here ye made objection to me bin' a baker, but ye suld pick that bone wi' me father for apprentic' me to that trade. Ye remark that ye'd always intended to marry wi' a sailor; but I canna be a sailor a-gripin' wet ropes, nor climbin' up bare poles like a dancin' bear, to pleasure even ye at my time of life."

Mr. MacFarlane's temper was up a bit; he didn't know Tibbie as well as I did. A firm expression was settling about her mouth and a glitter in her eyes.

"What settled objection ha'e ye to a baker?" he continued.

"It always mak's me sick to me stomach," replied Tibbie, "to think of flour and water muddled the gether by men-folk. I've hurd that they tramp crackers wi' their feet, too—heaven forbid!"

"This was too much for Mr. MacFarlane."

"Hae he never tasted baker's bread in ye'r life," he continued warmly, "nor crackers, lass?"

"Weel, I maun confess I hae," returned Tibbie in a provokingly calm voice,

"When I was a bit o' lass and didna ken what I was eatin'; we a' man eat our peck o' dirt."

"An' hae nae eaten baker's bread sin' ye were grown?"

"It sounded like stern controversy between consumer and manufacturer, rather than like a conversation between lover and sweetheart."

"Weel, I hae," admitted Tibbie, "when took wi' pangs of hunger and considerin' what the chosen people eat in the destruction o' Jerusalem; but I eat it wi' me eye fixed on the ceilin', and repeatin' a verse of Scripture to divert me mind till it were well gulpet down."

HIGHWAY REPAIRS.

The heavy rains have done so much damage to the streets that the highway committee have been voted $10,000 to use in making repairs, and it is to be noted that the city council has so much confidence in the highway committee that the money was voted without a single dissenting voice being raised.

There has been some criticism as to the way the Highway department has been managed this year, but this is nothing unusual, as the oldest inhabitant tells us that he does not remember a year in which the street department was not more or less criticised. We all want our own street fixed up in first class shape, and we want the work done at once. There are several thousand of us, too, living on some one hundred or more miles of streets. Some of us are fortunate enough to live on the main thoroughfare, while the unfortunate majority live on the streets which are not thoroughfares. To satisfy every one is the problem which the highway department have before them, with a limited appropriation, and with twelve months in which to work. If the matter is looked at in a reasonable manner, it will be seen that the committee must consider the greatest good of the greatest number, and must also lay out their work at the beginning of the year, so that the men and teams can be kept busy through the whole year.

This is the policy which the present administration insisted upon at the beginning of the present year, and Mayor Burr believed that a thorough business-like management of the highway department would give the best satisfaction. Alderman Harbach was chosen to take charge of the committee's work, as the chairman, and any one who has looked into the matter will admit that he has been a very efficient and hard working official. With the advice and approval of Mayor Burr, the work was laid out at the beginning of the year, and there would have been no need of an extra appropriation for the last part of the year, had it not been for the unusual expense entailed by such floods as we have been having.

The chairman of the highway committee has a thankless task at the best, and no chairman has put more time, or more well directed work into carrying out the duties of the office than Alderman Harbach, and it should be remembered that there is no salary attached to the office. When Newton gets that long talked-of board of public works, the commissioner who performs the duties now devolving upon the chairman of the highway committee, should be one of the highest salaried city officials.

Any one who has looked carefully into the workings of the highway department this year must conclude that it is very efficiently managed, and that the amount of money at the disposal of the committee has been wisely and carefully expended. The main thoroughfares are in good condition and the side streets have received all the attention that a wise arrangement of the work and the appropriation allowed.

THE SPECIAL ELECTION.

The special election to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Alderman Kennedy has been ordered for Tuesday the 3rd day of September, and a call has been issued for a mass convention of both parties, to be held in Elliot Lower Hall, next Monday evening. The call is signed by the chairmen of both the Republican and Democratic ward and city committee, and their action will be approved by the voters of both parties.

The convention is held thus early, so that if Councilman Hamblin is nominated, he can resign his position in the lower branch, and the board of aldermen can be called together and order an election to fill this vacancy on the same day as the election for alderman, and thus save expense to the city.

The general convention will be a non-partisan affair, as all nominations for city officials should be, and Messrs Coffin and Childs have acted wisely in pooling their issues on this occasion, for the benefit of the city.

Councilman Hamblin has made an excellent city official, and has given great satisfaction to the people of his own ward by his course in the City Council. His vote has been on the right side of the important questions that have come up, and he has never been afraid to give his opinion of questions of public concern and defend it forcibly and vigorously when occasion required. He would naturally be chosen at the end of the year, according to the usual custom of promoting a councilman to the upper branch after two years service, when a vacancy exists, and it is thought to be wiser to elect him now, as he is familiar with all the work before the board, than to choose a new man, who would hardly get the "hang of things" before the end of the year. With so many more members in the Common Council a new member there would not be so objectionable and a new member would have to be chosen another year.

If Councilman Hamblin is nominated for alderman, it is felt that the vacancy then caused should be filled by a man of experience in business affairs, who has a personal interest in the ward, one of the wealthiest in the city, and the name of Mr. U. C. Crosby of Park street has been mentioned, as fulfilling all these conditions. He would be a good representative of the substantial citizens of whom the ward is chiefly composed, and would have a good deal of influence if elected. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at the caucus.

We understand that the caucus for nominating a councilman in Ward 5 will be held later, some time in August.

THE TAX RATE.

One of the most satisfactory things about the present administration of our city affairs is that the tax-rate has been decreased below that of last year, and will be only $14.80. The many unusually heavy appropriations of the year made people fear that the tax-rate would be increased, and the announcement in another paper that such would be the case was one of those baseless rumors that sometimes get into print, when an attempt is made to give the news in advance, without going to headquarters for the facts. A low tax-rate will do more for Newton than any amount of expensive improvements, as the impression has somehow got abroad that this is a very expensive city to live in, and many desirable residents are lost in this way. What Newton needs is more middle class residents, who will own their own homes and take an interest in the city, and a low tax-rate is one of the things that will bring them.

Mayor Burr started out to give us a business-like administration, and judging from the decreased tax-rate there is no doubt that he is succeeding. The city expenses are carefully scrutinized and the very gratifying announcement is made that all the departments will keep within their appropriations, unless extraordinary expenses arise unexpectedly, as they have in the street department on account of the heavy rains.

There is a gratifying increase in both personal property and in real estate, the latter increase being over a million and a quarter, which shows that the city is growing at a satisfactory rate, and that a large number of new residences have been added. The increase in the number of polls testifies to the growth of the city.

The tax rate of $15.20 for last year and of $15.80 of the year before caused some dissatisfaction, as it was felt that the rate was not fairly carried over $15 with our present system of valuation. With the rate below that figure Newton offers more attractions to residents than any other suburban city, and if the rate keeps on decreasing in the same proportion Newton will rival Cohasset as the tax-payers' paradise.

Mr. J. R. LEESON, who is now in Europe, writes the GRAPHIC a letter in regard to the great service Hon. Alden Speare rendered the mercantile interests of Boston by his forcible presentation of New England's interests before the Interstate Commerce committee. Mr. Speare deserves all that can be said in praise of his action, and it is such men as he who have made New England what it is today. He showed the Senate committee the position of Boston business men in the matter, and that when these interests were so vitally threatened they would all stand together without regard to party.

With the departure of Mr. Brimblecome, who has been the assistant in the City Clerk's office for two years or so, another civil service examination will be necessary, in order to choose his successor. City Clerk Kingsbury is a great admirer of the civil service rules, and it is said that he believes even a temporary clerk should not be hired without an examination. The path to promotion through this office seems to be rapid, so that there will probably be no lack of applicants.

HON. EDWARD BURNETT of Southboro has invited ex-President Cleveland and wife to visit Deerfoot farm, and they will be his guests for a few days. Some of the sensitive newspapers hasten to announce that there is no political significance in the fact. Of course not. It is only natural that Mrs. Cleveland should take the opportunity to see this wonderful farm. She is evidently quite attached to the old Bay State.

The playground question received some discussion in the board of aldermen Monday night, and from the spirit shown there is a hope that some of the wards at least will have a suitable playground. In no village is one more needed than in Newton itself, but all the people in these two wards would be glad to see the public spirit shown by Newton Centre rewarded, and the city give the sum asked for.

The State officials and the Mayor of Boston were most generous and courteous in their hospitality to President Harrison on Thursday. The program for his entertainment was excellently arranged and carried out, greatly to his enjoyment and satisfaction. It was an added pleasure that the weather was propitious. Hundreds and thousands of curious ones visited the city to get a look at the chief magistrate.

The governorship campaign has rather languished of late, in spite of the efforts of the Boston Sunday Globe to register the preference of all the prominent Republicans. Mr. Crapo has certainly no reason to be ashamed of his supporters.

The appointment of Prof. Harris as commissioner of education is such an excellent one as to win the approval of all parties. It shows what President Harrison can do when he does not listen to the spoilsmen.

At the last meeting of the Board of Health, finding their appropriation exhausted they voted to ask the city council for an additional appropriation of $2500.

NEWTON'S VALUATION.

THE TAX RATE DECREASED AND THE PERSONAL PROPERTY INCREASED.

The Newton assessors completed their labors last Saturday afternoon and the tax for the year 1889 has been fixed at $14.80 as against $15.20 in 1888. This rate is very satisfactory to citizens, especially when considering the large expenditures of the year. It is doubly gratifying to those few who gathered the impression from a premature statement in another paper that the tax rate would be increased. The personal estate foots up $9,306,155 as against $9,146,012 in 1888, an increase of $160,143. The increase in real estate is $1,254,620, the largest increase being in Ward 3—$299,595. The total valuation of the city is $14,093,435 an increase over last year of $1,314,793. The increase in the number of polls is 317. The following table shows how the real estate, personal property and polls are divided among the several wards:

Wards.	Personal Estate.	Real Estate.	Total.
1.	885	$1,445,450	$2,330,750
2.	1,124	995,620	2,119,590
3.	854	1,167,300	2,021,325
4.	832	1,016,811	1,848,643
5.	865	450,185	1,315,270
6.	979	2,516,200	3,495,179
7.	629	2,198,590	2,827,619
Totals.	6,187	$9,306,155	$15,492,814

Appended is the table showing how the personal property, real estate and polls are divided among the several Wards in 1888, which will be useful for purposes of comparison:

HEROISM OF A NEWTON BOY.

HOW EDWARD S. NICKELS SAVED A CREW AND LOST HIS OWN LIFE.

The full details of the saving of the crew of the Alice Borda, bound for New York, by Chief Officer Edward S. Nickels has never been published. A more truly heroic act has never been recorded and too much praise cannot be accorded to the gallant sailor who sacrificed his own life after rescuing the captain of the schooner, five seamen and the cook, from a watery grave. Much has been said of the act of Capt. Merrill, from whom we would not detract one iota of just praise, but no man ever took a greater risk or is more entitled to a hero's plaudits than the brave chief officer whose remains now lie in Forest Hills cemetery. Chief Officer Boyd of the steamship Eldorado of the Southern Pacific line, running between New York and New Orleans, arrived home Tuesday, and from him a GRAPHIC reporter obtained the full and correct details.

On Sunday, April 6, the steamer Nueces, of which Mr. E. S. Nickels was chief officer, left the port of Key West, Fla. A week later, when in latitude 32 degrees, a tremendous gale struck her and, with all steam on, she found it almost impossible to do more than hold her own. While aloft making fast one of the topsails one of the hands sighted a small schooner to the northwest flying signals of distress. When he returned to the deck he reported what he had seen, and Chief Officer Nickels, with the permission of Captain James Bolger, who was in command, called for volunteers to launch the lifeboat and try if any assistance could be rendered the distressed vessel and crew. Four men volunteered at once, and Nickels, taking his place at the bow of the boat, was lowered with his crew into the rough and threatening water. The waves, according to one of the boat's crew, were running as high as the top of the Nueces' masts. She is schooner-rigged, of about 3,000 tons burden and newly built. It was found impossible, owing to the roughness of the sea, to approach near enough to the schooner to take off the crew, and the men were obliged to jump overboard and trust to being picked up by the lifeboat.

The schooner turned out to be the Alice Borda, bound for New York, Captain McClain in command. One of her masts was carried away and she was making water rapidly. Had it not been for the prompt and cool decision of Chief Officer Nickels, nothing less than a miracle could have saved Captain McClain and his crew of five seamen and a cook from a watery grave. As it was all were picked up and the boat's crew followed. The last to leave the boat was Nickels.

THE IMPROVED SYSTEM OF PROPELLING STREET CARS.

A new system for developing and utilizing steam for power, without smoke, cinders, noise or escape of steam, at much less cost than by any other known method for obtaining and maintaining power. There is no failure or uncertainty in its operation, and it is absolutely safe. For street cars and other service requiring portable power, it has no equal. Secured by U. S. letters patent. A prominent mechanical engineer says that the possibilities of this invention have not been equalled by any recent invention—except possibly the Bell Telephone and Sawyer-Mann electric lighting. The Steam Storage Power Company has been organized for the development and introduction of this system throughout the New England States—which territory is owned exclusively by it—with a capital of $300,000—$100,000 in cash and $200,000 in shares, $10—and is having a Power Car built by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which will be exhibited in Boston and vicinity in September. The first issue of certificates will be from the office of the company, 34 Broad Street, after August 1. Subscriptions may be made for the stock at par—payable 25 per cent. cash, 25 per cent. 30 days, 50 per cent. 60 days—to an amount not exceeding $50,000.

EDWIN S. THAYER, Treasurer.

As he reached the steamer's deck he staggered and fell. He was put in his cabin and tenderly cared for until the Nueces reached her dock at Pier 26, East River, on Thursday. Then an ambulance was summoned and he was conveyed to 900 Gates Avenue, where a telegram had preceded him.

Drs. Lott and Corbin were called in, but were unable to be of any service to the gallant sufferer, who had given up his own life in the performance of his duty. The cause of his death as stated by Dr. Lott was apoplexy, brought on by over-exertion.

Chief Officer Nickels was born in Boston and was 35 years of age. A few years after his birth his father, Capt. John S. Nickels removed to Newton, and young Nickels received his early education in the Newton Schools. At the age of 10, he went to sea in the merchant service. After the usual apprenticeship, he passed a master's certificate. He served some time in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's employ and then sailed with the Brazilian Steamship Company. His gallant and successful career of seamanship brought him several times favorably to public notice, and he was offered and accepted the position of first officer of the steamer Nueces by the New York and Texas Steamship Company. Chief Officer Boyd and the deceased were brought up as boys together, and were life-long friends. Both followed the sea and although frequently separated always remained warm friends. Chief Officer Boyd was one who assisted in removing Mr. Nickels on the ambulance when he was taken to his home in Brooklyn and remained with him as long as possible. He speaks in the most glowing terms of his heroic act and says that no greater example of heroism has ever been known. The Humane Society of New York has presented Mrs. Nickels, the mother of the deceased with a beautiful gold medal and a silver medal from the Massachusetts Humane Society is now also in her possession.

The Interstate Commerce Law and the Canadian Railroads.

Your editorial note upon the part taken by Newton men in the hearing before the Senate Committee in the issue of July 12, was timely. It may not be generally known that to one Newton man more than to any other person, the powerful, complete, and unanswerable presentation of the facts on that occasion is due. The Hon. Alden Speare had charge of the case in behalf of the manufacturing, importing, and distributing interests, and so ably, clearly, and forcibly were the various aspects of the case stated under Mr. Speare's supervision and management that a deep impression was made upon the committee, and the mercantile interests of Boston and New England are placed under obligation to Mr. Speare for this signal service to the public.

Yours faithfully,

J. R. LEESON.

IS YOUR BAKING POWDER PURE?

Do its Manufacturers Publish all the Ingredients Used? IS IT FREE FROM AMMONIA?

As is well known, ammonia is unhealthy in food, and dries up the bread material. Protection to consumers of food compounds lies in their ability to choose those made from healthful substances. Unless manufacturers publish just what their baking powder is made of, do not use their goods, but buy instead CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER. This powder is made only of strictly pure cream of tartar, and strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, with a little wheat flour to preserve it. This is attested by the official analyses of Government and State chemists, and by physicians, and chemists of Boards of Health throughout the country. CLEVELAND BROTHERS, ALBANY, N. Y.

MIDDLESEX SS. JUNE 29th,

SOME TIMELY SUGGESTIONS.

How to Decorate and Finish a Home Tastefully.

The Art Amateur, which is considered pretty good authority in matters by people of taste, is running an excellent series of articles on "Home Decoration and Furniture," from No. 10 of which the following is taken:

The great temptation now is to over-decorate. Even in a house of many rooms of ample size one can easily produce the effect of over-crowding, while in the small apartments so common in large cities it is very difficult to avoid it.

It seems as if the decorator suffered from an "embarrassment of riches." The temptation to use all the devices at hand is often too strong to be withstood, and accordingly paneled wainscots, carved pilasters, wooden ceilings with heavy transverse rafters, tapestries, rugs, bric-a-brac, stained glass and all the rest of it play a prominent part in helping to disfigure and distort many a small room that by judicious treatment might have been cozy, artistic, and, above all, habitable. We may have too many rugs on the floor, too many portieres and scarfs, too much bric-a-brac. In other words, too much decorative art is not decorative.

The prime use of an apartment must always be remembered. If it is only for the display of a collection of objects, then the air of a museum is not objectionable. But if it is a room for dining, reading or sleeping in, then the comfort of the occupants should be the first consideration; and beauty need by no means be overlooked because utility is borne in mind. I have seen a dining room where the buffet and other pieces of furniture for the display of silver and glassware gave the effect of a shop, and I have seen others where a much greater amount seemed entirely appropriate and unobjectionable.

The same may be said of collections of curios, faience or the like. If arranged merely for show, to impress the beholder, the intention is always evident; but the collector's own way of placing his treasures is the best from all points of view. The temptation to overcrowd a moderately large room is, perhaps, natural, but our small apartment houses bear abundant witness not only to the embarrassment of visitors at trying to crowd in between pieces of furniture, but to the thoughtless abuse of schemes and ideas that might have given beautiful results. Arm chairs entirely upholstered may be our ideal; but if we happen to have a tiny room and need several chairs, we had better overcome our yearning for luxurious cushions with good grace and content ourselves with simpler forms.

Nothing can be more luxurious than a spacious lounge covered with a Turkish rug, and possibly having another rug stretched on the wall as a background, with plenty of soft silken cushions. But it takes up room. Now we must consider if the space at our disposal is sufficient for our purpose before we fit up our lounge, even if we are fond of eastern rugs and soft pillows of silk. If the space at our command is not enough to do this properly, we had much better give up the idea and have a simple settle with turned spindles and a flat cushion. This may be excellent in color, fine in line, and will be altogether better in place than the divan out of place. The same thing is true of our chairs. I have seen the French know how to treat a small salon better than any other people. They rely strictly on precedent and take a style, say Louis XV or Louis XVI, but what could be better?

Let us give up originality if it only means doing what has not been done before, for the obvious reason that it is undesirable. Criticism is easy and we are apt to say that these French styles are conventional and hackneyed and admit of no scope for the designer. I do not think this is so. Working under the strict limitations of a historical style is, perhaps, a hard task; but a designer of force and education will declare, to some extent, his individuality, but always subordinate to the general characteristics of the style in which he works.

SUGGESTIONS FOR BOOK SHELVES.

Wood carving, that most delightful form of decoration, is rapidly becoming abused. Too much carving vulgarizes hopelessly a piece of furniture that half the amount of ornamentation would have enriched. A carved border or molding around the edge of a table gives a fine effect, but I have lately seen tables the entire tops of which have been carved. Now a table is meant to put things on, and the carving completely spoils its usefulness, besides defeating its own purpose of decoration; for the decorated edge would look richer by contrast with the plain center.

Care must be taken not to have the carving sandpapered down to a perfectly smooth finish, and the background should be irregular and not speckled all over with little holes. The beauty of carving is to feel the touch of the carver, to see a tool mark here and there.

It is well to use carving rather sparingly. Rather have a little and have it good than much that is second rate. In some of the Italian work nearly every molding was enriched and paneled carved. But in the best examples the carving was judiciously disposed and some plain surface used as a foil.

The cuts accompanying this are from the same publication; "The Art Amateur," and give excellent hints as to the treatment of bookshelves and a fireplace with cozy corner.

NAVIGATING THE AIR.

Carl Myers Thinks It Will Some Day Be a Common Thing.

Carl Myers, of Frankfort, N. Y., the husband of Carlotta, the well known feminine aeronaut, and identified himself for the past twelve years with the problem of aerial navigation, who has been a guest at the Wayne hotel during the past few days, is what a theatrical man might call an aeronautic manager. He sometimes takes a little excursion up into the cloud country to see if the ethereal regions look natural and if things are all there, but not often. The ascensions which he himself has made number only forty-four. He has, however, a corps of star aeronauts employed, and contracts with county fairs and Fourth of July celebrations to furnish balloons and experienced air sailors at reasonable prices, with satisfactory spectacular features guaranteed. He has also given attention to the improvement of the balloon, and fine muslin manufactured from sea island cotton becomes, when treated by a process invented by him, a better material from which to manufacture air ships than silk, and much less expensive.

Anticipating the day when monopolistic individuals will control the aerial trunk lines of navigation as well as state legislatures and slower means of transportation lower down, he has continued investing in aerial property, occasionally laying by a balloon for a rainy day, until he is now the owner of twenty-seven gas air ships, besides a large number of hot air balloons. His gas balloons are manned by a crew of thirteen persons, and he has a much larger number than that to run his hot air contrivances.

The result of long study devoted to the subject and an extensive experience has been to make Mr. Myers a believer in the eventual practicability of navigating the upper air. He is now the proprietor of what is said to be the only balloon factory in the world, but he declares his conviction that such concerns will some day be as common as car shops or ship yards.

"I have just perfected," he said, "what I call an air velocipede, and shall give public exhibitions of its capabilities in the near future. It is provided with a reservoir containing sufficient hydrogen gas to support the weight of one individual. Then by means of a device operated by the hands and feet it can be propelled in any direction in the air desired. The experiments already made with the machine show its practicability, and it is easier to run it than it is to propel a bicycle on land."

"The same propelling apparatus on a larger scale could, of course, be used to navigate a great air ship, if a sufficiently powerful engine, not too heavy to overcome the lifting power of the gas, could be found to furnish the motive power. I am now experimenting, with encouraging results, on a very light, simple contrivance run by successive explosions of small quantities of dynamite."—Detroit Tribune.

A Desperate Case of Suicide.

The Palmer house has been very unfortunate in the number of tragic deaths. It will be just thirteen years ago to-morrow that one of the most sensational and carefully planned suicides in the history of self destruction occurred at the hotel. Frederick Addison Jeffrey was the victim. He was said to have been a member of the firm of Wyckhoff & Jeffrey, of Peoria. He occupied a parlor room on the eastern extension of the corridor. Early on the 5th of July his body was found suspended over the bath tub in his suite. The tub was filled with warm water and contained the charged fragments of combustibles ignited by Jeffrey just before killing himself. When discovered a stiletto was found plunged into his left breast, his throat was cut from ear to ear, a pistol hung by a cord within easy reach, beside it a pearl handed razor. His body hung by a stout cord fastened to the ceiling. He had saturated his clothing with kerosene so it would be easily ignited from the combustibles in the tub. He turned on the water as he wrote a letter, and when the rope he was hanging by would be burned through he would fall into the tub and burn to a crisp. The coroner's jury was unable to tell which killed him.—Chicago Times.

A Valued War Belle.

Angelo Pacha, color sergeant of Company G, First Michigan cavalry, under Capt. Alexander, was in the battle of Gettysburg. On the third day of the fight when the bugle sounded he drank water out of his tin cup. He placed it in the crock of an apple tree and joined his command and forgot all about it. Last week he went to the battlefield and bought the tree for $25, and had the tree cut up and carried to his home. The cup was completely imbedded in the crock of the tree, and Angelo prizes the relic beyond anything that he owns. He was in the city yesterday and gave away parts of the apple tree to his old army comrades.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Arrest of French Bankers.

Considerable sensation was produced in Paris a week or two ago by the arrest of three well known bankers on the suspicion that they were concerned with the disappearance of a Swiss named Caudrian. The latter had been a servant of a Mme. Fessart, and at her death received her fortune of 200,000 francs. His riches drove him demented, and since he disappeared the bankers with whom he deposited his money have been arrested.—Chicago Times.

Encouraging Investigation.

The Astley-Cooper prize, of a value of $1,500, will be awarded in 1892. The question proposed is, "The Influence of Micro-organisms Upon Inflammation." The papers of those contesting for the prize should be written in English or accompanied by an English translation, and should be addressed before the 1st of January, 1892, to the Guy hospital, London. The prize will not be awarded to two or three working together.—Science.

BRUIN IN THE SWITCH TOWER.

In Full Possession of Signals and Switches Near Philadelphia.

A wild bear in possession of the signal tower and running the trains on the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad was the strange sight that nearly drove the rightful occupants of the tower into fits a few nights ago. The bear came from the Zoological garden, and the tower was that just back of the garden on the curve which the railroad makes at that place.

E. W. Rose, the telegraph operator in the tower, and Samuel Foster, an assistant yardmaster, were dozing in the tower about 3 o'clock, Sunday morning, when there came a soft pit-a-pat upon the stairs. They did not notice it, nor did they see a curly head that was poked in at the door and looked curiously around. Something in the inspection may have displeased him, for suddenly the men were awakened from their napping by a deep growl.

Before Foster, who was lying in a corner, could get up the bear had put his big paws around his neck and began to squeeze him affectionately. The terrified yardmaster shrieked, and the more he shrieked the more the bear hugged him. Foster was beginning to grow purple in the face, when Rose, who had recovered his presence of mind, started in with a broom stick to vanquish the bear. This drew his attention from Foster, and an instant later Rose was enjoying a vigorous hug. The hug lasted so long that Rose began to think his head had come. The hug still continued, when the men suddenly remembered that the early morning express from New York was due and that the signal had not been set for it.

"Give the signal to No. 12," gasped Rose to his companion. Foster, who was a very badly frightened man, managed to crawl from his corner and see that the signal was properly set. Then he grasped the telegraph key, and while Bruin looked on in astonishment he started every operator along the line by flashing over the wires to Broadstreet:

"For Heaven's sake send assistance to No. 3 office. Grizzly bear in possession of the tower. Has full control of signals and switches. Send six men with rifles."

As the telegraph operator sank back exhausted the bear left Foster and returned to his first victim. He moved slowly, and both men grasped the opportunity to jump over him and dash down stairs. As they turned the key in the lock of the door at the bottom they heard the bear thump against it. Rushing over to the Zoological garden from which place they supposed the strange visitor had escaped, they yelled loudly for assistance. Looking back on their way they saw bruin in the tower trying to move the switch levers.

A sleepy keeper was aroused after considerable effort, and the party laid siege to the tower. There was a pretty struggle between keeper and bear for a time, but the former came off victor. The bear was led back to his pit and put in irons. Foster has been off duty ever since, and Rose still starts nervously whenever he hears a footfall on the tower stairs.—Philadelphia Record.

Successful Ostrich Farming.

E. C. Canston, the proprietor of the Norwalk ostrich farm, was in town yesterday. Speaking of the birds, he said: "They are all doing well, and I have noticed a decided improvement in them year by year. Their feathers are also getting better, and this year are worth 20 per cent. more than what was given last season. Hitherto I have been shipping the crop to San Francisco, but now I am going to try Chicago, as better prices are offered in that direction."

"As far as ostrich farming in Southern California is concerned," he continued, "the days of experiments are over and the business is pronounced a success. The pioneers in the introduction of the birds had so much to contend with that at first it looked like running at a dead loss all the time, but now very handsome profits are being realized. A farm is to be started near Santa Barbara in the autumn by Mr. Lillingston. He has already purchased some of his birds and has brooded several chicks."

"What are ostriches worth nowadays?" asked the reporter.

"A hundred dollars a pair for chicks and $800 a pair for breeding birds."—Los Angeles Herald.

Cheapening Telegraphy.

There has lately been invented a new system, which, it is claimed, will make it cheaper to telegraph messages than to mail them. Dr. J. Harris Rogers, of Washington, D. C., is the inventor, and he claims that the world will be almost revolutionized by his discovery. The new system, Mr. Rogers says, reduces the English alphabet to ten elementary characters. The messages are prepared by means of a machine resembling a typewriter and manipulated in the same manner. With the use of ten keys, one for each character, any desirable message can be written. A test of the new apparatus was held in New York a few days ago, and a message of seventy-six words sent over in twenty-five seconds and printed on a tape in plain Roman characters. The inventor says that he can by this system make one wire do the work that ten do now by the system in vogue.

They Die with Their Boots On.

"The Altons die with their boots on." That was the constant boast of the late Col. Bob Alston, famous throughout Georgia as an editor and politician. His grandfather and his father had died that way, and one day after he had made that boast he was shot to death. Not long after this one of his boys committed suicide in Washington, D. C. Today another son was jailed at Lithonia, Ga., with a charge of murder opposite his name. A young Scotchman named Wilson was killed in a Fourth of July brawl there, and Alston is charged with the crime. The prominence of Alston and his family makes the case of particular interest.—Atlanta Special.

In Wide Awake for August Andrew Lang humorously describes "Fishing in Tweed and Yarrow." Louise Imogen Guiney writes on "Rowing," and Olive Risley Seward tells how she and Secretary Seward spent a day together sight-seeing, visited Laboulaye and saw Themis on his accession to the Presidency.

—A concrete walk has been laid this week from Bowen street to the residence of Rev. Dr. Smith on Centre street, greatly improving the walking on that side of the street.

—Our young townman, Fred H. Hovey, seems to be holding his own on the tennis courts at Newcastle, N. H., as well as elsewhere. He has beaten A. E. Wright of Trinity in singles during the tournament, Wright being a crack player. The score of games was as follows: Hovey—10 0 0 6 7 8—6; Wright—0 2 3 4 5 0 0 6—4. The second set was a severe struggle and was long and tiresome for the players. The score was: Wright—0 0 3 0 5 0 0 9 10 0 12 13 15—16; Hovey—1 2 0 4 0 7 8 0 0 11 0 14 0—7. After this time the game was a mere formality and decisive game for championship was played, in which Hovey made short work of his opponent. Instead of Hovey's hard game he chose to play an easy, back game, which upset Wright, leaving the game as follows: Hovey—0 2 3 4 5 6 7—6; Wright—1 0 0 0 0 0—1. On Saturday game the doubles in semi-finals. Hovey played with Leeden of Brown University against the Chase brothers. Their first set was very exciting, some games reaching deuce eight times. The games were all close in this first set, which was finally won by Hovey and partner after considerable hard work. The set scored as follows: Hovey and Leeden—1 0 3 0 5 6 7 0 0 11 12—7; Chase and Chase—0 2 0 3 0 0 8 9 10 0 0—5. Hovey and Leeden also won the next set by fine serving and placing. The score is as follows: Hovey and Leeden—1 0 3 0 0 6 7 0 9—10; Chase and Chase—0 2 0 4 5 0 0 8 0—4. Two games out of three being won by Messrs. Hovey and Leeden against such fine players and on a soft grass court on a damp day, shows what they might do under more favorable circumstances.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—Miss Sadie Thompson is visiting friends at Medway.

—Mrs. Logan has gone to Laconia, N. H., for a week's sojourn.

—Mr. S. D. Whittemore and family have gone to Andover, N. H.

—Mr. Frank Levi has gone to Wolfboro, N. H., and the mountains.

—Mr. F. W. Cole and family have gone to Maine to visit relatives for a few days.

—Letters in postoffice Aug. 5th: S. L. Chesley, Dennis Driscoll, Thomas Henson, Mrs. Margaret King, C. E. King.

—Rev. E. D. Eaton, president of Beloit College, Wis., will occupy the pulpit at the Congregational church next Sunday.

—Mrs. S. C. Cobb and Charles Logan have gone to Laconia, N. H., for a few days, and later will go to Wolfboro, N. H.

—Mrs. Charles Reed of Hyde street has as his home for the summer, the home of Miss Elizabeth McClellan of Middletown, Ohio.

—John Chinaman, who has been making efforts to hire a place for a laundry for the past year or more, has not yet been successful.

—The Highlands base ball club will play their annual game of championship on Saturday at 3:30. A strong game is expected. Seats will be provided for ladies.

—We hear that Mr. Mullen, the blacksmith, will remove his present residence to the rear of his shop and will erect a new house on the front lot for his own occupancy.

—Mr. F. E. Prendergast is at home for a few days only, after an absence of several months at Lake Superior, where he has been engaged at his profession of civil engineer.

—The grass plots have been completed on the Walnut street side of Stevens' block, under the supervision of Mr. F. B. Spear, in a very satisfactory manner and presenting a finished appearance to the frontage.

—The city has had three concrete crossings laid, two of which cross Lincoln street and one Walnut street. The crossings petitioned for by some of our citizens, to cross Walnut street from Lake avenue, will not be laid at present.

—Lawn mowers have been kept in such constant use, on account of the moist weather, that our friend Mr. Josselyn, who repairs them in such a fine manner, has not been able to take his summer vacation. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good.

—About a dozen of our local business men, who cannot take the time for an extended vacation, took a barge trip to Sawin's grove on Thursday, spending the day in boating and fishing and in such other ways as might tend to make it a highly social occasion.

—It is reported that the Appleton lot of land, better known as the base ball grounds, has been sold to Mr. J. M. Watson, who is the owner of the land on the opposite side of Lincoln street. This is the most important land sale that has taken place for the past year or two.

—The house of Mr. G. L. Avery was entered on Monday night, by some person or persons getting access to the pantry by the window built the door being fastened, and got no further, and without obtaining anything of value left in the same way. Entrance was also gained to the house of Mrs. Cobb and ten or fifteen dollars' worth of silver carried off, besides rummaging through the lower rooms and overhauling the trunk of Mrs. Cobb, which had been packed to go to the mountains the next day.

—There will be in the next number of Harper's Weekly an exhaustive article on "Electric Lighting in New York," by Schuyler S. Wheeler, S. C. D., electrical expert of the board of electrical control, the article to encompass the larger portion of the paper and to be accompanied by 25 illustrations.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Mrs. H. P. Eaton is here on a visit from Philadelphia. She is a guest of Mrs. Fred Lyon.

—The Dr. Solomon company arrived here Monday. A large crowd greeted them on their first performance.

—The oldest child of Mr. James Pendergast died last Saturday morning. The funeral took place Sunday.

—Mr. Daniel Warren is moving his house formerly known as the Rice house, to his lot opposite the McCort boarding house.

—Poles are erected along Beacon street for electric lighting. The wires are to be put up next week and incandescent lamps hung.

—Mr. Edgar Shattuck, Officers Leonard and Harrison, A. W. Freeman and E. E. Moody are camping out at Martha's Vineyard, occasionally taking a trip on the water and trying their luck at fishing.

—The house situated at the bottom of the Washington street hill and owned by Daniel Warren is being moved. This will improve the appearance of the street, as the house was directly on the sidewalk.

—Very little coal has been consumed in the different mills here this summer compared with previous seasons, and it has been a great saving to the different manufacturers. Coal was never known to be so high before.

—During the thunder storm last Saturday forenoon a bolt of lightning struck a large maple tree in front of the house of Allen Jordan on Concord street. The tree was split from the base to its uppermost portions and badly shattered.

—The lower part of Wellesley Hills is at present left without any fire whistle, as the mill upon which the whistle is stationed is shut down and no steam is on. Part of this town would be left to the ravages of a fire if one occurred at night, as there is no way to alarm the company in time to control a fire.

—Mr. Arthur Beardswell, who was for a time employed as night watchman in Sullivan's mill, but for the past two years has been employed as stenographer for Geo. Draper & Sons of Hopedale, will make a trip across the water to his native home in Birmingham, Eng., and he will sail by the Cunard line.

—Zion's Herald says: "The work upon the new church-building is progressing; the cellar is nearly finished, the ground, the spiritual interest is good. Within the last few weeks five full members have been received into the church. With a more commodious and inviting place of worship, this church will be much more effective in lifting men and women out of an indifferent and sinful life into the full enjoyment of religious experience."

—Considerable excitement has resulted from an unfortunate accident at the rifle pit used by the Clafin Guards. It seems that bullets fired from military rifles struck the residence of a citizen on Hamilton street, where the marksmen stand during the target practice. Some of the residents, fearing serious results from further shooting in the pit, have called the attention of the city council to the matter, and a petition in relation to the subject has been referred to the committee on military affairs. The members of the military organization are receiving congratulations upon their proficiency in hitting the bullseye.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Mr. Edmund E. Truesdell of Suncook, was in town the first of the week.

—Mr. Herbert Ellis and Mr. W. C. Estabrook are camping out at Nantasket.

—Mr. H. C. Hoyt is enjoying the invigorating air of the New Hampshire hills.

—Mr. J. A. Gould is taking a carriage drive through the country, going as far as Rindge, N. H.

—The Methodist society of Highlands had a large service of Wednesday, many from this village attending.

—Mr. Andrew Kaupp, an elderly gentleman of seventy-four years of age, was to undergo a very serious and painful operation at the Massachusetts General Hospital on Thursday. His friends here hope for a successful termination and a speedy recovery.

—Mr. James Sullivan had a narrow escape from a very serious accident on Wednesday. As he was tending some machinery at the Pettes Machine Works his sleeve was caught and he was pulled into the rest of his clothing. His arm was slightly cut and bruised, and but for the fortunate giving away of his sleeve his arm would have been drawn into the machinery with very serious results. He was fortunate to escape as easily as he did.

—Officer Purcell is enjoying a much needed and well earned rest, spending a portion of his vacation at Nantasket. His friends are pleased to know that he is enjoying himself, and hope he will return in good health and spirits to once more look after the interests of this section of the city. Officer Purcell is deservedly popular with the people of the village, for his accommodating and pleasant, and unlike the policeman in the story is always around when wanted. We hope the city officials will allow him to be our guardian for some time to come.

A Newton Centrement.

My temporary stopping place at Newton Centre is within two hundred yards of the circuit railroad, and on my daily trips to Boston, I am greeted, on passing the house, by a flutter of handkerchiefs, which I return. I understand the practice prevails all along the route, which may justify the following "dropping" into rhyme, which may be appreciated in other places where a like custom prevails:

SENTIMENT ON THE WING.
The railroads come, the railroads go,
Delivering and receiving,
Like shuttles moving to and fro,
We travel, and we travel so.

But bent with social interests,
That humanize the action,
The mighty process manifests
In warmest satisfaction.

There, hurled along the ringing track,
Are those we love and treasure,
Whose thoughts of us turn fondly back,
Though business urge, or pleasure.

We stand to catch some passing sign,
An equal love denoting,
A flash—perhaps hard to define—
Our happiness promoting.

A kerchief waving meets the sight,
From the car window streaming,
Like a white dove attempting flight,
A blessing in its seeming.

And we, in manner like, respond,
Though held by the strict restriction,
And wave, in hasty effort fond,
A caudine benediction.

Taus sentiment attends the car,
And feeling elevated,
The rush, the roar, the whirl, the jar,
With love amalgamated.

And that white signal recognized,
Of intercalated emotion,
Announces a pleasure dearly prized,
With depth of rail devotion.

—P. P. Schillaber, in Hartford Post.

Mr. Blackwell's new novel, "Kit and Kitty," will begin in the next number of Harper's Bazar, and continue several months. In the same number there will be portraits of the Princess Louise and the Earl of Fife.

Mrs. Lillie Howes Wheeler.

Our last week's issue announced the death, on July 31, of Mrs. C. H. Wheeler, of North Attleborough. So large a circle of friends had she in Newton Centre, that it seems not unfitting that some words be said concerning her life. Born in Dorchester, educated in Roxbury and at the Boston Girls' High School, she removed with her family to Newton Centre in 1876. She united with the Baptist church in June, 1877, and at once became a devoted Christian worker. Her winsome and courteous disposition made for her many friends, both in and outside the church to which she belonged. Her acquaintance was not confined to those of her own age—she delighted in sweet ministries to the aged and infirm.

Meeting Mr. Wheeler in 1883, an acquaintance was formed, by the ripening of which the subject of this sketch became his bride Oct. 25, 1886, and accompanied him to North Attleborough where her husband was and is pastor of the Baptist church. The duties of pastor's wife, Mrs. Wheeler fulfilled with rare skill, and she conducted herself so that she made all in the large parish her friends, and outside the church and congregation she was regarded with remarkable love and esteem. A mourning church, and a grief-stricken circle of friends sympathize with her husband who is left with the care of two children, the youngest born July 24.

Funeral services were held in North Attleborough Aug. 2d, conducted by Rev. H. M. King, D. D., of Albany, Mrs. Wheeler's girlhood pastor, and at Newton Centre, Aug. 3rd, conducted by Rev. Profs. Hovey and English.

The interment was at Newton cemetery.

To Whom It May Concern.

The stories circulated about town that I was owing H. W. Crowell $400 and G. P. Atkins $400, are pronounced false by those gentlemen. Also about the men in my employ, that I was owing them large sums are untrue. I hold receipts from them for all that is due me, and which I have been accused of not making returns. My broker will testify to the bona fide sale of my business. I am back in Newton again and ready to pay all bills I owe and to collect all accounts due me. W. B. BEAL.

California Correspondence.

Oakland, August, 1889.

To the Editor of the Graphic.

The sharpest earthquake felt in this city since the heavy series of earthquakes of 1868, visited Oakland and vicinity about 5 o'clock on the morning of the 31st of July. Had it not been for the fact that it was very slow in movement, doubtless it would have caused much damage. Two or three chimneys toppled over in West Oakland, clocks stopped, glass-ware was broken, but the real harm done was very little. Chickens and birds chattered over the shock as though making some remarks in regard to the earth getting off its car-track, while dogs were startled into barking, and the nervous shock was great upon sick and feeble persons. An attorney-at-law, named Commins, had, previous to the earthquake, been suffering from heart disease, but was getting better so that he was able to ride out on Saturday and Sunday, but the nervous shock produced by the earthquake caused his death in a short time. He was somewhat noted as a scientist and linguist, being able to read in forty different languages and converse in twenty-one. He was also author of several grammars, and left an unfinished grammar of the Coptic language, which he was at work upon at the time of his death. An eastern woman in a certain hotel is reported as saying to her husband in her fright over the "quake," "Let's start right off for home this afternoon!" But old Californians are quite earthquake-hardened, so that many of them would prefer to hear an earthquake rattling at the door, rather than to hear a book-agent or sewing-machine-man doing the same.

The historic French vessel "Natalia," which was wrecked in Monterey Bay many years ago, has recently been visited by "divers," in order to obtain copper. This vessel conveyed Napoleon I from the Island of Elba to France in 1815. It was afterward sold to the Mexican government, and was wrecked in Monterey harbor while acting as a coast-guard revenue boat some fifty or more years since. Visitors to Monterey have seen portions of the vessel at low tide standing out from the water. The wood-work is reported as badly decayed, and the divers have not met with the success anticipated in getting copper, but many pieces of wood from the vessel have been brought up and sold as relics, and an old-fashioned weight has been found which is supposed to have once weighed fifty pounds, but is now reduced to about ten pounds.

The "Buckhorn Furniture Factory" has recently been opened in Temescal, in the suburbs of Oakland. For twenty years Mr. McCarthy, the owner of the factory, has been gathering up the buckhorns from Mexico, Texas, and elsewhere, securing the best horns possible, and ingeniously making them up into chairs. Several of these curious chairs have drawn medals from different fairs of the state, and many furniture dealers have taken specimens of these chairs for their show windows. Mr. McCarthy has also made two horn tables, the only two heard of in the country. The natural horns are well polished up, and when finished very inviting and substantial seats are made from this singular material.

The teredo, or long ship-worm, is a source of great trouble to owners of wharves on this coast, and great ravages have been committed by this mollusk in and around the bay. The long animal is not related to the worms, but it has the true molluscan organization and siphonal tubes. The young attach themselves to wood and soon perforate it. The holes are small at first but increase with the size of the animal. The several individuals skillfully avoid boring into the burrows of their neighbors, but often leave thin partitions, so that, as the numbers are great, the wood is soon honeycombed. It is stated that the teredo, the water of the bay the better will flourish the teredo.

To prevent the ravages of these animals, creosoting works have been established at San Pedro, and hopes are entertained that piles may become so thoroughly filled with the poisonous creosote that the little animal may make its home elsewhere. Many inventions to this end have been tested heretofore and found worthless. The moisture is at first extracted from the piles by heat and vacuum, then the creosote is introduced into the retort and by means of pressure-pumps a pressure is obtained of twenty pounds, it is said, to the square inch. The whole process taking about twenty-four hours.

Another way of fighting the teredo has recently been advertised by a Tere-doproofing company in San Francisco. All that portion of the pile exposed to the salt water is protected by steel armor, and the surface of the steel is treated in its manufacture so that it will not rust. All travelers are interested in knowing that the wharves on which their cars run are perfect, and it is hoped that some plan may be devised to conquer this mischievous mollusk.

Joaquin Miller on his way East, stopped at Shasta, Cal., where he once lived for four years, mostly among the Indians, gathering the songs of the Sierras. He says, "the spot there is the California Piedmont, almost entirely like the Piedmont of the Savoy Kings of Italy," and with imperial Mount Shasta in the background, it is by far the more glorious to look upon. In writing of the Columbia (in Oregon) and Sacramento rivers, he mentions a "fact" which, if true, is of interest. He says these rivers were once one and the same stream. To say nothing of the assurance of geologists and the Indian tradition, you can easily trace the links of connection by a chain of lakes reaching from the headwaters of the Sacramento river to a point near where the Columbia river bursts through the Cascade mountains and made its way into the Pacific Ocean near where Astoria now stands, instead of flowing on down by Mount Shasta and out of the Golden Gate.

Funds are being raised at the present time in order to erect a fitting monument to the memory of Star King, in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco. The model as completed represents the lamented orator as standing and delivering an address, and holding a roll of manuscript in his left hand; the face being very faithfully represented. The contract for the designing and erection of the monument has been given to a sculptor of New York, but it will be cast in San Francisco, and probably cost over $10,000. The statue is to be of bronze and will stand ten feet and six inches in height.

Technical Schools.

Technical schools are absolutely necessary so long as there is no system of apprenticeship in the mills; and to the ordinary American woman an apprenticeship savors too much of the condition of the colored people before the war. But, if a system was brought forth that was reasonably fair and equitable for both sides, technical schools would not be so much required. In Bavaria, for instance, some thirty years ago, if the parents of a boy wished to have him learn the trade of a weaver, he was apprenticed to a master weaver. For a year or two the duties consisted in sweeping up the shop, making harness, acting as draw-boy if the master weaver had not introduced the Jacquard, piecing smashes, and making himself generally useful until he was familiar with the implements of his trade. He then learned to pick a shuttle across, and at the same time learned the lift of the harness for certain weaves, next how to make a pattern, dress warps and make them up, so that by the time he had been there from five to seven years he could make up cloth from its description. One would naturally suppose he was now fit to be called a weaver, but not yet. His master would give him a card, stating his abilities and his length of service; and Conrad or Fritz would now pick up his knapsack and begin to earn his title as journeyman. His card explained that he had to travel for two years to different places where his trade was carried on, and each employer was to write on the face of it how long the journeyman worked for him,—he was debarred from working more than six months in one place,—and what was his opinion of his abilities. At the end of the two years, or longer, perhaps, because some one who wished to be particularly skilled would visit Switzerland, Northern Italy, and France, he returned to his place of apprenticeship, was given a pattern to prepare and make, had to show all the workings of it, deliver it to the certain sages who sat at his examination, and, if he passed satisfactorily, received his title as master weaver, and could now either work for any one who would employ him or start looms of his own and take in apprentices, who would have to follow the same routine, or could enter the wandering journeyman. Such a course of things would not be tolerated in the States. It would be too slow for the feverish activity of the New Englander. But it produced men who knew their trade thoroughly; and those men, if willing and able to work, never failed to succeed. This style of the trade, out, and technical schools take their place; but in the best schools in Germany money and influence count just as the dollar does here. In England, technical schools are also supplying the place of the apprenticeship system, although a few still serve and then attend to their examination only, to enable them to receive a diploma if they are efficient.—[Correspondent Boston Journal of Commerce.]

The Banks of the Hudson.

In 1609, after traversing the Hudson river from its mouth to Albany and carefully noting the grandeur of either side of this magnificent highway of nature Hendrick Hudson wrote these words: "It is a beautiful as land as one can tread upon."

Two hundred and eighty years have marvelously increased the beauty of the great river called by his name, and could he return to the scenes of his manhood he would find many more lovely sights than those upon which his eyes rested in the city of the seventeenth century. The natural beauties of the Hudson are much the same, and no description can exaggerate them; but the magnificent steamers that ply between New York and Albany, the innumerable sailing craft that dot the surface of the mighty river, the never-ending clusters of canal boats that are being towed up and down, the beautiful villas that one encounters at every turn, the magnificent monuments perpetuating heroic deeds, that we find here and there along the banks of this noblest river of the continent, adds an endless variety to the scenery and a resistless charm to the eye of the traveler.

A Novel Timekeeper.

Probably the most novel timekeeper in America is an old-style, tall clock, owned by a gentleman in Pawtucket, R. I., to which several ingenious inventions of his own are attached, by means of which it is made to regulate the affairs of the entire household. This timepiece never requires winding, as the opening and closing of the front door during the day performs that work. Within the dial is an ingenious mechanism, by which the light in the front hall is turned up as the darkness approaches, and again is lowered as bed-time draws near. As morning dawns, the faithful clock rings a bell in the back hall, calling the servants to their daily labors. An hour later a bell in the front hall warns the family that it is time to rise, and half an hour later another peal of the bell summons them to breakfast. Besides these arrangements, the clock is connected with another in the gentleman's room, whereby the two are struck simultaneously. In all these curious improvements and attachments the aid of electricity has evidently been involved. Like most Yankee inventions, if not genius, it is, at least more practical than the famous clocks of European cities.

Maria Mitchell's Will.

The will of Maria Mitchell has been probated, and contains the following bequests: The gold medal given to her by the King of Denmark, to Lydia Mitchell Dame, or, if she is deceased, to the eldest daughter of her sister, Elizabeth Catherine Dame; the composition medal which she received from the Republic of San Marino, to Frances Mitchell Macy, daughter of her sister, Annie Mitchell Macy, of Nantucket; all her scientific books to her brother, Henry Mitchell of Brookline, Mass.; her manuscripts to her sister, Phoebe Mitchell Kendall, of Cambridgeport; her five-inch telescope and "comet sweeper" to her nephew, Wm. M. Barney, of Lynn, Clifford Mitchell, of Cambridge, Mass.; her house and lot on Essex street, Lynn, to her brother, Henry Mitchell, and her brother-in-law, Owen Dame for the benefit of her five nieces, when the youngest shall have reached 20 years of age. Of the residue of her estate, one undivided eighth, not to exceed $1,000, is to go to Vassar College, the remainder to be divided between her brothers and sisters.

"Angelica, you must not ask Mr. Finlay into the parlor. You know we all turn up with housekeeping." "Well, he won't mind that." "But there is only one chair in there." "Oh, that doesn't make any difference, mamma."

A Famous Old Firearm.

In Pilgrim hall at Plymouth is a famous firearm which is over two centuries old. It is the "Thompson long shot gun," so called and has recently been put into the collection. The odd name for the weapon is derived as follows: John Thompson originally owned it and he landed at Plymouth, probably coming in the pinnace Little James in 1623. He took part in the war of the colonists with King Philip and served in the garrison at Middleboro. While there one day an Indian came out opposite the fort, and by various insulting gestures incensed the colonists so that although the range was a very long one, and by measurement afterwards was found to be 325 yards, Thompson tried a shot with his weapon. He succeeded in bringing down the Indian, who had deemed himself in safety. The old gun is a flint lock firearm and has a barrel over six feet long, measuring nearly two inches in external diameter at the breech and tapering toward the muzzle, which for the last three inches enlarges into a slight bell shape. The fore stock extends the entire length and the grip and butt are very clumsy and unwieldy. The sights are open ones, the rear ones being notched fully half an inch in depth. It would carry a ball nearly an inch in diameter. The old weapon is in good order and can still shoot as well as ever. Its barrel is octagonal for quite a distance from the breech and then becomes cylindrical, while the flaring muzzle is again worked into facets.—Old Colony Memorial.

The English Minister.

"Robert T. Lincoln, the new American minister," says the London Star, "possesses a good many advantages over his predecessors. He is more the typical American. Coming from the West, he brings with him his warm cordiality and heartiness of manner. He is rather a tall man with brown hair and blue eyes. His face expresses much earnestness and honesty, and he has a low, agreeable voice in conversation. Mr. Lincoln will be assisted in his social duties by Mrs. Lincoln, who has had a large experience socially, and is both charming and full of tact in her manners. Everyone is delighted at the idea of a young lady in the American minister's household. Miss Mary Lincoln is very pretty, with a strong individuality of her own. She has a pale, smooth, American complexion. A quantity of silver-gold hair, that soft, light hair of pure gold, with the high lights all in silver. Her eyebrows are dark and piquantly arched, and she has a charming smile. Then she dresses like a French woman, so that dances are that next season will be an acknowledged belle, and the American embassy gayer than it has been for years."

Vacations.

A recent writer for one of the magazines has hit upon a simple plan for ascertaining whether the people are not better off financially than they were a generation ago. It is to investigate the subject of annual vacations and find out whether more persons do not now take a week or two off during the period indicated. It is probably true that such a plan is feasible, but we cannot see that it would work all the expected results. Undoubtedly more persons take annual vacations now than at that time—our population is greater. But do they do this because they are better able to afford it, or because it is the fashion? And how are we going to learn that the last generation stayed at home because they could not afford to go away, when in point of fact we know that many of them would have done so? Evidently this plan won't do.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Kentucky Mosquito.

[From the Henderson Journal.]

The mosquito is here again, and the crop promises to be large. The little ubiquitous animal is finely developed, and on examination it was found that his flip was much more gaudy than last year. His wings are broad and large and have the appearance of insignificance. His legs are also well fixed, more active for business, and there is no fear but that the insect which does no good in the world will commence an attack on the human race with much zeal. The bill—well, it looks like a polished rapier. From now the average man or woman can cease to be religious to a sanctified degree, for wherever you may go the accursed mosquito will be waiting to give you a warm reception in his most polite manner.

The Force of Railway Trains.

A railway train at sixty miles an hour may be compared to a huge projectile, and subject to the same laws. The momentum is the product of the weight of the train multiplied by the square of the velocity in feet per second; and if we allow a train of 120 tons, travelling at a speed of sixty miles an hour, then the work required to bring it to a standstill would be 14,400 foot tons, exerted through one minute, or nearly a thousand horse power, which gives some idea of its destructive force, if unhappily, it should come into action; and yet this terrific power is so entirely under command that the strength of a child turning the small handle of the vacuum brake can bring the train to a stand in a few seconds.

François Willard urges women to read the newspapers. She says: "Women are a set of passivities on that subject, as a class; and I am never more annoyed for my 'sect' than when the newsboys go trotting through at full speed, if he finds the car contains chiefly women, never dreaming that they want a paper. I clutch the sleeve of a man in a vest and buy one of every variety he has, and ask him what he is thinking about, to lose patronage in that way. Gossip is nothing but small news—the nickels, pennies and dimes while the newspaper deals in dollars and V's and X's; so it widens the mind more to read the newspaper than to gossip about the neighbors."

"Nellie," said the mother to her 4 year old little one, who was sitting quietly in a distant corner of the room, "what are you doing?" "Drawing a picture on my slate," replied Nellie. "A picture?" rejoined the mother, glancing over her shoulder. "Yes, and a pretty one." "What is it?" "It's my kitty," said Nellie. "But it looks more like a tree." "Yes, I made it so that my left hand wouldn't know what my right hand done, and I guess it don't, do you?"

Human happiness does not result from bodily excellence or from riches, but is founded on uprightness of conduct.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the heart of the sufferer. If you have never used it, and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial bottles free at Arthur Hudson's drugstore.

Henry Clay.

An impartial student of history in the next century will doubtless wonder on what grounds the advocates of the Senate Tariff Bill of 1888 could appeal to Alexander Hamilton and Henry Clay, Hamilton, English and thoroughly aristocratic, the defender of the Federal Constitution, "that frail and worthless fabric," is perhaps better understood as a High Tariff advocate, since our brief account of his views in last week's GRAPHIC. It may be worth while to consider a few moments the actions and opinions of Clay, the father of two American policies—High Tariff and the Fugitive Slave Law.

—In 1824, Henry Clay advocated and secured the passage of a strong Protectionist Tariff Law.

—In 1833 Henry Clay advocated and secured the passage of a measure which acknowledged the right of protection and made provision for its final abandonment within a period of nine years.

—In 1840, Henry Clay spoke in Congress as follows:—"No one, Mr. President, in the commencement of the protective policy ever supposed that it was to be perpetual. We hoped and believed that temporary protection, extended to our infant manufactures, would bring them up and enable them to withstand competition with those of Europe. If the protective policy were entirely to cease in 1842, it would have existed quite as long as its friends supposed it might be necessary."

—In 1842, Henry Clay supported the Tariff Bill on the ground that it was a measure for revenue and incidental protection, and was not to be understood as the revival of a high protective tariff.

—In 1850, Henry Clay wished to open discussion on the so-called Free Trade Tariff of 1856, but "not with any purpose of reviving those high rates of protection which at former periods of our country were established for various causes—SOMETIMES FROM SINISTER CAUSES, and without disturbing its essential provisions."

Henry Clay, the creator of the American system, believed in Free Trade if other nations would accept it; hoped that manufacturing industries would employ women and children; contended that the adoption of a Chinese system would do away with warfare; advocated a tax upon domestic whiskey and the prohibition of foreign; thought there was no possibility of the accumulation of large capitals in a few hands in this country; vindicated free raw materials; one mode of encouraging manufactures; supported the ad valorem system as against the specific;—stated again and again that protection was only a temporary expedient, not a permanent policy;—and never at any time, in any way, shape, or manner, stated or intimated that a High Tariff makes, or keeps, or tends to make or to keep wages high.

(The Tariff Reformers make no appeal to Clay; but it seems so ridiculous for our opponents to do so that we wish to warn them. Send your name with a promise to read, and we will forward you free at once a ten-page pamphlet containing copious extracts from Clay's speeches on the Tariff. Free traders and Tariff Reformers will please enclose two postage stamps.—Ed.)

MEN WHOM NEWTON DELIGHT TO HONOR.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

Your editorial note upon the part taken by Newton men in the hearing before the Senate Committee in the issue of July 12, was timely. It may not be generally known that to one Newton man more than to any other person, the powerful, complete, and unanswerable presentation of the facts on that occasion is due. The Hon. Alden Speare had charge of the case in behalf of the manufacturing, importing, and distributing interests, and so ably, clearly, and forcibly were the various aspects of the case stated under Mr. Speare's supervision and management that a deep impression was made upon the committee, and the mercantile interests of Boston and of New England are placed under obligation to Mr. Speare for this signal service to the public.

Yours faithfully,

J. R. LEESON.

[The Boston Commercial Bulletin.]

The sugar trust will be successfully broken up only by the people, through the courts or through the legislature or Congress. When the latter body meets, the duty on sugar, by which the Trust finds it possible to make its enormous profits of fifty per cent on stock watered 100 per cent, will undoubtedly be carefully considered and should be cut to the quick. The people should not and will not submit to pay a heavy tribute on a necessity of life to swell the riches of a few hundred individuals.

The Riverside & Oswego mill, handicapped by the duty on raw materials and insufficient protection on their product, suffered with all the other mills in consequence.

The refusal of Secretary Windom to assess a duty on Canadian cars entering this country is wise and conservative.

WADES FIBRE AND FABRIC.

As a rule Fibre and Fabric has little to complain of from its contemporaries, but once in a while some one, as for instance the Jersey City Argus of August 24, will state that Fibre and Fabric has taken the back track in regard to the wool tariff. Such statements are due either to distortion of the real facts, or to the circumstance that such papers as the Argus have but recently discovered Fibre and Fabric. Some of the ablest articles calling the attention of our manufacturers to the advantage of free wool appeared during the last presidential campaign. These articles contained facts that the most ardent high protectionist could not controvert, but they were overlooked at the time during the heat and excitement of the campaign. Wade's Fibre and Fabric is run on principle and does not require "back track"; while it believes in protection sufficient to protect, it knows that taxed raw materials are not protection.

Samuel J. Tilden was something of a bookman and a good deal of a dandy. He was one of the best patrons of the tailors of New York. In the books of a fashionable up-town tailor, for 1871, Mr. Tilden's name appeared in them for bills amounting to $3,000 in that one year. He kept one of the best private stables in the United States, for he believed the fat of the land and the fruits of the vine were made to be enjoyed, and he had them in profusion. He was very careful about his health, and was what may be called a sort of hygienic high liver.

"You are commencing early to be late," said a lady to her new hired girl the first morning after her engagement, when breakfast was well under way. "I've a weakness for slaps, mum," was the reply. "I enjoy me slaps' best when I'm awake, and so I remain lyin' down an hour after I get up sure."

There isn't enough bad luck in the world, altogether, to ruin one real live business man.

WHERE SHALL THE CITY TRADE?

The Journal in an editorial in its issue of August 9, calls attention to the fact that Councilman Moody of Lower Falls has furnished the city with over $200 worth of goods during the past year and questions the legality of such a transaction. It suggests the resignation of Councilman Moody if that gentleman desires to do business with the city. It seems very strange that our contemporary should pick out Councilman Moody as a subject for its criticisms concerning trade with the city, especially when many other business men, also members of the city government, have furnished goods to the city and received payment therefor. The object of the law in this matter is in the direction of preventing loss to the city by contracts made with members of the city government, who could practically name their own figures without the slightest fear of competition. In the case of Councilman Moody's dealings with the city this objection could not arise, for the goods obtained are purchased at lower figures than could be procured of any other local dealer. There is no chance to bleed the city and after all, the great hue and cry raised by the Journal is based upon a very flimsy foundation. The city solicitor sees no objection to such trading and no danger to the city's interest. Citizens generally express the same opinion and any other view of the matter must be termed a very narrow one. It is simply being frightened at a shadow and building up serious difficulties that do not exist. It would seem, therefore, that our contemporary was influenced really by some personal motive, rather than any interest it took in the welfare of the city. The editorial states that Mr. Warren of Newton Centre, who is an overseer of the poor, will not accept an order for coal, yet we find in auditor's report for year ending Dec. 31, 1888, the item: George Warren, coal and wood, $16.00; also two charges from the same party for cement furnished the city. In the same report, the Fanning Printing Company has numerous charges for printing for the city, the total amount of their bill being $908.91 while Mr. Moody's bill is only $230.31. One of the partners of the Fanning Printing Company is a member of the city government. In the same report there are numerous items, amounting to a few hundred dollars, representing an account with the city and David Conant, who was associated in business with a member of the city council.

These items are referred to merely to show that in Councilman Moody's case no precedent has been made and that it is not unusual or wrong, as might be inferred from the editorial in the Journal. We hope Councilman Moody will not resign as he has been an excellent member of the city council and has well represented his ward. Such men are needed in the city government, and the people of his district will undoubtedly nominate him as their candidate for re-election next year.

A POLICE STATION NEEDED.

From time to time the GRAPHIC has called attention to the necessity of a proper building for a police station, and the initiatory steps in this matter should be taken with a view to securing an appropriation for the purpose next year. A suggestion has been made to erect a suitable building in Newton Centre, entirely separated from any other public building and provided with cell room, guard room, offices and sleeping apartments. This idea is suggested by citizens who believe that it is only a question of time when it will be necessary to build police stations on either side of the city. If the one at Newton Centre was built, it would be only a step towards the erection of another building at Newtonville or West Newton in the near future. The desirability of suitable police stations on either side of the city is obvious, for the reason of the scattered territory and the difficulty in handling the men from one station. If the patrolmen all reported at one station, those who covered routes at the Highlands, Upper Falls and other remote points would be obliged to travel long distances, and if they were required to report every hour or so at the station, as is the case in many cities, the greater portion of their time would be consumed to the detriment of the locality especially needing their watchful care. With two stations this difficulty could be overcome. The men could be divided into two divisions, each division having its own complement of patrolmen, who would receive instructions and report for duty at their respective stations. In this way, the men could report to their superior officer occasionally, at either station, and a more thorough and systematic supervision of the men would result. There are those who believe that the starting point for a suitable station should be at West Newton, ultimately with the idea of locating another station or division on the other side of the city. With one station arranged with offices and sleeping apartments, a better service could be secured and a better government of the force maintained. The idea of forming a division could then be carried out, the force reporting at the station to consist of the men on routes in the nearest localities, and the same general idea to be carried out in due time, by dividing up the city into two or more police districts. It must be soon that the city will require a continuous patrol service, and with this necessity comes the need of additional men and a station provided with apartments where the officers of the night relief can sleep until the hour of duty. At present there is no accommodation of this nature, and no change of any sort for the better can be made until, at least, one suitable police station is erected.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

The usual mid-summer vacation has apparently set in for politicians as well as the rest of the work-a-day world, and we hear very little of the boomers and their booms. This inactivity is doubtless more apparent than real, and while the surface is unruffled, there is commotion and agitation in the depths below. It is certainly better for the prospects of the party in the coming contest that the preliminary struggle for the nomination should be kept as far as possible out of the sight and mind of the people. In this state of affairs, there should have been the Republican party the wisdom of reserving its fighting power for the common enemy, particularly in a year like the present, when causes of difference exist that have at least threatened to become serious. A bitter contest over individual claims to the nomination cannot fail to produce its natural and usual result of apathy and indifference, or in other words, a light republican vote. Moreover, this is not a year when the Republican party can afford to throw away a single chance. The Democrats have in Mr. Russell one of the strongest men that they ever presented to the people of Massachusetts as a candidate for the executive chair. Fresh from his remarkable canvass of last year, strong in the confidence of his own party, and commanding the respect of even his political opponents, he is a man who will win the fight for the Democrats if the victory is within their reach. It is, therefore, a necessity of the situation that the Republicans should mortal their whole host for the battle, and put their strongest man to the front as standard bearer. The GRAPHIC has already expressed the opinion that William W. Crapo of New Bedford is at once the strongest and the most available candidate. His long and useful career in Washington as member of Congress, his wide business experience, together with his undoubted natural talents, have combined to make him a broad-minded, vigorous public man, such as Massachusetts has always delighted to honor. With Mr. Crapo for their candidate, the Republican party have nothing to fear, even from Mr. Russell.

MR. HAMBLIN FOR ALDERMAN.

The attendance at the city convention, held in Eliot Lower Hall, Monday evening, was rather small, an evidence not so much of lack of interest, as of a general belief that Mr. E. C. Hamblin would be nominated for alderman, simply because his past experience and services in the city council eminently fitted him for the position. There has been practically no opposition to Mr. Hamblin, and Republicans and Democrats unite in giving him cordial support. His nomination is satisfactory to the great majority of citizens, who believe that he will render valuable service in the upper branch of the city council. His record in the common council would naturally justify this opinion. He has been well informed on subjects of importance requiring his careful consideration, and has displayed intelligence and a conscientious regard of the city's interest in giving his vote. He has been honest and outspoken in his opinions and an earnest advocate of measures that he believed to be for the city's best interest.

It only remains now to call caucuses for the vacancies in the common council and in the case of the vacancy in ward 7, it will be necessary to order a special election which will be called for Tuesday, Sept. 3, the same date as the special election, for alderman. The citizens of ward 5 favor the nomination of Mr. E. L. Collins, and in ward 7 the name of Mr. U. C. Crosby has been favorably mentioned. He is a gentleman who would well represent the citizens of his ward and he will be, undoubtedly, nominated and elected without opposition.

THE SCOTCH POET.

Writers of hymns have a wonderful hold upon the popular mind, and the familiar hymns of our childhood linger with us all along the pathway of life. The authors of these lyrics stand high upon the roll of earth's famous men and women. We love to think of Longfellow, Bryant, Whittier and many others. Rev. Dr. Horatio Bonar of Edinburgh has written many a hymn which is incorporated with the best sentiments and thoughts of noble minds. He is thus known all over the world. His death just now, at the ripe age of 80 years, brings to mind his great work in life. The titles of these hymns are familiar, and will call to mind pleasant thoughts. "Far down the ages," "Go, labor on; spend and be spent," "Holy Father hear my cry," "I was a wandering sheep," "Yes, for me, for me he careth," are only a very few of the excellent ones. The closing verse of his preface to "Old Letters" is appropriately recalled at this time:

I may not stay. The hills that smile around me
Are full of music, and its happy glow
Beckons me upward—all that here has bound me
Seems now dissolving; daily I outgrow
The chains and drags of earth. I rise, I go, I go!

A visitor to Dr. Bonar's church in 1876 thus describes in Duffell's "English Hymns," Dr. Bonar's personal appearance, with an incidental but well considered characterization of his hymns:

The striking feature in his face is the large soft dark eye, the power of which one feels across the church. There are no bold, rugged lines in his face, but benevolence and peace pervade it. The first thought was, "He is just like his hymns—not great, but tender, sweet and tranquil." His voice is low, quiet and impressive. His prayer was as simple as a child's. His power over the audience was complete. Even the children looked steadily into his face. I was sure the little ones never heard the Good Shepherd's call more tenderly given.

THAT MASS CAUCUS.

No better endorsement of this city government could possibly be obtained than the small attendance at the mass caucus held in Ward 7 on Monday evening last, to nominate a successor to ex-alderman Kennedy. As dissatisfaction with a management engenders a desire for a change, and as a very small element of the community if dissatisfied, can create what appears on the surface to be quite a general feeling of distrust of an administration, an attendance at a caucus of only seven voters can only be regarded as highly complimentary to Mr. Hamblin and the administration with which for two years he has been connected. But notwithstanding the fact that the size of the caucus may be considered as an indication of the favor with which the present administration is regarded, it is also true that the lack of attendance cannot be said to indicate great political wisdom or sagacity on the part of our voters, or the existence of an overabundant desire on their part to do the duty they owe the city in exercising the right of suffrage. Although as it happened, only good resulted from the caucus in question, it seems the height of folly, and we think we are using a mild expression, to allow such an important matter to take care of itself. Voters should attend the caucuses. We have been told that Newton voters will not do so and that there is no use to ask them; moreover that they dislike to be reminded of their neglect of this duty. Unfortunately however we have had to remind them in the past and shall continue to do so in the future whenever occasion therefor shall arise.

The cause of the large decline in immigration to this country the first six months of the year is puzzling the authorities at Castle Garden. One reason given is that the heavy immigration of the past few years has "reduced the surplus" of population of several European countries. No doubt the strict surveillance of those who come with a view to prevent paupers and undesirable ones from landing and the return of several such, is responsible as one cause. The figures of the first six months of 1889 were 173,678, against 230,225 in 1888, a falling off of 37 per cent. There is no occasion for alarm in noting these facts, but rather a cause for gratulation. It is well that those who come to this country for a home should be taught the principles underlying our government and society, so that they may be valuable additions to the population. A smaller number can be easier learned and will more readily adjust themselves to the new and improved circumstances, and feel more strongly the benefits of our higher civilization.

The Massachusetts Rifle Team arrived in New York on Saturday on return from their trip to England, and quite unexpectedly to them, were made the recipients of hearty and formal greeting from military men in New York who received them with honor and a good breakfast. On Sunday they arrived in Boston and were warmly welcomed and generously entertained by Adjutant General Dalton and other representatives of the Massachusetts militia. Major Beryon of our own city, of this team, returns home to find many cordial congratulations from interested friends who have scanned the favorable reports of their successful records of marksmanship. He is just in time to attend the muster of his regiment this week at Framingham.

PRESIDENT HARRISON bade farewell to New England Thursday afternoon and took the steamer Pilgrim of the Fall River Line for New York. He has been cordially greeted by all citizens and has departed himself with dignity and good sense. The Boston Herald says: "The President has won respect from the people generally, and his visit will long be remembered, because it has been conducted with good sense, and all needless display has been avoided. It speaks volumes for a nation when the chief magistrate can go from one part of the country to another almost in the role of a private citizen, and still comport himself in such a way as to take nothing from the dignity of his office."

ALL persons who wish to vote at the coming special election September 3rd, whose names are not on the voting list,

THE IMPROVED SYSTEM OF PROPELLING STREET CARS.

A new system for developing and utilizing steam for power, without smoke, clinders, noise or escape of steam, at much less cost than by any other known method for obtaining and maintaining power. There is no failure nor uncertainty in its operation, and it is absolutely safe. For street cars and other service requiring portable power, it has no equal. Secured by U. S. letters patent. A prominent mechanical engineer says that the possibilities of this invention have not been equalled by any recent invention—except possibly the Bell Telephone and Sawyer-Mann electric lighting. The Steam Storage Power Company has been organized for the development and introduction of this system throughout the New England States—which territory is owned exclusively by it—with a capital of $300,000—par value shares, $10—and is having a Power Car built by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which will be exhibited in Boston and vicinity in September. The first issue of certificates will be from the office of the company, 34 Broad street, after August 1. Subscriptions may be made for the stock at par—payable 25 per cent. cash, 25 per cent. 30 days, 25 per cent. 60 days—to an amount not exceeding $50,000.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food. It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country. Sold only in cans, full weight. CLEVELAND BROTHERS, ALBANY, N. Y.

ONE WOMAN'S WAY.

"It's no use, I've worn all the cast-off clothes I'm going to."

There was no sign of irritation or ill-nature in the girl's bright face as she made this assertion. She sat in the centre of a heap of discarded finery. There were frayed and spotted velvet skirts, satin and silk waists, strained out and threadbare in almost every seam, flounced and bedraggled gowns, and nun's veils, crumpled ribbons and torn laces.

"What do you propose to wear?" Florence Annable's only companion on this occasion was her married sister, Mrs. Paul Grenman, in whose pretty ears sparkled valuable solitaires, and whose fingers were crowded with costly jewels. Mrs. Grenman's tone was cold, and the smile on her faultless lips was almost a sneer.

"I don't mean anything unkind, Julia," Miss Annable replied, "but the truth is, I am not comfortable in second-hand clothing."

"Blanche would be edified at your remarks, Florence," said Mrs. Grenman; "it was no easy task to get these things together," she added, with increased hauteur. "You know very well that my maid expects every garment I discard and so does Blanche's."

Notwithstanding her protest, the young lady had selected the least injured of the velvet skirts, and had begun to rip off the braid. But she threw down her scissors now and stepped out of the debris.

"That settles it, Julia," she said, with shining eyes, but with no other indication of excitement. "I will sort those 'rags and jags, and velvet gowns' into bundles, and you and Blanche need not disappoint your maids."

"What stupidity, Florence!" Mrs. Grenman hastened to say. "You know that we want you to have our things. You have made lovely costumes many times out of poorer material than that is there."

The lady's tone was a little more conciliatory. She evidently had some reason for not wishing her sister to carry out her threat.

"These things are much more suitable for your maid than for your sister, Julia," Miss Annable replied, as she set about her task.

"Perhaps you think that your sisters should keep you supplied with new clothes?" said Mrs. Grenman.

"No, I do not; but I will tell you what I do think," Miss Annable responded, with heightened color, but in firm, cool tones. "I think that you and Blanche ought to be willing that I should earn my wardrobe."

"Evan it?" said Mrs. Grenman, disdainfully. "What new and abominable crochets have you got into your head now? Something to disgrace us all, I suppose."

"If you and Blanche would pay me in hard cash, as you would be compelled to pay a professional, for playing the piano at your luncheon parties and your kettle-drums, your receptions and your informal evening gatherings, I could buy my own clothes, and be much better satisfied."

Mrs. Grenman's astonishment and indignation were overwhelming.

"Who ever thought that one of our family could be so coarse and mercenary? Pay one's own sister for playing a few sonatas and quadrilles once in a while? Why don't you ask us to pay you for condescending to attend our kettle-drums and receptions? Indeed, Florence, if I must say it, I think you have been generously compensated for everything you have ever done for either of us," and Mrs. Grenman waved a jeweled hand toward the bundles in the centre of the room.

"Julia, I will find out what a professional pianist will charge for playing the piano the same number of hours that I do," Miss Annable began again, calmly.

"Then, not being a professional, I will play for you and Blanche for just half that amount."

Mrs. Grenman rose, picked off a few threads from her handsome black silk dress—she had been darning a tiny bit of lace and proceeded to array herself for the street.

The room in which this conversation took place was the fourth story back of a so-called fashionable boarding-house, and this was Florence Annable's home. Her father and mother were both dead, the former having survived the wreck of a large fortune only a few weeks. When the estate was settled, it was found that there would be enough money to provide Florence, the only unmarried daughter, with the necessities of life. In other words it would pay her board. So, for two years or more she had been dependent upon her wealthy sisters for their wardrobe. It was a disagreeable position for a sensitive and high-minded girl, and it had come at last to be unendurable.

"Florence?"

"Mrs. Grenman was ready to go."

"Well," said her companion, "I shall repeat this conversation to Paul. I tell you that you may be prepared to meet the consequences."

"I am prepared for anything but 'rags and jags,' Julia," her sister replied; "and I beg you to believe that I should not have re-made your cast-off garments so long if it had not been for keeping the peace. Let me tell you what else I am willing to do. You say that some of the costumes I have made from the dresses you have finished wearing have been pretty and stylish. I will hold myself ready to make over the best of them for you to wear again, and I will do it in my best manner."

"And be paid for it?"

"Certainly, like any other dress-maker."

"If you were not a perfect simpton, you would marry Luke Harkness," Mrs. Grenman burst out anew. "Then you would have an establishment equal to your sisters," and there wouldn't be such a horrible inequality in your station as now."

"I marry Luke Harkness?" said Miss Annable, with the first touch of laughter she had shown. "A man old enough to be my grandfather, as deaf as a post, and as bald as an ancient American eagle? I would go out as a cook or housemaid first. Yes, Julia, if the choice were given me of marrying that man or digging my own grave, with the understanding that I was to jump into it when it was completed, I would choose the latter alternative with gratitude."

"And you wish me to understand that you will not play for one of my parties again unless you are paid for it?"

Mrs. Grenman's hand was on the knob of the door as she asked this question. "I wish you to understand that I do not regard your old velvet and silk gowns as a fair equivalent for my services as chief musician," said Miss Annable. "And, also, that I not only believe with the Bible that 'the laborer is worthy of his hire,' but that labor is eminently respectable."

The departing guest's twist of the door-knob was nothing less than vicious. Florence, who knew her sister perfectly understood that the breach between them now would be a hard one to bridge. Work was a degradation, in the opinion of her own near relatives. But it was not so for her. There were two ways in which she knew she could earn a generous support. One was her musical talent, and the other by her taste and ability in designing costumes.

"It is wicked to keep you at the piano, Miss Annable, when we all know you are so fond of dancing, but one plays as you do," her friends were constantly saying.

Now, why, she asked herself, with this available talent in her possession, should she not earn some money and in a business-like and "open and above board" manner, as men earned it? Miss Annable was unable to see why she should be idle, and wear her sister's cast-off clothing any more than the man who had a room across the corridor should be idle and wear his rich brother's "rags and jags."

This question of the utilization of talent had been logically met, and settled a good while before, but the hindrances in the way of putting her theories into practice had been hard to overcome. Her sisters had aimed high and brought down their game. It was no more than fair that she should do the same. Her relatives had frequently told her, instead of occupying the fourth story back in a crowded boarding-house, and making them a world of trouble in explaining and excusing her anomalous position. Their frequent assertions that sister Florence was exceedingly peculiar, and could not be induced to make a home with either of her relatives, were the main trouble. Miss Annable could have made herself useful in either of these establishments, but her liberty was far too precious to jeopardize by any such arrangement. Here in the sky parlor, certain hours of each day were her own, her very own.

A few hours later, Miss Annable was driving in the park with some friends. She passed both of her sisters, and their recognition, though calculated to deceive her companions, was well understood by her. Julia had communicated with Blanche, and they had both shown their displeasure in as marked a manner as the convenances would permit. This recalcitrant member of their aristocratic family was to be brought to terms. Florence Annable smiled as she thought of it.

Clarke Durivage rode along by the side of the landau, and chatted with the young ladies. For the first time since Florence had decided not to wear any more "cast-offs" her courage failed her. She felt it to be a humiliating truth that she cared more for this man's good opinion than for anything else in the world, to think that she was quite independent of remark or criticism from any other quarter, but not from him, filled her with confusion and alarm. Mr. Durivage had been the only man she had met in society who had talked to her as if she were possessed of an equal intelligence.

Miss Annable conversed the subject very thoroughly in these few minutes. Her scorn of her own weakness, as shown by the presence of this man, acted like a spur to her conscience.

"The die is cast," she told herself, as Mr. Durivage bade her good evening.

"The young lady did not estimate her musical talent at its true value. It was almost a case of genius. She could play the works of the most-favored composers, and with a power and expression which delighted the most critical. And she came to pass that Miss Florence Annable was engaged at regular professional prices to play for a party at the house of the wealthy and distinguished Mrs. Van Cortlandt. Her sisters were both present, but neither of them came near her during the evening, and in this way the world found out there had been a quarrel.

"Good evening, Miss Florence."

"Good evening, Mr. Durivage."

"It is rather singular there is no one here to play but you," the gentlemen remarked. I have been waiting a half-hour to invite you to dance."

"It is not the least singular, Mr. Durivage," said the musician, smiling heroically, "for I am regularly employed to play for Mrs. Van Cortlandt's guests this evening."

The plunge was made, the worst was over, and Florence felt that she should look herself squarely in the face when the evening was over.

"And you—you have struck out in this way for yourself?"

There was a strange quality in the gentleman's voice that his companion did not understand.

"Struck out?" Miss Annable laughingly answered. "That is a good phrase. It requires muscle, I assure you."

"But your sisters, Miss Florence?"

"They are here. You must have seen them. The next piece is quadrille, Mr. Durivage. Please direct me to it critically. It is my own composition."

The music was a success. The applause and excitement that followed its conclusion amounted to an ovation. Mr. Durivage drew near the piano, and read the title.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said in loud, clear tones, "the name of the original quadrille which has so delighted us is 'Rags, and Jags, and Velvet Gowns.'"

There came a time when Florence Annable could tell her friend, Mr. Durivage the whole story, and the following is the substance of his reply:

"I determined," he said, "to woo and win you, that night at Mrs. Van Cortlandt's. I had cared for you from the day of our acquaintance, but how could I help feeling that you might be like your sisters—ultra-fashionable, purse-proud, regardless only of appearance."

"What kind of help-meets would your sisters make if misfortune should overtake their husbands? And then Florence, I have always maintained that it was just as reprehensible for a woman to be idle and dependent as for a man. As my wife, there will be no need for you to continue your professional career, but your talent must never be neglected, and for two reasons. First, because it will always be our greatest source of enjoyment; and next, because every woman always holds in her hands the means of support."

He who thinks he can't win is quite sure to be right about it, for he has already lost.

Good things have to be engraved on the memory; had ones stick there of themselves.

Modern Art and Old Designs.

In a letter describing some of the peculiarities of the Paris Exposition the writer says:

It is rather remarkable to note, through the different departments of the main exhibition of industrial arts, the prevalence of a return to old forms and designs instead of an attempt to push original conceptions. In the patterns of laces, the colors and effects in draperies, the forms of iron, wood and metals, this is most noticeable. The Hungarian potteries and Bohemian glass also show it in a very marked degree. One can trace the effect of the Cyprian collections which have been made familiar to designers by Cesnola; and the discoveries of Haussman have certainly had a strong bearing upon recent workmanship.

It gives a grace and beauty to outward shape that is extremely grateful to the eye, and a harmony both of tint and ornamentation to which we have often been unused. Some of the Danish jewelry is particularly notable in this respect. The gold brooches, whether enamelled or in the natural color, are very beautiful—above all some crosses dating from the time of Canute and the early centuries. The bucklers and shields of the Norse heroes are strongly suggested by these richly ornamented creations, which constitute an artistic value wholly beyond their intrinsic worth. They are as rare and fine in their simpler way as the wonderful jewelled orchids of Tiffany in their extreme splendor. Nothing so gorgeous as these last, in jewels, has ever been offered before, and they are as amazing for originality as for beauty. They are one of the triumphs of modern artistic training.

The Italian lamps are another compendium to the past, in the ancient forms which have been so closely copied. These are wonderfully elegant and decorative, whether in wrought black iron or costly silver. Compared with the tawdry effect of the usual manufactured articles, they are pure works of art. But to one who sees for the first time France, Italy or any of these earlier nations, it is not strange that in such productions their work should be so outstanding.

whole life of their people is passed among the purest artistic influences. The houses they live in, the churches and cathedrals which play so large a part in their education, the facades of their public buildings, the fountains, and arches, and monuments, the statues and terraces, each and everything is a training of the senses and the imagination.

Already to start from, they are at a point which we can only reach by great effort in centuries. It is impossible not to be impressed with the spirit of refinement and culture which is so omnipresent, and when to this is added the more impressive and plastic nature, there can be but one result. Each has its specialties in which it is most successful, as each has the fauna and flora which belong to its climatic conditions; but always art, which is but a mission with us, is indigenous here. Pray heaven that we may ever reach the time when we too may hail it as a gift of nature rather than of grace!

A Young Lady.

She was a pretty young lady, very charmingly dressed and personally quite attractive. She was out at the park the other day, and she got on a crowded car. She had a seat, and several men were standing up. There came on to the car an old lady very poorly dressed. She looked frail and seemed tired. She looked about her but the seats were full. Several very elegant dudes were seated around, but nobody made any movement to give up his place. Seeing this, the young lady of whom I spoke got up and gave the old lady her seat and stood up beside a dude in the very next seat. The dude's knees and invited the young lady to take his seat. About all the dude expressed a due and anxious interest in the lady, and she was very much disturbed. This is not very much of a story, it is not a very dramatic situation, but it somehow means a great deal.

Mrs. Gladstone's career as wife and mother has been pointed to for years as a model. The statesman has found in his spouse a true helpmeet, who sympathized with all his aspirations, with confidence in all his movements, and one who in the darkest moments of his long life of political activity has looked to the future to bring him success in all his projects and vindication of his motives. An amusing anecdote is told of the illustration of this wisely, unswerving faith. After the late general election, when the appeal to the country had resulted adversely to Mr. Gladstone's Irish policy, Mrs. Gladstone was found somewhat depressed by a visitor at Hawarden castle, while the aged old Mrs. Gladstone, sitting in his study up stairs, "Never mind," said the visitor, sympathetically. "There is one above who will bring things right in His own good time." Yes, indeed," replied the good lady. "He will bring all things right; but he will forget all about his lunch if I don't call him down."

To Be Conversationalists.

Conversation must embrace mutual intelligence; a good listener is a good talker." Again, much avails in knowing what to avoid saying, and also deliver us from the vanity of the parlor lecturer; or from those who talk simply for effect. It is the duty of every amiable, educated and witty woman to be agreeable to all. The beneficial influence which they exert is, in consequence, incalculable. By beginning at home, by exercising your heart and your manner in your own household you will soon find to your children and friends, that even in your "table talks" you will have done much to qualify yourself and your listeners for that conversation which, as meaning familiar discourse and interchange of sentiment, is the most truly refined and useful of the life, the intellect, the culture of the one maintaining it.—[Kansas City Journal.]

To be vain is rather a mark of humility than pride. Vain men delight in telling what honors have been done them, what great company they have kept, and the like; by which they plainly confess that these honors were more than their due and such as their friends would not believe if they had not been told; whereas a man truly proud thinks the honor below is to merit and seems to boast.

When a man wants to find fault he will do so if he has to spend all his time looking for it.

For all Throat and Lung Diseases. Dr. James M. Solomon, Jr.'s, Cough Cure. It has cured thousands. All druggists, 50 cents per bottle.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge Munday, Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Texas, says: "I have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: "He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters."

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure all Malarial Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequalled. Price 50c, and $1. at Arthur Hudson's drugstore.

Hay Fever.

I have been an annual sufferer from hay fever for forty years. It recurs every year for 20th each year. For several summers I have used Ely's Cream Balm with excellent results. I am free from any asthmatic symptoms. I hope many sufferers will be induced to try the remedy.—George Earp, Baltimore, Md.

Interested People.

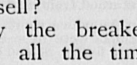

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does it, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

How Repulsive.

Is bad breath, and yet how many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends with the foul odor of their breath. If there was no need of having a good breath, it is an unparagonable breach of good manners to obtrude such an offence on good people. Foul breath arises from disordered digestion which can be corrected by using Sulphur Bitters, and the result will be a pure, sweet breath.

Two kinds of lamp-chimneys; one breaks; the other does not. Which do you think your grocer or glass-man would rather sell?

If you buy the breaker, you're buying all the time. If you buy the not-breaker, he may not live to sell you another. You know him—which do you think he'd rather you'd buy?

The one that doesn't break is called the "pearl-top" and looks like this:  Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh. The man that sells it is paid to give you a new one for every "pearl-top" chimney that breaks in use.

By the way, if you want to know about it, send to Macbeth for a primer.

The Theatrical Manager.

There is no more assiduous public pouter than the theatrical manager. Two centuries ago his craft began to feel the public pulse. No one knows better than he the importance of keeping his star continually before the public. "Life" is a clever cartoon, in which an actress is disturbed in her boudoir by the entrance of a footman who announces a caller. "If it is the Prince of Wales," says the footlight autocrat, "I'm not at home." "It's a soap manufacturer," responds the lackey. "Show him in!" is the gracious behest. Devices to attract the public eye are endless, but in no instance is the supremacy of the newspaper as an advertising medium omitted.—Exchange.

An Exiled Russian Grand Duke.

A good many society people who attended the grand ball at the Galt house, given in honor of the Russian Grand Duke Alexis, will be interested in the news from St. Petersburg that that handsome prince has been disgraced and exiled to Siberia. Alexis has been conducting a "flirtation" so open and shameless with the Countess Zenaide de Beauharnais, wife of the Duke de Leuchtenberg, that he has been deprived of his office of lord high admiral of the fleet and shorn of his other honors and exiled besides—at least the dispatch says so, though it looks incredible. The lovely countess has been given permission to leave the empire for an indefinite period.

When Alexis visited this country he was the recipient of a constant round of social attentions. He was in Louisville in 1872, I think, and the ball given in his honor was one of the most brilliant in the history of the city. The belles of Kentucky vied with each other in their efforts to secure the favor of this scion of royalty. Alexis made a good impression while in this country, and seemed to be very much of a gentleman, even if he was a descendant of an effete monarchy. A poor lady living in Henry county went insane on the subject of the prince's visit to Louisville, and imagined herself engaged to him. Her friends could never up to the day of her death relieve her of the hallucination that she was the promised bride of Alexis. She would frequently come to Louisville to look for him and prepare for the wedding. She went by the name of "the Princess Lucinda," and was of a good family.—Louisville Post.

A Jumbo Among Chimneys.

The tall chimneys erected by the Harbors and Globe yarn mills now bid fair to be eclipsed by one being erected at the Fall River Iron Works company's mill. The experts on the heights of chimneys say that it will be the second highest in this country.

Instead of hoisting the brick and mortar on the outside, as is commonly done, an elevator is being built to run up the interior of the chimney. It is to be run by a hoisting engine by means of a wire cable. As the work progresses the guides for the elevator will be erected inside, and the overhead work moved upward. There will be 1,500,000 bricks used, and the total cost will not be far from $10,000.

The work on the foundation is completed. It contains 2,000 tons of Fall River granite, held together with 700 barrels of Portland cement. The bottom stone is 8 feet below tide water and the top one is 8 feet above. The total height of the chimney above the level of the ground will be 340 feet. The pressure on the foundation stones will be two and a half tons per square foot. At the base the stack will be square, but about 20 feet from the ground the corners will be sloped away, and the whole affair will rise in circular form into the air, and in general outline will seem like a gigantic baseball bat. Away up in the air the chimney will be crowned by a terra cotta cap, each section of which will be 5 feet thick. Other dimensions are: Diameter at base, 30 feet; diameter at head, 21 feet; diameter at smallest part, 15 feet 4 inches. The flue will be 11 feet in diameter.—Fall River Globe.

A Costly Petticoat.

There are two events, apart from the exposition, about which all Paris is gossiping. Even the thousands of visitors know of and are interested in one of these which promises to be more than a nine days' wonder. This is the purchase of a petticoat, a bona fide petticoat, which was an indescribable combination of silk, flowers and lace, and for which was paid the fabulous sum of 15,000 francs. Rumor has it that it was purchased by an American Croesus, and Frenchmen are congratulating themselves that their countrywomen, however eccentric, never tempted them to commit such a piece of extravagance. The Croesus may have some trouble with the customs on his arrival in America, as the flowers and lace are put on this now celebrated petticoat in such profusion that a suspicion of smuggling may involuntarily find room in the mind of the matter-of-fact officer. But the purchaser will no doubt be able to prove his honesty of purpose in importing the article. This petticoat, which actually sold for the sum named above, is but an exaggerated example of those now worn by women of wealth and fashion.—Chicago Herald.

The Shah's Gorgeous Dress.

His costumes have been something absolutely gorgeous. The gold belt around his waist is fastened with the biggest emerald in the world. He wears breastpins of enormous diamonds, besides which he has a tremendous aigrette of brilliants in his hat and strings of precious stones scattered all over him. A man who understands such things saw him at the opera and said that he would be very glad to buy him as he stood for $1,000,000 and return him next day unharmed minus his clothes. His majesty wears, among other ornaments, the sash of the Order of the Garter, to the center of which he has fastened his enormous diamond called the Sea of Light. The man who had valued his majesty at $1,000,000 did not notice this at first, but when he did he admitted that he was willing to increase his price considerably.—London Cable.

A Cossack Giantess.

The sensation of Berlin is just now a young Cossack giantess, who is being exhibited at the popular "Passage Panopticon." The girl, who is 11 years old, is nearly three yards high; she weighs twenty stone, and is still growing very rapidly. She is very pretty, with large dark eyes and a pleasant face, and in the national costume of the Don Cossacks, which consists of a red skirt, blue jacket, long apron, embroidered in gold, and necklaces of many colors, she captures everybody's heart. But since she is still chiefly interested in her dolls and toys, she cannot be said to return the sentiments of her admirers.—Pall Mall Gazette.

"THE SILENT CITY."

Wonderful Photograph Taken of a Remarkable Mirage in Alaska.

During the past fifteen years Professor Richard D. Willoughby has been a character in Alaska well known among whites and natives. As one of the early settlers of old Fort Wrangel, in which his individuality was stamped among the sturdy miners who frequented the then important trading post, he has grown with the far off territory, and is today as much a part of Alaska's history as the totem poles are identified with the past lives of native chieftains. To him belongs the honor of being the first American who discovered gold within Alaska's ice bound peaks.

Professor Willoughby is favorably known from Fort Tongas to Mount St. Elias. He lived a third of a century along the coast, and his knowledge of Southeastern Alaska forms an Arctic encyclopedia of which he himself is an inseparable part. He left civilization so long ago that he does not remember of ever having seen a locomotive or a train of cars. He is a man of robust stature and about 60 years of age. As a miner he has no equal in the territory. He has exposed more locations of mineral wealth than any other three men, and is at present the owner of many promising claims. Among other things upon which he employs his spare moments is photography. While pursuing this scientific amusement Professor Willoughby frequently discovered remarkable mirages, and after four years of labor, amid dangers, privation and suffering, he accomplished for the civilized world a feat in photography heretofore considered problematic. It was on the longest day in June, 1888, that Willoughby's camera took within its grasp the reproduction of a city remote and, at first glance, thought to be within the recesses of another world. This remarkable photograph was taken at 9 o'clock at night in Glacier bay.

The mirage city was named by Professor Willoughby "The Silent City." The first two copies were sent to the government officials at Washington, D. C. The second was placed in the hands of the purser of an Alaskan steamer, and the third copy was sent to The Chronicle. It is 10 inches in length by 8 inches in width. The view, sometimes indistinct, is apparently taken from a public park or garden on a hill. In the foreground is a graveled walk, a stout fence, a rustic seat and a little child at play. Beyond the stone wall are the roofs of houses, with clumps of trees at the sides. In the distance are the half completed towers of a cathedral and several tall public buildings, while far away, enveloped in what appears to be a cloud like atmosphere, are tall smoke stacks and the towers of churches. The style of architecture is decidedly modern, the roofs are like those of England or the British provinces. The chimneys are made of tiles. Taken as a whole, it is a remarkable photograph, artistic to a large degree.

A correspondent of The Chronicle, writing from Juneau, Alaska, says of Willoughby and his wonderful photograph: "The professor is perfectly straight in his business transactions, and in his dealings with him I have found him the soul of honor. I have frequently seen mirages in Alaska, but never saw the photograph of one. Peterson Brothers, who are the only first class artists here, say the picture is a genuine production, and think it is of a city in Russia. San Francisco can probably locate the town."

A hundred people or more were shown the photograph yesterday. Some regarded the whole thing as a fraud, while others believed it the genuine photographic result of a mirage. One man related his experience with a mirage in Death Valley, in San Bernardino county. Going down the mountain side into the valley one sees a mirage representing a luxuriant garden with lakes, rivers, waterfalls and rich vegetation. Upon reaching the base of the mountain a barren sandy desert is found in the valley.

The expert photographer employed at Tabor's art rooms examined the photograph critically and said: "I never heard of a city represented in a mirage before. I have seen islands and landscapes, but never a city. The photograph is the result of a badly exposed plate. I regard it as a trick. Such a result could be obtained in making a copy from a similar photograph by long exposure on a bright moonlight night, say an hour's exposure. But the figure of a human being, like those of the children in the foreground of this picture, would not show at all in the representation of a mirage. This photograph was taken by a rapid exposure, about two or three seconds in duration, either in a bad light or a poor exposure."

Mirages, as a general rule, represent scenes in the immediate vicinity, not over a few hundred miles away at the best. At first the city of Victoria was suggested, but an old resident of that city denied the likeness. Victoria is fully 900 miles from Glacier bay, where the alleged photograph was made. A score of persons ventured an opinion as to the location of "The Silent City." However, no one could be found who recognized the scene. At Tabor's and other photographic establishments it was thought the picture was that of a city in France or Germany. A dozen persons agreed that it resembled Montreal or Quebec, possibly Halifax. The agents of the Canadian Pacific, who are well acquainted with Canadian cities, stated that it could not be Toronto, Ottawa or Quebec. They were divided in opinion as to Halifax and Montreal. In the latter city there is a cathedral building resembling the one in the photograph. As a final result of yesterday's investigation Montreal appears to be the most likely city represented in the wonderful mirage picture of "The Silent City."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The People's Opportunity!

There are, no doubt, hundreds of people in New England who just at present are in want of something in our line, and who would gladly avail themselves of such an opportunity as we now offer if fully aware of the large saving they can effect by embracing it. To these we offer below some pointed facts and figures, remarking only that these figures are solely the result of cutting down our profits, and that we do not wish them to be held as a permanent limit for the quantity of goods which they represent.

250 Chamber Sets, $10 to $500

Why do we carry so many different styles? Because we wish to give our patrons the greatest facilities for making selections, and to have them feel they are not compelled to pay a dollar more than their own judgment tells them they can afford.

200 Parlor Sets, $35 to $450

We do not confine ourselves to any particular class of goods, but carry all kinds, from the lowest price to the most expensive, in goods that are reliable and will give satisfaction to the purchaser, and we sell everything to furnish a house complete.

100 Sideboards, $18 to $300

You will find if you take the pains to investigate that not only do we sell goods the lowest, but that the style of goods we carry is better suited to your wants than any other house in New England can show.

Carpets of all kinds, 25c. to $3 yd.

We are noted among manufacturers of Carpets for our very extensive orders, often buying a thousand rolls at one time, and we always get prices which other dealers know nothing of. Hence we can sell you carpets cheaper than any one else.

Our Liberal Offer.

We will sell you enough goods to furnish four rooms in good taste and with nice goods, for $125, and will guarantee you that the same goods purchased elsewhere will cost you at least $150 to $175.

R. R. Fare and Freight Allowed.

We deliver free to any Railroad Freight Depot in New England, and on purchases of $100 or over we allow railroad fare for one person, both ways to Boston. All our goods are warranted.

Write for Catalogue. Liberal Terms when desired.

—Mr. G. W. Hollis of Wellesley has made an assignment. His creditors will be paid in full.
—The house moved by C. S. Packard of Waltham on David Warren's land, makes things that vicinity in close quarters as the three houses are not more than six feet apart.

—Last Saturday evening four young men got into a dispute and ended it in something more like a fight. One man was struck in the face by a broken bottle and a large gash cut requiring a doctor's services and several stitches taken.
—Complaints have been heard by citizens located on high ground in regard to the rifle range in the pit back of Washington street. Many believe it is careless on the part of those using the guns as the pit is 75 feet deep and a very good location for this practice. There is no way for a bullet to get out of the pit unless fired intentionally.

—A large gang of men are engaged blasting out the huge ledge of rock above Rice's crossing station. All trains are flagged and are obliged to stop here, many being delayed quite a while, as the tracks are covered by large rocks and men are kept busy all day in clearing them. All trains will make quicker time when this ledge is removed and the road straightened.
—The Martha's Vineyard Gazette speaks as follows of a party of Newton men who have been camping out near Edgartown: Mr. Benjamin C. Fisher, formerly of this town, and Messrs. E. H. Kenney, Dr. F. W. Freeman, and Councilman E. E. Moody of Newton have been in camp below Starbuck's Neck this week. The camp has been named "Camp Mosquito," and the boys are just having a tall time. Wednesday evening on the arrival of the 8 p. m. train the officers were joined by Officer R. S. Harrison, Officer L. Leonard, Messrs. E. H. Shattuck and J. J. Kenney, also of Newton, who were met at the station by the former campers, bundled aboard an illuminated chariot, and the music of strident instruments and under escort of Mr. Moody and colleagues, one at each wheel, the procession started via Main and Water streets, for the camp, which was reached in "dew" time. It was reported during the evening on the street that while the receiving party were at the station waiting for their brethren, the mosquitoes of the Reservation fell upon the large church and men were kept busy all day in clearing them. All trains will make quicker time when this ledge is removed and the road straightened.

—Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Kimball, who have been the guests of Col. Robinson at Bar Harbor and Islesboro, will probably arrive home the last of the week.

—The work of building the additions to the Episcopal chapel has been commenced, and will be rapidly pushed forward. Mr. Stevens, the builder of Newton Centre, has the contract.
—Rev. E. D. Eaton, who occupied the pulpit last Sunday at the Congregational church, is spending the week with his brother, Dr. Eaton, and will preach at Dorchester next Sunday.
—Mr. P. McMaster and family will sail for Edinburgh on the steamer "City of Paris," which leaves New York Oct. 5. The house now occupied by them has been leased to Mr. F. H. Gould, who with his family resided at the Highlands, last winter.

—The Bowen block, containing two stores and two tenements, is nearly completed and will soon be ready for occupancy. The tenements are let to Mr. Walter Deal and Mr. L. F. Mason. Mr. Bowen will build a wall of manufactured stone to take the place of the high board fence on the railroad line.
—The Newton Highlands Base Ball club defeated the Emmets of Charlestown on Saturday with a score of 10 to 0. Bright pitched a very even game, only three safe hits being made off his delivery. Other noticeable plays were the catching and throwing of Peckham and the second base plays of Hannigan.

—Before the time of railroads, the turnpike was thought to be the proper thing to have to connect the cities and the large towns, and so it came about that the Worcester turnpike was built from Boston to Worcester in nearly a direct line passing through this part of the town, that part of the pike which was in Newton being now Boylston street, building it over the highest hills and through deepest valleys, its projectors seemed to be impressed with the delusion that the distance was less than passing around a hill or valley. Toll-gates were located at intervals where the tolls were collected, one of which was near the railroad bridge on Boylston street; also, milestones were set up, one of which is now standing near the junction of Boylston street with the road looking like a grave-stone. The inscription is only partly legible, indicating the number of miles to Boston line, and that the turnpike was opened for public travel in 1810. Most town ways in those days were laid out from 30 to 35 ft., but this turnpike was laid out 60 feet in width. As time went on, portions of the road-bed have been appropriated by the abutters, and it is with difficulty that the original line can be located in some portions. The city is reducing the width of this thoroughfare by making it sixty feet wide from Centre to Woodward street, and fifty-five feet from this point to the river line dividing Wellesley from Newton Upper Falls.

—Constance Fenimore Woolson's latest novel, "Jupiter Lights," will be concluded in the September Number of Harper's Magazine. Critics who have followed the installments in the Magazine remark that the story does not make a single halt for retrospective analysis, but throughout gives the impression of the inevitable onward movement of events. It is more dramatic than the drama.

—Rev. E. D. Eaton, who occupied the pulpit last Sunday at the Congregational church, is spending the week with his brother, Dr. Eaton, and will preach at Dorchester next Sunday.
—Mr. P. McMaster and family will sail for Edinburgh on the steamer "City of Paris," which leaves New York Oct. 5. The house now occupied by them has been leased to Mr. F. H. Gould, who with his family resided at the Highlands, last winter.

—The Bowen block, containing two stores and two tenements, is nearly completed and will soon be ready for occupancy. The tenements are let to Mr. Walter Deal and Mr. L. F. Mason. Mr. Bowen will build a wall of manufactured stone to take the place of the high board fence on the railroad line.
—The Newton Highlands Base Ball club defeated the Emmets of Charlestown on Saturday with a score of 10 to 0. Bright pitched a very even game, only three safe hits being made off his delivery. Other noticeable plays were the catching and throwing of Peckham and the second base plays of Hannigan.

—Before the time of railroads, the turnpike was thought to be the proper thing to have to connect the cities and the large towns, and so it came about that the Worcester turnpike was built from Boston to Worcester in nearly a direct line passing through this part of the town, that part of the pike which was in Newton being now Boylston street, building it over the highest hills and through deepest valleys, its projectors seemed to be impressed with the delusion that the distance was less than passing around a hill or valley. Toll-gates were located at intervals where the tolls were collected, one of which was near the railroad bridge on Boylston street; also, milestones were set up, one of which is now standing near the junction of Boylston street with the road looking like a grave-stone. The inscription is only partly legible, indicating the number of miles to Boston line, and that the turnpike was opened for public travel in 1810. Most town ways in those days were laid out from 30 to 35 ft., but this turnpike was laid out 60 feet in width. As time went on, portions of the road-bed have been appropriated by the abutters, and it is with difficulty that the original line can be located in some portions. The city is reducing the width of this thoroughfare by making it sixty feet wide from Centre to Woodward street, and fifty-five feet from this point to the river line dividing Wellesley from Newton Upper Falls.

—Constance Fenimore Woolson's latest novel, "Jupiter Lights," will be concluded in the September Number of Harper's Magazine. Critics who have followed the installments in the Magazine remark that the story does not make a single halt for retrospective analysis, but throughout gives the impression of the inevitable onward movement of events. It is more dramatic than the drama.

—The water rose three inches in the river last week.
—The hoary mail is running on full time and doing a very brisk business.
—Work has been suspended for the present on the highways by the town of Wellesley.

—Officer Harrison was on duty last Saturday evening, after a vacation of three days.
—The Dr. Solomon combination has been the main attraction here evenings this week.
—A C. W. Wilson's paper mill has shut down for two weeks. A few repairs will be made.

—Mr. Charles Hale has 75 men and 22 horses at work laying out streets through Waban.
—Mr. G. W. Hollis of Wellesley has made an assignment. His creditors will be paid in full.
—The house moved by C. S. Packard of Waltham on David Warren's land, makes things that vicinity in close quarters as the three houses are not more than six feet apart.

—Last Saturday evening four young men got into a dispute and ended it in something more like a fight. One man was struck in the face by a broken bottle and a large gash cut requiring a doctor's services and several stitches taken.
—Complaints have been heard by citizens located on high ground in regard to the rifle range in the pit back of Washington street. Many believe it is careless on the part of those using the guns as the pit is 75 feet deep and a very good location for this practice. There is no way for a bullet to get out of the pit unless fired intentionally.

—A large gang of men are engaged blasting out the huge ledge of rock above Rice's crossing station. All trains are flagged and are obliged to stop here, many being delayed quite a while, as the tracks are covered by large rocks and men are kept busy all day in clearing them. All trains will make quicker time when this ledge is removed and the road straightened.
—The Martha's Vineyard Gazette speaks as follows of a party of Newton men who have been camping out near Edgartown: Mr. Benjamin C. Fisher, formerly of this town, and Messrs. E. H. Kenney, Dr. F. W. Freeman, and Councilman E. E. Moody of Newton have been in camp below Starbuck's Neck this week. The camp has been named "Camp Mosquito," and the boys are just having a tall time. Wednesday evening on the arrival of the 8 p. m. train the officers were joined by Officer R. S. Harrison, Officer L. Leonard, Messrs. E. H. Shattuck and J. J. Kenney, also of Newton, who were met at the station by the former campers, bundled aboard an illuminated chariot, and the music of strident instruments and under escort of Mr. Moody and colleagues, one at each wheel, the procession started via Main and Water streets, for the camp, which was reached in "dew" time. It was reported during the evening on the street that while the receiving party were at the station waiting for their brethren, the mosquitoes of the Reservation fell upon the large church and men were kept busy all day in clearing them. All trains will make quicker time when this ledge is removed and the road straightened.

—The level land of the Highlands is not favorable for washouts in this section, we expect to pay our share of the extra expense, all the same.
—Miss Jones of Minneapolis, who has been visiting with her sister Mrs. Nash, has gone to Vermont for a few days before returning to the West.
—Letters remaining in the postoffice Aug. 1: Miss C. Cameron, Miss Fanny Garvy, Miss Annie Hughes, Mrs. Winifred McElroy, Henry C. Wallace.
—Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Kimball, who have been the guests of Col. Robinson at Bar Harbor and Islesboro, will probably arrive home the last of the week.

—The work of building the additions to the Episcopal chapel has been commenced, and will be rapidly pushed forward. Mr. Stevens, the builder of Newton Centre, has the contract.
—Rev. E. D. Eaton, who occupied the pulpit last Sunday at the Congregational church, is spending the week with his brother, Dr. Eaton, and will preach at Dorchester next Sunday.
—Mr. P. McMaster and family will sail for Edinburgh on the steamer "City of Paris," which leaves New York Oct. 5. The house now occupied by them has been leased to Mr. F. H. Gould, who with his family resided at the Highlands, last winter.

to the county commissioners, asking them to compel the work on the bridge here to be completed. It is nearly a year that this work has been in halves and at present no progress is being made.

—Nearly two hundred tickets are sold in this vicinity for the English picnic at Downer landing next Tuesday. If it is a pleasant day it is expected that this will be the largest gathering of English people that has ever occurred in this vicinity.

—Last week the officers of Charity Lodge No. 98, I.O.G.T., were installed for the ensuing quarter by Mrs. Josie Jefferson, D.G. C. T.; H. E. Phiney, G.M., and Miss Carrie Phiney, D.G.M.; P.C.T., Henry I. Copeland; C. T. W. E. Frost; S.J.T. Thomas Moore; V. T. Mrs. Ida Forknall; Secretary, George Jackson; A.S., Miss A. Dornier; F.S., Edward Stearns; T., James Galway; M., Mary Scott, D.M., Rachel Scott; C., Agnes Moore; G., Little Temple; S., Rebecca Wilson.

—Last Saturday afternoon quietly and peacefully little Alfred Butterfield fell asleep in Jesus. Only 11 years of age, bright and smart, full of life and vigor, enjoying his school, his play, and everything that boys of his age are wont to enjoy. He was laid upon his sick bed in the early spring months, and although he has been a constant and severe sufferer during the months that are past, he has borne it with patience and fortitude becoming one of the ripest years. He had many friends. The children and the teachers all loved him. The funeral took place at the North Evangelical church, Monday afternoon, many of the Sunday school children attending. Rev. Mr. Lamb officiated. The interment was at Newton cemetery.

—Ella—"Where will you pass the summer? Are you going into the country?" Bella—"I don't know. I'm sure. Papa said something about his going into insolvency, and, if he says so, I suppose we shall have to go there."

—Convicted beggar—"Your Honor, could you not change my sentence of imprisonment into a fine?" No, that I cannot do. And where would you get the money if I did?" "I could beg a little every day until I had enough."

his European trip. He sailed from Liverpool to Sandy Hook in the new steamship "Teutonic" of the White Star line. It was his first trip across the big pond and he arrived in port seven days after leaving Liverpool. Mr. Springer says that she is a very fine steamship and made excellent time, her record being 45 miles an hour day during the trip. The stories published about her racing during the voyage were pure fiction, the outcome of some newspaper writer's lively imagination.

—Liberal—One hundred of our citizens during the past two weeks have been presented to the Y. M. C. A. by the New Haven Manufacturing Co. Their agents have been hard at work trying to persuade the public that it was really a gift, but skepticism was so deep-rooted in our people that it has been difficult for them to believe.
However, they have been brought to realize the truth and are now happy, and should need more of the stoves, or furniture consisting of ovens, flat-irons, broilers, heating stoves, etc., the Newton agents
S. O. Thayer & Co., are prepared to supply the demands.

—Miss Cora L. Russell of Orchard street was married on Monday afternoon at Channing church to Mr. E. L. Lincoln, Wood of Andover, Mass. Rev. Mr. Hornbroke officiated and a select company of relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony. Mr.
Emery F. Russell, a brother of the bride, acted as usher and Orla Anna Russell, a four-year-old niece of the bride, was a very charming maid of honor. A reception was held afterwards at the bride's home on Orchard street, where numerous good wishes and congratulations were received by the happy couple.

—A California paper gives the particulars of the marriage of Rev. Eli Fay, formerly pastor of Channing Church, and Miss Harriet Kelsey, at Los Angeles, Aug. 6th.
It says: "Fay is a wealthy and distinguished Unitarian divine, and Miss Kelsey is very well known in this city. She was one of the originators of the Channing Auxiliary, a prominent member of the Century Club, and an earnest and almost indispensable worker for the Women's Union.
She is eminently fitted for her new position in life, and her marriage has been the cause of much congratulation among her many friends in this city."

—It is estimated that the population of this city is about 25,000, taking as a basis the number of polls, according to the figures of the assessors for 1888. The city is growing very rapidly, and a large addition has been made to the residential population within the past few years. Many houses are now in process of erection and portions of the city heretofore undeveloped, are being put into the market through generous expenditure of money. This is notably so in Waban, where new streets are being laid out and large tracts of land laid out in suitable house lots. With the advent of street car service, uniting more closely the various wards, the future growth of Newton promises to be very rapid.

—A new feature in the pedagogical department of the Chautauqua University this year has been the exhibition of the work of pupils from the common schools of different States. The exhibition attracted much attention, and hundreds of people visited the rooms and were surprised and pleased to see the good work done by the children of our public schools. Kindergarten work was exhibited from the schools of La Porte, Ind. Work in Industrial Drawing from the schools of Providence, R. I.
An exhibition of sewing was sent from Springfield, Mass., and one from Newton-ville, Mass. The specimens sent were exceedingly creditable to the pupils who kindly loaned their work. Among the specimens of work were button-holes, patching and darning. Also aprons, pillow-slips, underwear, dolls' clothing, an elaborately trimmed child's dress, tray cloths, napkins and other articles. These were all so well executed that it could hardly be believed that such work could be done by children. Great skill has been acquired in many cases, and also a fondness for such work will be invaluable to the girls and boys through life.

NEWTON ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

WORK ON THE NEW ROAD TO BE COM-MENCED AT ONCE.

In the last issue of the GRAPHIC allusion was made to the progress of the Newton electric street railway project and reasons given for the delay in the construction of the road. Work on the proposed loop road, running through Newton, Waltham and Watertown, will be commenced immediately and pushed rapidly until completed. A meeting of the board of directors was held in Boston, Monday, the first business being the election of officers. Mr. Horace B. Parker having resigned as president, owing to important business interests, it became necessary to fill the vacancy and Mr. George W. Morse was unanimously chosen as his successor. Mr. John C.
Lane was elected treasurer and clerk, and Mr. F. G. L. Henderson, superintendent of the road. The board of directors comprise Messrs. George W. Morse, Horace B. Parker, William A. Boland,
M. F. Dickinson, Jr., C. W. Smith,
John A. Pray and John C. Lane, clerk.
It was decided to commence at once laying the tracks on Washington street from West Newton to Newton, connecting with the West End tracks on Centre street and the work will be started as soon as the necessary materials can be procured, and the committee on licenses decide as to the location of the tracks in Washington street. There have been so many street railways of late in process of construction that it has been difficult to obtain the rails and materials for building the road. This is one and the chief cause for the delay in building the street railway in this city.

An important change will probably be made in the route in order to overcome the objections of the Fitchburg Railroad company in relation to the Beaver Brook crossing in Waltham, over which the street cars would pass in accordance with the present locations. To obviate this difficulty the Newton street Railway Company petitioned the Waltham board of aldermen Monday evening for the right to run the tracks down Main to Newton street, through Newton to River street and thence through River and Pleasant streets to Watertown.

The petition was received and referred to the street commissioners. By this change, the tracks will run both sides of the cotton mill in Waltham, accommodating the bleaching people and being of especial advantage to the residents of Nonantum, giving an easy and convenient method of transportation to patrons in the latter place to Waltham, Watertown and the North side of Newton.

When the road is completed, electric power will be used, the cars to be propelled by the Thompson-Houston overhead system. The electric power will be furnished by the company and the power station will probably be located on Crafts street in the building, now owned by the Newton & Watertown Gas Light Co., containing the electric plant formerly used by the Newton Electric Light and Power company. The headquarters of the street railroad company will be temporarily located at Waltham and with the completion of the road, probably at Newtonville. The gentlemen interested in the road are among the most active and prominent business men in this city and everything will be done to render the equipment and service first-class in every particular. The president of the company, Mr. Morse, is a very energetic, wide-awake gentleman, who will spare no pains to render the road a popular and financial success. The superintendent, Mr. F. G. L. Henderson, has had a long experience in the railroad business, having been for 7 years in the superintendency of the office of the Boston & Albany Railroad and 7 years local paymaster of the same company at Boston. His long residence in Newton and familiarity with the needs and desires of the people along the line of the proposed road will render

The World's Acceptance of Us.

Goethe says, "The world accepts every person for what he gives himself out to be."

At first flash we are inclined to challenge this statement. But the fact is we "give ourselves out" in a great many ways we neither intend or suspect. One's carriage, movements, expression of face, attitudes, voice, the choice and fit of our clothes and our habits, our friends and companions—all are but a network of "lopped and windowed raggedness" through which he that runs may get a glimpse of our real character and know more in certain ways about us than we know about ourselves.

A dog always knows when you are afraid of him. You march past him with an air of bravado. What slink of your eye, or untoward wrinkling of your forehead, or unconscious quickening of your motion, gave out to the dog that your heart was being dissolved within you? There was something that told it; and the dog knew it. A horse knows instantly when the hand of a master holds the reins; and little children know whom to trust and whom to suspect, whom to obey and whom to defy.

You enter a street-car and the man opposite who gives you a casual glance sets eyes very definitely some things you never suspected in yourself. There is a fine line of superciliousness in your face, especially when the car goes past a low quarter, there is a slight toss of your head when you gather back your skirts from the washerwoman with the dirty baby; there was hardly a hair-breadth of motion, but it told direction as plainly as if it had been two miles. You pose before yourself and your world as a benevolent person. You assist at the Cash-girl's Fair and the Children's Fresh-Air Fund and dress Christmas dolls, and you love your neighbor as yourself in many ways which you could not, but you "give yourself out to be" something quite different from your ideal self by a turn of your lip or a tone of the voice—a word spoken or a word omitted.

You have heard people use French phrases to convey the idea that they were conversant with that language; but instead they gave out very definitely that they knew nothing about it. Some slight difference of sound—very slight, but absolutely impossible to one who understood himself—betrays alike the ignorance and pretense of a would-be Frenchman. Have you never seen young girls sign themselves in autograph books "cette amie," or "cette amie"? Well, they simply "give themselves out."

Have you never seen a lady keep the conversation in her hands and at her own level? from herself as the centre she reels off platitudes, or huris javelins of remarks among her guests who grasp monosyllabic replies. This lady prides herself upon being an entertainer, a conversationalist, the queen of the occasion; but in truth she "gives herself out" as a fearful bore—a person to be run from a thousand miles.

"It might have been worse," said an old Englishman when his wife died: "it might have been me." He thought he was "justifying the ways of God to man"—he was, for everybody else was of opinion that it had better have been him that died.

"I keep my keyhole stuffed with paper," said a discreet diuenna in a whisper; and this "gave out" that she herself was in the habit of keyholes.

A lady makes herself a slave to an elegant wardrobe—and she looks like what she subjects herself to; she conveys some indefinite impression of the supremacy of clothes and the subordination of herself. She can never have the subtle air of distinction which a woman has who does not think of her clothes, who can look right without spending great and constant thought upon her garments.

So in a thousand ways, the impression we really make is exactly opposite to the impression we designed to make.

Probably the great German was not far from the truth when he said, "The world accepts every person for what he gives himself out to be."—August Wide Awake.

The Earliest Memory.

If you wish to make an entertaining experiment with the memories of your friends, try, sometime when a group of people are in the mood of playful reminiscence, to find out from each one the very first thing in life which made a lasting impression upon the memory. Every one has heard of the assertion of Charles Dickens that he remembered being handed hastily as a baby, from one woman to another at the time of a carriage accident and learning afterward that this really took place when he was only six months old.

Very few of us can remember anything so early in life as this, but it is odd how far back into our earliest years the memory gropes its way to some charming or startling occurrence.

One summer evening several people were seated on a vine-covered piazza, talking of this and of that, when the conversation drifted to this subject of early memories.

A lady described a walk in a country road with her mother as the first thing she could remember. A tall girl spoke of her delight at catching a butterfly as her first knowledge. A young collegian declared that his intense hatred of an oil cloth bib, marked "Baby" in large letters, was his introduction to emotion and memory.

"As soon as I could talk I struck for a maskin under my chin," said he.

One after another told their little stories with the pleasure which always goes with keen personal experience of this sort until it came the turn of active Master Jack.

"The first thing I can now remember," he said, bringing his eyelids down and tipping up his chin in a thoughtful manner, "the very first thing I can remember, my father was looking for me with a willow switch in his hand, and I was cuddled down somewhere keeping still, and my foot was asleep. When?"

Jack jumped up and stretched his legs up and down the piazza, as if to gain relief from that lingering memory.

"When? but my foot was asleep and I was afraid to move it. I can feel how it tingled yet!"

Those Lying Newspapers.

The editor of a leading newspaper sends out a reporter, we will assume, by way of illustration, to a politician, with instructions to inquire as to whether or not he has been appointed to some lucrative position. The politician, with a great air of innocence and modesty, at first disclaims the rumor as a mistake. In the end, ten chances to one, and this time with offended dignity, he will deny indignantly and in toto as an invention of those "lying newspapers." The reporter has no alternative left but to write up what the politician says, and in a week or so the appointment is officially announced, and the politician smiles at his acumen in keeping the other fellows off until his hooks were fixed.

Again, there is a rumor of a wedding, and the reporter goes forth on his mission, to be met with a prompt denial of it and an ill-tempered protest against the "lying newspapers." He contradicts the rumor on authority, and before the contradiction, lo! an announcement of the wedding is sent in for publication.

A business man makes an important transaction of some kind, more or less interesting to the public and the reporter "gets on to it" and goes for a denial or confirmation. He usually gets a denial in the form of an assertion that no such sale is contemplated, and the report is duly printed. In a day or two the transaction is announced as consummated.

In the church a scandal arises and the truth is sought for publication. The truth is not found until it has been almost smothered by falsehoods. Now, after these instances, to put it plainly, who is the liar?

In the mass of news from many sources that has been hurriedly collected and collated for a great newspaper, some that is incorrect will almost of necessity find its way now and then into its columns. In reputable and carefully conducted journals this seldom happens intentionally.

So, among the millions of people who fill the multifarious positions of life, some even of those rated as honorable and reliable will occasionally lapse into untruth, or something so near untruth as not to be distinguishable from it, in their dealings with the press.

It were, therefore, well to declare a truce between the press and the public on these points.—Washington Post.

G. A. R. Encampment.

Reduced rates to the annual encampment of the G. A. R. at Milwaukee have been secured for delegates, their families and friends. The routes and rates are as follows:

Route No. 1.—Boston to Milwaukee and return, going and returning same way, via Hoosac Tunnel, West Shore and Niagara Falls, $21.55.

N. B.—The above is the official route selected by the committee of transportation, Massachusetts delegation.

Route No. 2.—Boston to Milwaukee and return, going and returning same way, via Erie and Boston line, Troy, Albany, Binghamton and Lake Champlain, $21.55.

Route No. 3.—Boston to Milwaukee and return, going and returning same way, via Grand Trunk, Thousand Islands, Montreal and Central Vermont line, $24.05.

For those who may wish to return direct, all rail, via Montreal, not including the trip from Kingston to Montreal by boat via Thousand Islands, the rate will be the same as route No. 1, $21.55.

Grand Army Special Train.—A special train (if a sufficient number) comprised exclusively of sleeping cars and baggage car, will leave the Fitchburg railroad passenger station, Boston, Saturday, August 24, at 5 o'clock p. m., and be run through to Milwaukee without change. This train will make a stop of three to four hours at Niagara, allowing ample time to view the Falls.

Paper in the Household.

I do not propose to speak of the many useful and wonderful articles that are manufactured from paper, but merely of the valuable uses to which it can be put by the housekeeper. Few housekeepers have time to black their stoves every day, or even every week. Many wash them in either clear water or dish water. This keeps them clean, but they look very brown. After a stove has been once thoroughly blackened, it can be kept looking perfectly well for a long time by rubbing it with paper every morning.

If I occasionally find a spot of gravy or fruit juice that the paper will not take off, I rub it with a wet cloth, but do not put on water enough to take off the blacking. I find that rubbing with paper is a much nicer way of keeping the outside of my tea kettle, coffee pot and tea pot bright and clean than the old way of washing them in suds. (The inside of coffee and tea pots should always be rinsed in clear water and never in the dish water.)

Rubbing with dry paper is also the best way of polishing knives, spoons and tinware after scouring. This saves wetting the knife handles. If a little flour be held on the paper in rubbing tinware and spoons, they shine like new silver.

For polishing windows, mirrors, lamp chimneys, etc., I always use paper in preference to a dry cloth.

Preserves and pickles keep much better if brown paper instead of a cloth is tied over the jar. Canned fruit is not so apt to mould, if a piece of writing paper, cut to fit the can, is laid directly on top of the fruit.

Paper is much better to put under a carpet than straw. It is warmer, thinner and makes less noise when one walks over it. A fair carpet can be made for a room that is not in constant use, by pasting several thicknesses of newspaper on the floor, over them a layer of wall paper, and giving it a coat of varnish. In cold weather I have often placed newspapers between by bed quilts, knowing that two thicknesses of paper are as warm as a quilt. If it is necessary to step on a chair, always lay a paper on it. This saves rubbing the varnish.—[Mary Johnson.]

A Queer Old Craft.

A discovery has been made on the Nanticoke River at a place called Ellis' Fishing Grounds, about five miles below Seaford, Del., says the St. Louis Post Dispatch. A vessel was dug from under a hill fifteen feet deep. Mr. Ellis, the owner of the property, has been living there forty-three years and did not know that the vessel was there until the recent winds washed the sand from under the hill, when a part of her was discovered. It was at first thought to be a stump.

Upon further investigation it was found to be the forward part of a schooner. Her bottom was hewed out and calked with something like camel's hair. She is sheathed on the inside and also calked with the same kind of hair. She is put together with pegs and with-out nails. The larger portion of her still remains in the bank. She is supposed to be from 90 to 100 tons burden. The wood is as solid as ever. There is no one around who knows anything about her.

From Darkness to Light.

In fifty years the household has come out of darkness into light. There were no machine-made pins with firm heads a half century ago. There were no envelopes, no postage stamps, no blotting paper, and no steel pens fit to use. The housekeeper had no canned fruits, meats, and vegetables. She could get no condensed milk, no cocoa and but little chocolate. Fire was kindled with the tinder box, and candles and pipes were usually lighted with live coals from the fireplace. Tomatoes were not eaten, and neither ice nor refrigerators were known in domestic life.

No photograph of any kind had ever been taken; garden hose and waterproof garments were unknown, and overshoes were but just thought of fifty years ago. Cooling soda water and ice cream were not at hand, sewing was done by hand and household linen was spun and woven at home. There was no gas nor electric light nor kerosene. Whale oil and tallow candles were the sole reliance for light. Coal was hardly known and wood was everybody's fuel.

Table forks were made of steel, and had but two prongs. Everybody put food into his mouth with his knife, and the bandanna was the predecessor of the napkin. No one had thought of an individual butter plate and stoves were a rarity. The news of the day was a long time in being disseminated among the people, for the newspapers were scarce and unenterprising, and published hardly any but political news, and this had to come by slow stage coach, for the telegraph and the railroad had hardly come into being.

"The good old time" sounds a great deal better in sentiment than in reality. They were never so good that anyone would now want to exchange the present for them; and as good as the present is, there is a future upon which we are rushing that offends to the imagination all the splendor of the fancy.—[Good House-keeping.]

This Year's Eclipses.

Not since the year 1712 have there been two total eclipses of the sun in a single calendar year, and this phenomenon will not occur again until the year 2057.

The present year has however, two total eclipses and one an annular, which occurred June 28, and was visible in the Indian Ocean and South Africa, and the other, total which occurs Dec. 22d, which will be visible in South America and most of Africa. The best places for observation will be on the west coast of Africa and the American party of observers who go out under the auspices of the Navy Department, will make their observations at Muxima, a town about one hundred miles to the southeast of St. Paul de Loanda. Other parties from the United States will make observations, some at other places in Africa and others in South America, but the most elaborate preparations are being made by the Navy Department party.

The expedition will involve a great deal of work, since all the instruments will have to be carried by the party, and will have to be transported a hundred miles into the interior of the country where transportation facilities are extremely meagre. If the observations which are to be made are successful, they will be awaited by the scientific world with a great deal of interest, since the observations made at the last eclipse have considerably modified some views that were therefore held concerning the constitution of the sun's atmosphere, which encircle the sun. The sun's photosphere is a favorite object of study for astronomers, and its constitution is not accurately enough known as yet to render observations of it unimportant. The photosphere can be carefully examined only during a total eclipse and total eclipses are by no means a common phenomena.

A Curious Adventure.

A curious adventure happened the other day to D. Campbell, late honorary assistant engineer, public works department, and now permanent-way inspector of the Indian Midland railway. As he was traveling on the Cawnpore line, some twelve miles out of Jhansi, seated on the front part of a locomotive, he noticed in front of him a large number of vultures collecting and evidently disputing over some object, which, as the engine drew near, he perceived to be the carcass of a jackal, probably killed by a passing train. The locomotive, with the inspector in front, charged in among these birds, who seemed determined, notwithstanding, to abide by their prey. The result was that while some were killed, others were thrown by the engine against Mr. Campbell, whom they straightway proceeded to attack in a most vicious manner, tearing his clothes, and inflicting considerable wounds on his hands and face. He was able, however, to retain his position on the engine, and to defend himself from further injury, and he considers himself fortunate in escaping without anything more serious happening.

Three Story House.

Every man lives in a three-story house. The lower story is partly underground. There he eats and drinks. This is his physical nature. Many men never leave this basement. There they live and there they die, never entering the stories that lie above. From its windows the outlook is wider, the light is purer. This is a man's intellectual department. Some go up into the second story often, and though they do not abandon the basement, they use it mostly only for eating. Then there is the third story. This is the highest. Here air and sunlight and outlook are at their best. This is the spiritual realm. Few rise into it. In too many cases dust and cobwebs are the sole occupants of what should be the choicest part of the house. The wise man, while he does not abandon the basement or the second story, loves the third best of all, and there spends much of his time.—Dr. Josiah Strong.

The 1804 Dollar.

There is something curious about the American silver dollar and half dollar of 1804," said a numismatist. "There were about 20,000 of the dollars coined, but not one of them ever got into circulation." Two of them are in well-known coin collections today, however, and are the most valuable of all American coins. The last dollar of 1804 was never seen in circulation after the mint one of the unsolved government mysteries. It is asserted as good authority that two 1804 dollars now in existence, while having been made from the original die, were in reality not coined for many years after that year, when they were surreptitiously struck, as it is supposed, issued to a person in high authority, from whom they subsequently passed into the collection referred to. The half dollar of 1804 is surrounded by a mystery equally profound. There were over 150,000 of these coined, but not one was ever known to be in circulation. On the other hand, but 7,000 quarter dollars were coined in that year, and specimens of these are in every collection and numismatist's shop."—Philadelphia Press.

Likeness and Difference.

Bain tells us that all knowledge is derived from the appreciation of likenesses and differences. From this it would naturally follow that education is largely a matter of comparison and we therefore make no apology for presenting this week nothing but comparison. Their own conclusions and if some of the comparisons seem odious we must say with Shakespeare's fat but cunning hero, "Is not the truth, the truth?"

Second Declaration of Independence.

First and last we have heard a deal about the Second Declaration of Independence; the first Tariff of the United States signed by the Father of his Country, July 4, 1789. Orators have spent considerable time also over the wicked Free Trade Tariff of 1846, passed by Congress when the South was in the saddle, and the rebel Brigadiers (to be) were about to win their spurs in the Mexican quarrel. We do not remember seeing anywhere any comparison between the two, and so we looked the matter up. The result is so interesting that we present it here. Remember, please, under 1789 you find the rates in the Second Declaration of Independence;—this was the beginning of our greatness. Under 1846 are the rates that brought (so they say) ruin and chaos. Hurray for Washington and Protection and 75 per cent!!!

"FREE RAW MATERIAL" EXPOSED.

BEFORE THE HOME MARKET CLUB AT A BANQUET IN HOTEL VENDOME, FEBRUARY 9, 1888.

Issued by the Home Market Club, No. 36 Bedford Street, Boston (for Free Circulation.)

[A few extracts.]

Senator Sherman: "But I tell you as a warning, that if the people of Boston and of the New England States . . . should abandon [this doctrine of protection] for some fancied idea about raw materials, they will kill the goose that lays the golden egg. (Applause.)" "The crude materials for manufacture raised on our farms or in our mines which come into competition have been considered just objects for protection. Now, it is proposed to place these upon the free list and continue the protection for manufactures. The principal articles of this kind are wool, produced by the farmer, iron ore, by the miner, and pig iron, by the furnace. Now . . . the men of Boston might selfishly say that, as they want wool, and make the woollens, they will vote for the duty on wool, because they can buy wool cheaper in South America and Australia; and they might say they will vote for no duty on iron ore because they can import it cheaper from Africa and Cuba. . . . But such a decision would be an abandonment of the whole principle of protection. (Applause.)"

William McKinley, Jr.:—"The raw material class have rights which cannot be ignored." "If free raw material will cheapen the product of the factory and the mill, of course by the same logic the products of the mill will be cheapened. If competing products are admitted free of duty." "I assure you there is no way-side station in the work of cutting down duties when once entered upon."

Nathan Goff, Jr.:—"You can't have free wool and free coal, and then have protected woolen and iron goods. If you undermine the foundations, the structure will fall. (Applause.)" "Gentlemen, the cry of 'raw material' is a sham, a miserable fraud. There is no such thing, in the sense it is used in this discussion." "If raw material goes on the free list, so must the finished article; you cannot include one and exclude the other. If wool is free, so will woolen goods be. If iron ore is free, why not its manufactures? If you want Scotch coal in your mills and factories, why not let us have English woollens and cottons in West Virginia? (Applause.)"

Republican Free Traders.

No. 7.

MAGRE FURNACE CO.,

32 Union St., Boston, Aug 8, 1889.

DEAR SIR: There can be no doubt whatever that the interests of the New England States absolutely demand a reduction in the duties imposed upon these articles, [coal, iron ore, and crude iron.] I am a consistent Republican and believe in the principle of protection. . . . I have never believed in placing any import duty upon raw materials, among which I should place coal and iron ore. A. H. PARLIN, Treasurer.

RADCLIFFE'S RIDE.

Listen, my children, and you shall be told Of the campaign ride of Radcliffe bold, In the autumn of eighteen eighty-eight, Hardly a man in the Old Bay State But remembers that famous ride and its date. He said to himself, "If the British try By wiles or by gold our country to buy, I on the opposite side will be bold To meet them with wiles, to meet them with gold; Ready to ride and sound the alarm, Through every county, and village, and farm, For the Home Market folk to be up and to arm." Then he left his home and hurrying down, Quickly arrived at Boston town, Just as the sun stood high o'er the bay, Where at her dock the great steamer lay, The Palestine, British man-of-war, A hated Free Trader from afar, With a huge black bulk that held within Symbols of pauper labor and greed, Cheap woollens and cottons our markets to win. Now while he hurriedly passed the quay The longshoremen landing the goods he could see: To him the tread of those tolling feet Is the tread of conquering grenadiers, And the ship with a flag of his home appears Only the type of a conquering fleet. He eluded the tower in Bedford street, Up the wooden stairs, with hasty feet, To the Home Office—his beard and meat— He found around him silence deep;

He roused the clerks from their morning sleep, And raised the window to look down, A moment on the streets of the town, Beneath in the narrow way, to and fro, The ideas of commerce ebb and flow, And the murmur arising seems to tell Only of safety. "All is well," 'Twas but an instant he felt the spell Of the busy scene in the street below, For suddenly all his fancies stray Are bent on a something far away, "IMPORTERS and Dealers—English and Co.,"

Impatient he turns with an angry jerk And seeks his desk and his daily work, Now he looks at the morning mail, Now he stares at the office clock, But mostly he reads as he whistles a tune The Founded-by-Greeley New-York-Tribune, And lo! as he reads, on the Tribune's page, The work of a newspaper Outing says, A flag and a legend meet his sight; He looks once again and grins in delight.

The flag was the hated and dreaded Cross Red, The legend, a Times quotation, which said, "The Irish to Englishmen useless are, Except when they cross to that country afar, And vote for Free Trade." (You see 'twas the fault of a newspaper Outing says, A flag and a legend meet his sight; He looks once again and grins in delight.

To leave reason untouched, appeal only to passion; By "fads" and by "soap," by "doves," and by feeling, By consensuses promised and other square dealing, The High Tariff Party could keep up its stealing. This only in passing—my hero was right; All is fair, is it not? In love or in fight, Radcliffe had his cards printed before the next morn. The Red Cross (under which they say Herbert was) was the Red Cross and Free Trade, the forged bold, Cleveland and Thurman, the one side old hold. On the other side, the Stars and the Stripes were arrayed.

Over Levi and Benjamin, foes of free trade, "These cards," said bold Radcliffe, (from England of late), "I'll carry myself through the Old Bay State, High Tariff is no hobby though a high horse she be, And she'll take me safely o'er mountain and lee."

A hurry of hoofs in Bedford street, A shape in the sunlight, a rider hard, And above from that rider, in passing a card Left behind that said so high and so fleet:—That was all—and yet through the narrow-paved streets, The face of a Tariff was riding that day, And the cards thrown about with their flags and the hoofs, Gave a dead party strength from its grave to arise.

On August's last day the wild ride began, And he will be entered 'twas September one, He glanced at the palms that the stout mill hands bore, Made the mistake of England—and on he tore, Throwing his cards to left and to right, And soon in a cloud of dust lost to sight.

September the second to Newton he came, He saw the One Hundred—he hated their name, He scattered the Red Cross on the green, Then dashed across Charles and no more was seen.

September the third into Worcester town, Swiftly at night he came riding down, He heard the bleating of Russell's sheep; Russell himself was fast asleep, And he was in his bed, and he was in his bed, Disturbed perhaps by "High Tariff" tread.

Or dreaming perchance of the coming campaign And the golden success of Walker and Blaine, Radcliffe tossed his cards with might and main, And galloped away like a man insane.

You know the rest. The newspapers told How the British invaders so gallant and bold Found theories vain 'gainst passion and gold, How the tariff men came to the polls in blocks, Leading protected laboring flocks, And giving free traders two votes to one, All paid for in full when the battle was done.

So rode Herbert Radcliffe throughout the Bay State, And he will be entered 'twas September one, To every county and village and farm, A cry of despair and passion and hate; A voice out of darkness, an accent of fear, A lie for a truth, for a reason a jeer, A word that will haunt him forevermore, A specter forever behind the door.

He said: "His day is turned night, O sons of New England, now seek the light! In the hour of darkness and peril and doubt O reason and listen and hear the truth out! Apathy to your nation's need, oh heed, never more! Repentant now turn from the message he bore!"

Vacation in a Buggy.

The comparatively inexpensive pleasure of a vacation carriage drive through the country is enlarged upon by the New York Herald. One of the most picturesque drives, it says, is to Litchfield, around the lake and so to New Haven or Hartford. Many New Yorkers can be found every summer at Litchfield, which lies among the hills, surrounded by some of the most charming scenery in the State. The cheapest way for persons in the city who do not happen to have their own conveyances and who contemplate driving through Connecticut, or for that matter, through any section adjacent to the metropolis, is to go by rail to some small town and hire a team there by the week. A horse and buggy can be hired for a fortnight, by bargaining with the local liveryman, for about $20. All the luggage necessary is plain wearing apparel that will not show the dust, such toilet articles as are absolutely required and a heavy shawl or waterproof for the lady in case of rain and an overcoat for the gentleman. The only other expense will be for meals, lodging and feed for the horse. Twenty-five cents will pay for the horse and $2 a day will be ample for each person. If two go, therefore, the total expense for a ride of 300 to 400 or even 500 miles, taking two weeks for it, need not exceed $55. That is just about half what it would cost to stay at a watering-place and do anything more than eat and sleep.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

It is to be hoped that the commission now revising the City Ordinances will provide in their report to the City Council for the creation of a Board of Public Works. We believe that such a provision will meet the endorsement of a large majority of our citizens, as unquestionably it will of almost all that portion of them who have seen service in the City Council. The well known reluctance of many of the men best fitted for work in our City Council to accept positions therein, is largely due to the immense amount of time required to conscientiously discharge the duties incumbent upon our City officials under our present system of conducting the City's business; in fact the chairmen of some committees, notably those of the Highway and Public Property Departments, in order to properly discharge the duties of their official position, must either have no private business or allow it to be seriously neglected.

In our opinion this is all wrong; gratuitous service to such an extent is altogether too much to ask, and a great deal more than most men can afford to give. An unfortunate feature of the situation, too, is the fact that the work of the departments is not decreasing, nor in the nature of things can it decrease; year by year new buildings are called for which must be erected and subsequently cared for; new streets are necessarily laid out, adding greatly to the already extensive work of highway maintenance and repairs; water mains and services are being constantly added to our system, now one of the largest in New England; and by the introduction and extension of the electric lighting system, much additional work, the annual increase of which is inevitable, has been placed upon the committee in charge of the Street Lighting Department. Besides the departments referred to, another, that of the City Sewers, must soon become a matter of serious concern to the committee having it in charge.

That the City's business has been and is being well conducted is no excuse for continuing the present system of its management; that system was proper and efficient at the time of its adoption, but it has outgrown its usefulness and should be discarded; the City Council should consider the necessity and wisdom of appropriations asked for, granting them where it is expedient to do so, but the expenditure of the appropriations and the management of the different departments, under rules adopted by the City Council, should be delegated to a Board of Public Works.

NEWTON ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

The citizens will soon enjoy the privileges of an electric railway, as the work of laying the rails will be commenced very soon, probably in few weeks. The advent of a street railway in this city in the near future will be an important factor in the development of Newton and eventually the scattered portions will be more closely united by the lines of street railways, offering facilities for easy transportation between the several villages, besides greater inducements for investments in real estate in sections at present remote from the railway stations. The directors of the Newton Electric Railroad have elected as president, Mr. George W. Morse, a gentleman of executive capacity and energy, whose experience will be of great value in directing a successful management of the road. Mr. F. G. L. Henderson has been unanimously chosen superintendent of the road. Mr. Henderson is an experienced railroad man, having been connected with the Boston & Albany Railroad for 14 years. He is also a long resident of Newton, familiar with the needs and desires of its citizens. The delay in building the road could not be avoided, owing to the inability on the part of the steel rail company to furnish the "chairs" according to contract, but the work will now be rapidly pushed forward.

The headquarters of the company will be temporarily located at Waltham, and permanently at Newtonville, near the power station. The present movement in the direction of street railroad facilities really inaugurates a street railway service which will extend lines of traffic to various parts of the city. Its advantages will be very great, especially in a municipality scattered over a large territory.

The Boston Journal is making an honest fight against the present loose way of disposing of the credentials of delegates to state and other conventions and justly says that delegates and alternates should be chosen without power of substitution. This would work a much needed reform in our political methods. It is too often the case that the delegates elected at a caucus because they are supposed to represent the wishes of the caucus, pass over their credentials to any one who wishes to have them, and in this way the wish of the voters is defeated. It is to be hoped that the Journal will be successful in its courageous fight against corrupt political methods.

COL. ALBERT CLARKE's letter in Thursday's Herald shows that he is a great improvement over Mr. Radcliffe as Secretary of the Home Market Club. He is a forcible writer and knows how to marshal his arguments to the best advantage. The Home Market Club has certainly benefited by the change.

THE warrants for the election September 3 of an alderman to succeed Alderman Kennedy of Ward 7 and Councilman Hale of Ward 5 will be found in our columns today. The polls will be open from 7 a. m. till 2 p. m.

A list of the new buildings and street improvements at Waban will be found under the Newton Highlands news, and shows that the youngest village in Newton is rapidly building up.

BROOKLINE taxpayers pay this year at the rate of only $12 per $1000. The total valuation of the town is $42,532,300, $668,085.70 is the amount to be raised by taxation.

Boston's crooked streets have many of them been widened and straightened and still their total footing is 411.19 miles.

Death of Mr. John Warner.

Deacon John Warner died at his residence on Park street Tuesday morning. The deceased had been ill four weeks; his illness being due to Bright's Disease in its early stages, but a complicating acute inflammation of the stomach, was the chief cause of his sufferings and also of his death. Deacon Warner was born in England, Jan. 24, 1817, and passed his 72nd birthday last January. He came to Newton with his father's family when he was two years old and had resided here most of the time since. When a comparatively young man, he held an important position in the furniture factory of the late Edwin Smallwood, continuing in his employ for a number of years. In the year 1856 he bought out the grocery business of Lyman G. Stevens in Middlesex Block and continued at this stand until 1870 or 71, when he built a new building, corner of Centre and Elmwood streets, which was the first substantial brick structure erected in this portion of the city, and removed his business to the new location. He retired from business in 1875, his son, the late J. Edwin Warner, succeeding him. He had been an overseer of the poor for about 20 years, serving in that capacity under both town and city governments. He was elected an assistant assessor for Ward 7 in 1847, continuing in that office until 1855. For nearly 30 years he had been a Deacon of the Eliot Congregational Church and had always taken a great interest in religious matters and exerted a wide influence for good in this relation. He was a man respected, esteemed and loved in the community where he had spent his life, his kind sympathy for the unfortunate, and his genial, kindly greeting always extended to his friends being noticeable traits of his character. His quiet, useful and honorable life has ended, but the memory of the man will long be enshrined in the hearts of the people. He was a loving father, a kind husband, a generous friend, a public spirited and conscientious citizen, whose death will be sincerely mourned.

The funeral services were held at the Eliot church chapel, Thursday afternoon and were largely attended. Rev. Mr. Calkins officiated and in his remarks paid a high tribute to the Christian character of the deceased. A quartet consisting of Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. Fisher, Messrs. C. F. Bacon and C. A. Farley sang appropriate selections. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment was in the family lot at Mt. Auburn.

China and Glass.

The reduced cost in the making of China and Glass in consequence of improved machinery, fuel saving kilns and the transfer process of decoration, has brought this important factor of the household within easier limits. Jones McDuffee & Stratton have enlarged their already spacious warehouse by adding a Dinner-Set Hall, which makes their Warehouse one of the places of interest to the visitor, whether ready to purchase or not.

Those who need the services of a competent architect should consult Henry H. Kendall, 40 State street, Boston, whose card appears in another column.

THE IMPROVED SYSTEM OF PROPELLING STREET CARS.

A new system for developing and utilizing steam for power, without smoke, cinders, noise or escape of steam, at much less cost than by any other known method for obtaining and maintaining power. There is no failure nor uncertainty in its operation, and it is absolutely safe. For street cars and other service requiring portable power, it has no equal. Secured by U. S. letters patent, the prominent mechanical engineer says that the possibilities of this invention have not been equalled by any recent invention—except possibly the Bell Telephone and Sawyer-Mann for electric lighting. The Steam Storage Power Company has been organized for the development and introduction of this system throughout the New England States—where territory is owned exclusively by it—with a capital of $200,000—par value shares, $10—each—and is having a Power Car built by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which will be exhibited in Boston and vicinity in September. The first issue of certificates will be from the office of the company, 34 Broad Street, after August 1. Subscriptions may be made for the stock at par—payable 25 per cent. cash, 25 per cent. 1 day, 25 per cent. 60 days—to an amount not exceeding $50,000.

THE MORTGAGE.

BY WILL CARLTON.

We worked through spring and winter, through summer and through fall. But the mortgage worked the hardest and the steadiest of them all. It worked on nights and Sundays, it worked each holiday.

It settled down among us, and it never went away. Whatever we kept from it seemed almost as bad as theft. It watched us every minute, and it ruled us tight and left.

The rust and blight were with us sometimes, and sometimes not. The dark-brown, scowling mortgage was forever on the spot.

The weevil and the cutworm, they went as well as came. The mortgage stayed forever, eating heartily all the same. It nailed up every window, stood guard at every door.

And happiness and sunshine made their place with us no more. Till, with falling crops and sickness, we got stalled upon the grade. And there came a dark day upon us when the interest was not paid.

And there came a sharp foreclosure, and I kind of lost my head. And grew weary and discouraged, and the farm was cheaply sold.

And the children left and scattered, when they hardly yet had grown. My wife she pined and perished, and I found myself alone.

What she died of was a "mystery," and the doctor never knew. But I knew she died of mortgage—just as well as I wanted to.

If to trace a hidden sorrow were within the doctor's art. The little dark cabin on the shore brightened up with unwonted lustre as the widow sheltered her young charge, and changed her wet garments for some of her own.

"If my Tom would only come I'd send him for your things." "Oh, no matter! I'll wrap your shawl about me and walk down myself after I have read a bit of the Bible, pretty, mischievous laugh. She read the weakness of her rescuer, and treated it tenderly.

"Whatever a lady has worn is fit for a lady to wear," she said, and forthwith wrapped herself, smilingly, in the old grey shawl.

"At that moment Tom, with his red shirt gleaming in the setting sun, and a string of fish on his shoulder, stood in the doorway.

He stopped when he saw the guest standing upon the hearthstone, a bright fire behind her, and the kettle boiling over. She needed to him familiarly. Tom thought he must be dreaming.

"Tom and I are acquainted," she said. "Are you?" responded the astonished widow.

"Yes," said the girl; "I've watched Tom many a time walking along the shore with his red shirt, and once he took me and father out rowing. Tom, your mother saved my life."

"Saved your life!" echoed Tom, who never in all his life had heard of his mother's doing anything before.

Tom, stupid and staring, was hurried on in search of the missing garments. And while his mother looked on, he himself to making a cup of tea for her protégé. It was wonderful how a little warmth of human feeling had roused this woman to life and activity again.

When Tom returned, laden with various articles of apparel, the two were quietly sipping their tea together at the old round table.

He did not return alone, however. Following him came a tall, gray-headed gentleman.

"Here's father!" cried the girl, springing forward. "Oh, father, this good lady saved my life!"

Lady! The widow Minton wanted to kiss the beautiful rosy lips that pronounced the words.

"Well, my dear," said the old gentleman, good humoredly pinching the plump cheek, "she has done it very thoroughly. You certainly don't look very near death just now."

Thereat the story with due enlargement and variations, was told him with a pretty pout. The father smiled, but also he furtively wiped away a tear.

"Well, madam," said he courteously, "accept my cordial thanks for looking after my little madcap Belle. She's my only child, you see, and as full of pranks as any dozen."

Belle playfully put her hand over his mouth. "I won't have my character traduced where they've been so good to me," she cried. "And oh, father, isn't this beautiful place—such a nice view of the water! I mean to come down here every day and do my sketching."

"I'm afraid," said the sire, shaking his head, "that this good lady will have cause to wish she had thrown you overboard."

"Oh, no, father; she likes me, and I like her. And I've fallen in love with Tom long ago, you know."

Tom blushed painfully. Something strange and new stirred in his mind. Compliments did not sweeten his thro's as they did his mother's, for Tom had never seen better days, and felt as if he had been made a jest of. A week passed, during which the young girl strolled at most daily to the cabin. When she was there Tom seldom entered the house. He had grown shy and sulky; he sat on the shore, darkly brooding, or went off silently to his fishing.

One morning Belle and her father departed. Belle kissed the withered cheek of her friend, and that was all. For when mention had been made of helping her substantially, the widow had drawn herself sharply up, all the lady shining in her eyes.

"I may have seen my better days," she said, "but I haven't come to that yet. And if I needed any reward, I've had it now," she added, as she felt the soft blood mantling in the cheek that Belle had kissed.

Long after the two had left, Tom went about with a cloud on his face; and in his ear were those mocking words: "I'm in love with Tom." A disgust for his fishing life and for himself, and for all their miserable surroundings of poverty, filled the lady's heart with an unwonted bitterness.

"Mother," said he, one day, as he sat darkly brooding over the hearth, you said you were a born lady; why didn't you make a gentleman of me?"

"I hadn't any money left when you came," said the widow briefly. "Then it's money that makes people gentlemen and ladies?"

"I don't know," said the widow, puzzled; "they somehow mostly have it." One day Tom came and told her he was going to sea. There had been a man down looking for hands, and he had taken Tom gladly, for Tom was a handy fellow at almost any kind of sea craft, and would make a good seaman.

"And you must not come here patiently till I come back, mother; for there's better days anywhere, I shall bring 'em with me, be sure."

After that the sea looked bitter and colder than ever, and the solitary woman lived a sort of hermit's life. No cheery voice of gossiping neighbor prattled about her; and only Belle, the bright, blithe-hearted lassie seemed to remember to cheer her with a letter now and then. Belle was now visiting some distant friends, but in her kindly heart she kept a corner, it seemed, for the poor old woman who had saved her life.

Three years—four—passed away, and daily of a summer afternoon you might have seen the widow sitting in her doorway, eager and hollow-eyed, looking out for some possible ship that might be Tom's. Tom was not a good correspondent, but occasionally up at the little red post-office a wandering epistle awaited her trembling hand. She was growing very old and feeble now; but Tom was getting up in the world—Tom was first mate of his ship—Tom was a success. Tom was a gentleman—and oh, above all things, Tom was coming home.

Not everyone watches in vain, though we may not always look in the right direction. It was so with the widow. As she sat Christmas day, with strained eyes gazing on the far-off sunlit sails and seeing how some of them hovered nearer and nearer, and some, alas! took wings further and further away, her darkened suddenly; there came rushing upon her, as if dropped from the clouds, a plump, dark-eyed, rosy-cheeked lady, who lunged herself into the arms of the widow with the cry of

"Oh, mother!" she exclaimed, half-sobbing, half laughing—oh, mother! don't you know me? Why, I'm Tom's wife, and I've brought the captain with me!"

"Mother," said Captain Tom, that night, "you've seen better days, perhaps, but I never have."

"For didn't I tell you," said Mrs. Tom archly, "that I was in love with Tom. And father owns half his ship, you know; so if Tom's captain, I'm second mate, you see. And we're going to take you away to where we found our better days."

Vacation Hints. Many sudden deaths are caused each year, declares the London Lancet, by the summer vacation. We know a wise lawyer, it says, who never did anything the first day of his vacation, as little as possible the second, took a short walk the third, two short walks the fourth, and not until the eighth day was ready to climb a mountain. By this cautious course he grew stronger to the end, and returned home with vitality enough to work till the time for the next outing came around. One can make a great change in his habits without detriment if he takes a long time to do it, but only young persons can risk sudden changes, and they sometimes fall victims to the strain. Bathing should enter the water swiftly, says a medical authority, not allowing the lower limbs to become chilled, thus driving the blood to the head. Many bathers plunge into the water head foremost, but this is not necessary. To immerse the body up to the neck is enough. After this the body resumes an even temperature, and when this course is followed injurious results are rare. The common belief that it is necessary to wet the head upon entering the water is based upon the assumption that the water is too much blood is impelled upward. This is not true if the rest of the body is quickly immersed. Ladies cannot be expected to soak their hair every time they bathe, nor is it necessary that they should. A nap after bathing is recommended by physicians. Too violent exercise in the water should be avoided. The extreme fatigue which follows is in itself sufficient evidence that it is injurious.

Plenty of Beef. If any persons have been frightened by recent rumors of a coming deficiency in the beef supply of the country, they can find reassurance in this year's report of the Agricultural Department on farm animals. To put this statement in round numbers, says the Providence Journal, there were 25,000,000 in the United States in 1880, 33,000,000 in 1880, and 50,000,000 in 1889, the year covered by the last report. If we examine the matter more in detail, the increase is found to have gone on with considerable regularity from year to year. There have been, of course, hard winters and seasons of pestilence, years when breeding paid well and high prices were the rule, and years when profits were slight and the fattening process was unremunerative. Yet through it all the beef-raising business has steadily grown, and it promises to go on increasing quite as rapidly, as the needs of the country demand. The areas of pasture where cattle can be fattened with little or no extraneous food are coming to be more generally occupied; cattle are matured at an earlier age than formerly and are more profitable, because they bring quick returns under the modern system of treatment, and thus declines in price are easier to meet. It is true that the ranch and range cattle are not as numerous as a few years ago, because the pasture areas are needed by settlers. But as the bounds of the ranches are contracted, smaller stock farms and more careful treatment are resorted to, and there is no reason, despite some recent pessimistic predictions, to fear that the beef supply is at all likely to fall below the demand.

The new sliding railway at Paris, is said to demonstrate by a curious combination of compressed air and water at high pressure, that it is possible to drive a train on slides at 100 miles an hour at one-tenth the consumption of coal at present needed by locomotives. There is no smoke, no noise and next to no danger. The train can be pulled up in 30 yards, can climb up gradients of 16 inches in the yard and run on curves of 44 yards' radius. There is almost no consciousness of motion; you simply enter the car, and in an hour you are 100 miles from where you started. If this be true, says the Fall Mail Gazette, we are on the eve of a revolution as great as that of steam, and the world, although very small, will so shrink that we shall be next door neighbors to everybody.

"Didn't you tell me you could hold the plough?" said a farmer to an Irishman he had taken on trial. "Be easy, now," says Pat. "How could I hold it, if two horses pull it away? Just stop the creatures, and I'll hold it for ye."

A Safe Investment. Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure a return of purchase price. Merit Wins. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Arthur Hudson's drugstore.

Merit Wins. The number of people annually afflicted with this most annoying malady seems to be greatly on the increase. . . . The editor of this journal is an annual victim, and with a view to discover a specific cure, has tried numerous remedies. Of these Ely's Cream Balm is by all odds the quickest and most satisfactory. Two applications usually allaying the usual symptoms in the nose and eyes. We would recommend its use by all subject to hay fever, and we gladly bear unsolicited testimony to its efficacy in our own case. . . . Media, Pa., Record.

The Father. Of all diseases is impure blood, when loaded with foul humor. How important then that the blood should be pure, rich, and strong, without which there can be no health. To purify the blood Sulphur Bitters is incomparably the best medicine that it is possible to obtain. . . . The Editor.

Card of Thanks. If the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam should publish a card of thanks, containing expressions of gratitude which come to him daily from those who have been cured of severe throat and lung troubles by the use of Kemp's Balsam, it will be a fair-sized book. How much better to invite all to call on a druggist and get a free sample bottle that you may test for yourself its power. Large bottles 50c and $1.00.

A $4,100 DWELLING.

Designed by Mr. S. H. Gibson, the Well Known Architect.

The floor plan given here has a side hall. When the little boys and girls come home from school they may come in this way; that is the idea of the owner. They can hang their wraps in the closet or take them up stairs. The front hall is floored with hard wood. Part of it is covered with rugs. Several little feet crossing over this floor would make it necessary for some one to wash it after every such performance, hence the side entrance. The front hall is rather large; it is a splendid room in its way.

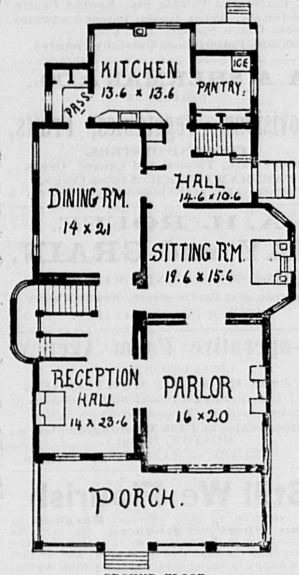

VIEW.

The stairway is rich; there is a beautiful model in it. The stairway at one end shows up nicely from the front and projects into a bay at the side. This plan is capable of being contracted into a much smaller house. The rooms are large, and altogether it is on quite an extensive scale. It has been built several times several sizes smaller and at a much less cost. From the large hall one can go into the parlor, sitting room and dining room.

The pantry, china closet and kitchen are as conveniently fitted as the experience of those interested would suggest. The kitchen and pantries of the plans which have appeared from time to time have been fully described. The idea in all is the same. The requirements are no different in an expensive house than in one less expensive. Labor saving devices are even more necessary in a cheaper house than in one which is more expensive, though it usually happens that the owners of more expensive buildings are better prepared to equip themselves with a complete arrangement than those who have to do with the more modern structures.

The idea in all these kitchen plans is that it and its annexes of china closet and kitchen pantry form the workrooms of the house, and as such should be treated from a labor saving standpoint. The saving of one step in the performance of a single operation will save a hundred when the performance of that operation is multiplied by this number. In every kitchen there should be the sink with the table on one side of it and a drain board and table on the other. These should be adjacent to the kitchen range. In the pantry shelves and drawers, a dough board and a place for a refrigerator with drain connection to the outside and good ventilation are desirable.

A very nice arrangement to add to an ordinary pantry is a cooler set into the wall which projects to the outside. It is a lattice box covered with slats and wire on the inside. In it may be placed cooled food to cool or food which it is desirable to keep cool during cold weather. The slats protect the articles from view from the outside, and the wire screen protects it from flies during the summer. On the inside is a door which separates the cooler from the inside of the room.

The second floor arrangement of this building suits the requirements of the people who occupy the house. An additional room could be provided in place of a store room, and the attic be used for that purpose. The closets in all rooms are of large size and the entire arrangement liberal. The back bedrooms are separated from those in front.

Quite a chapter might be written about attics. In the minds of many housekeepers an attic is "a place to put things." Oftentimes in houses which are measurably well cared for in the lower floors the attic is in a fearful state of disorder.

SECOND STORY.

This house was contracted for in the vicinity of Indianapolis, Ind., at a cost of $4,100, exclusive of water, plumbing, mantels and grates, gas fixtures and furniture. By a general reduction in size and a simplification of details and the use of soft rather than hard wood its cost would be greatly reduced. As it is it is an exceedingly well built and well finished house.

A Man's Good and Bad Qualities Can Usually Be Read by the Style of His Facial Adornment—It Appears That the Bearded Man Has a Little the Best of It.

The subject of beards furnishes an interesting study as indicating the dispositions of persons. There is nothing particularly marked about the characteristics of the "beardless youth," as his purposes in life and his character can hardly be said to be fixed. However, as he grows into manhood, and matures his beard to his taste, the style he finally adopts will usually indicate his ideas of life. There is, of course, nothing particularly remarkable about young mustaches, and the little dusky side whiskers, worn wedge shape just below the ears. They may be termed simply freaks of youth. The absence altogether of whiskers and mustache in a man whose character and habits of life have become fixed and unchangeable, indicates a frank, open hearted disposition, with a great regard for the truth and the courage to tell it, with nothing to conceal and a conscientiousness that is as clear and apparent as his clean shaven face. He is usually a plain, unpretentious man, who pays more attention to the storing of his mind with useful information and the domestic side of life than the adornment of his person.

THE OF THE IRON WILL.

The man of iron will and firmness of purpose is he who wears a full, thick, stubby beard. If he is a man of brain and has had the benefit of cultured experience, although firm in his purposes and unchangeable in his ideas, he will grant you your argument if you are reasonable. But on the other hand, if he is uncultured and inexperienced in business affairs, he will prove to be an uncompromising tyrant, uncouth and overbearing in the extreme. Having only a superficial knowledge of letters, he will not permit you to give an opinion contrary to his own. The long, flowing, pointed beard, worn by such church reformers as Wiclif and John Calvin did not indicate any particular trait of character in their day, as they were only worn to serve as a contrast to the clean shaven faces of the Roman Catholic priesthood. These long beards are worn as a rule by the clergy of some denominations today. There is a pious staidness about them very becoming to doctors of divinity. The elongation of the countenance is materially aided by such beards, and the changes of facial expression are not so plainly observable. A man with such a beard has little trouble to look pious, no matter how great a sinner he may be. Ordinarily persons in this day and age who emulate this style of beard may be found active members of some church, or hovering about the vestibule of the house of the Lord, borrowing religion for some sinister or mercenary motive. If his motives are not pure, he is what we would commonly call a hypocrite. If pure, his thoughts are of a theological turn, and he will pay less attention to accumulating a little of this world's goods than to the details of the church. Men who wear their beards in this style are usually lovers of fine horses, and to distinguish between the lively man and the deacon you have only to contrast the quick twinkle of the former's eye with the soft, mild expression of that of the latter.

Perhaps the most marked index of character is furnished by what is commonly called Burnside, and the more of the bare chin that is shown, and the heavier and more pointed the whiskers, the greater is the measure of self conceit. High living and a self consciousness that is utterly oblivious to the importance of his surroundings, is a characteristic of the wearer of flowing Burnside. He is generally possessed of a fine physique, and prides himself on his shape. He is usually a gourmand, whose appetite is easily offended at something that is not up to his standard of cookery. His greed knows no bounds, and his egotism no compromise.

A plain, unpretentious mustache indicates nothing in particular, and about the only way you can read a man's character from this standpoint is by the manner in which he trains his mustache and the amount of labor he devotes to it. A man, for instance, who will take a pair of scissors and deliberately trim off the straggling ends of his mustache to keep them from curling up his nose, or in the corner of his mouth, is more sensible than the general run of men who are really able to grow a healthy mustache. If there is any one style of whiskers in the world that is calculated to make a fool of a man more than any other, it is a fine, heavy mustache, and, as before hinted, about the only thing we can say of a man who devotes half his time to the training of his mustache is, he is usually very giddy, and his urbanity and vanity are measured by the size and curl of this appendage.

Of course, there are exceptions to the foregoing rules, but the thoughtful reader will find much for reflection in this brief outline of characteristic styles of whiskers.—G. W. Dannettell in Evansville (Ind.) Tribune.

A Nice Crowd.

The Austrian empire is composed of quite a number of different nationalities among them Poles, Hungarians, Bohemians and Croats, the characteristics of which are portrayed in the following anecdote:

Four Australian soldiers are quartered over night at the house of a peasant. In the morning after he had resumed their march the Pole remarked:

"Comrades, that peasant had a very nice watch."

"We should have taken it along with us," observed the Hungarian.

"I've got the watch," observed the Bohemian.

"You did have it, but I've got it now," remarked the Croat, closing the debate. He had already stolen it from his comrade.—New York News.

Care of the Eyes.

Sit erect in your chair when reading, and as erect when writing as possible. If you bend downwards you not only gorge the eyes with blood, but the brain as well, and both suffer. The same rule should apply to the use of the microscope. Get one that will enable you to look at things horizontally, not always vertically.

Have a reading lamp for night use. N. B.—In reading the light should be on the book or paper and the eyes in the shade. If you have no reading lamp, turn your back to the light and you may read without danger to the eyes.

Hold the book at your focus; if that begins to get far away, get spectacles. Avoid reading by the flickering light of the fire.

Avoid straining the eyes by reading in the gloaming.

Reading in bed is injurious as a rule. It must be admitted, however, that in cases of sleeplessness when the mind is inclined to ramble over a thousand thoughts a minute, reading steadies the thoughts and conduces to sleep.

Do not read much in a railway carriage. I myself always do, however, only in a good light, and I invariably carry a good reading lamp to hook on behind me. Thousands of people would travel by night rather than by day if the companies could only see their way to the exclusive use of the electric lamp.

Authors should have black ruled paper instead of blue, and should never strain the eyes by reading too fine types.

The bedroom blinds should be red or gray, and the head of the bed should be toward the window.

Those ladies who not only write, but sew, should not attempt the black seam by night.

When you come to an age that suggests the wearing of spectacles, let no false modesty prevent you from getting a pair. If you have only one eye, an eyeglass will do; otherwise it is folly.

Go to the wisest and best optician you know of, and state your wants and your case plainly, and be assured you will be properly fitted.

Remember that bad spectacles are most injurious to the eyes, and that good and well chosen ones are a decided luxury.

Get a pair for reading with, and if necessary a long distance pair for use out of doors.—Cassell's Magazine.

Tales from the Gum Arabic.

In the visions of the night Malek Ak Drawbar lay upon his bed, and saw all the peoples of the earth hastening together, to be assigned to their future abiding places. As he looked off to the left he saw a vast multitude, whom no man might number, flocking by themselves, and at short intervals large crowds came from various directions to join themselves with this great throng. He noticed also that all these people regarded each other with strong but ill concealed suspicion. "And who are these," asked Malek Ak Drawbar, "who outnumber the sands of the seashore for multitude?" "Oh, those fellows?" replied his guide, "those are the men who discovered Artemus Ward and brought out Bill Nye." "And what will be done with them?" asked Malek. "Can't tell," replied his guide; "they're not all in yet; they'll be coming in along for the next century." And then Malek Ak Drawbar, remembering that he had once written to the Goomer Habbeek that he was the first man to find Mark Twain and develop the humor that was then latent in him, gave a cold shiver a foot long and awoke. "It was a close squeak for me," he said, and he resolved that during the rest of his life he would tell the truth, so far as it was compatible with editorial writing on a reform paper.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Leprous Princess in Paris.

The London leper has caused, I hear, quite a scare. I have no doubt that there has always been lots of leprosy in the world, but that we know nothing about it, because the doctors give it a fine Greek name. Why not translate all the new Greek names of disease into graphic English? If there were a descriptive name that we could understand for every malady a long step would be taken towards curing them. What meaning, for instance, does the word eczema convey to the unlearned mind? Whenever I hear doctors giving evidence to a jury I feel as if they were talking in a foreign language which nobody but themselves can understand. It would, perhaps, startle the world to hear that the Prince of Wales' leper could find his match in a palace in this city, where there is a leper high and mighty from a heraldic standpoint. She is on kissing terms with our royalties. This illustrious person has been nearly twenty years attacked with the disease, which is kept in subjection by careful daily treatment. I never heard that she had given it to any one. There is, however, no doubt whatever as to the nature of her affection. They say that the primary cause of leprosy in her case was the consanguine marriage of her ancestors.—Paris Letter.

The Stone Elephant.

There is a stone elephant in Inyo county, California. The rock that has taken the form of an elephant is a dark gray granite that is almost the color of the skin of an elephant. The first travelers in California, it is said, on catching sight of it, thought that they had found a petrified mastodon. A Pute Indian, on being asked if he had ever seen the "stone elephant," replied: "Yash, me see him many year go. Long time Injun no see him; now see him all same in big show up Virginia City."—New York Tribune.

How He Worked It.

Oakland, Md., rejoices in the possession of a dusky citizen who cannot read, but that lack does not prevent him from poring over the newspapers and imagining that he is absorbing information through his finger ends. Not long ago some official had occasion to record his name, when the following colloquy ensued: "What is your name?" "George Newton Sandomine, sah." "How do you spell it?" "Spell it! Don't spell it at all, sah. I just writes it right down."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

In the score, the Newton Highlands base ball club will play the Crescents of Newton Centre on the home grounds. Total, N. H., 17, Athletics, 12.

—Waban looks quite lively, on account of the building of streets and houses. Mr. C. H. Hale, the contractor, is grading a fine avenue from Beacon street, the line of the railroad station, and near the residence of Mrs. Eunice Collins. This avenue at its junction with Beacon street is two hundred feet in width, but the most of the distance, of about one-third of a mile, it is forty feet in width, where it again enters Beacon street. The building of this street necessitated the removal of Mrs. Coll's fine large stable on Beacon street near her residence. This avenue passes through the lands of Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Gould, Mr. Hale and Mr. Hano. Mr. Hano is also having beautiful residences built through his lands according to a plan which can be seen sketched upon a signboard on the premises. Mr. Strong has also had an avenue built through his lands, winding gracefully up to the summit of Moffatt hill. On this avenue near the summit of the hill, Mr. Harlow, the artist, is having a beautiful residence erected, with a fine studio in the tower, and where that Mr. Strong is intending to have a fine residence built near by. Mr. Saville has a beautiful residence on this avenue, also Mr. Davidson, and Mr. Strong's fine large house (tally near to the station. Mr. Strong is having a cottage built on his land near Chestnut street, to be occupied by one of his employees in his nurseries. Mrs. Shepley's new mansion and stable on Beacon street have a very attractive appearance. Next the residence of Mr. W. R. Dresser, is the new house of the mother of Mr. Dresser, also three other new houses have been built, and on the same street, on the Page and Henshaw lands, Mr. Goodwin, the architect, has had built and now occupies a fine house, and on the opposite side of the street Mr. Page is now erecting a house. Mr. Henshaw has one just completed, also Mr. Roscoe has one in process of erection on the corner of Chestnut and Woodward streets. In the near future a store block is talked of which will probably be located quite near the station on the land of Mrs. Collins, fronting on the new street which has been built from near the station to the West street. Waban is destined to become a very attractive and desirable place of residence.

—The corner stone of the new Methodist church will be laid with impressive ceremonies Thursday morning next at 10 o'clock.

—Mr. Thomas Hayden has purchased a new outfit including horse, harness and express wagon. He intends going into the express business.

—Mrs. Henry Morgan exhibited a very beautiful specimen of the night-blooming cereus at her residence on Grove street last Saturday evening.

—It is stated that a new depot will be built at Rice's crossing soon, and also have

Two kinds of lamp-chimneys; one breaks; the other does not. Which do you think your grocer or glass-man would rather sell?

If you buy the breaker, you're buying all the time. If you buy the not-breaker, he may not live to sell you another. You know him— which do you think he'd rather you'd buy?

The one that doesn't break is called the "pearl-top" and looks like this  the top of it; made by Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh. The man that sells it is paid to give you a new one for every "pearl-top" chimney that breaks in use.

By the way, if you want to know about it, send to Macbeth for a primer.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hale are at Burlington, Vt.

—Miss Nellie Hurd is on a visit to Miller's Falls, Mass.

—Mr. Alonzo Peterson, an aged man and a native of Denmark, died last week after a short but severe illness.

—Mr. C. W. Godsoe has moved into Mr. Daniel Warren's house of Wales street. It is rumored that he intends moving his shoe store.

—The corner stone of the new Methodist church will be laid with impressive ceremonies Thursday morning next at 10 o'clock.

—Mr. Thomas Hayden has purchased a new outfit including horse, harness and express wagon. He intends going into the express business.

—Mrs. Henry Morgan exhibited a very beautiful specimen of the night-blooming cereus at her residence on Grove street last Saturday evening.

—It is stated that a new depot will be built at Rice's crossing soon, and also have

Two kinds of lamp-chimneys; one breaks; the other does not. Which do you think your grocer or glass-man would rather sell?

If you buy the breaker, you're buying all the time. If you buy the not-breaker, he may not live to sell you another. You know him— which do you think he'd rather you'd buy?

The one that doesn't break is called the "pearl-top" and looks like this  the top of it; made by Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh. The man that sells it is paid to give you a new one for every "pearl-top" chimney that breaks in use.

By the way, if you want to know about it, send to Macbeth for a primer.

BETTER RAILROAD ACCOMMODATIONS BETWEEN THAT PLACE AND BOSTON.

The disturbance, Sunday evening, on River street was caused by two parties falling out in regard to an argument. One of the men was fined rather heavily before the Wellesley trial justice.

A fine shade tree which stood at the entrance of Sullivan & Hosmer's office was cut down Wednesday on account of the street being widened. The curbstone was also taken out but will be reset.

NONANTUM.

—Stone laying at the bridge has again been suspended for four days.

—Mr. S. W. Fletcher of California street is dangerously sick at his home.

—John R. Dearden and family removed to Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday.

—Dr. Solomon has been attracting crowds at his camp on Adams street the past week.

—Wonder if the city fathers are going to do anything on California street this season.

C. N. Goodrich of Boston will make an address at the Sunday School concert next Sunday evening.

—Thomas Temperly had one finger hurt while about his work at the Newton Machine shop, a few days ago.

—Two hundred tickets were sold in this vicinity for the English picnic which took place at Downer Landing, Tuesday.

—John Rotchford, who has been running the engine at the bridge for the past two months, has secured employment on the Fitchburg railroad.

—Jennie Brady got one of her fingers considerably lacerated at the Nonantum Mills last Saturday, trying to clean a machine while in motion.

—The death of Deacon John Warner of Newton is seriously felt by many in this village, where he has been a teacher in the North Evangelical Sunday School for many years.

At a meeting of Victoria Lodge, held Wednesday evening, the following preamble and resolution was passed unanimously, and an appropriation of money made to purchase flowers for the occasion.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God in his goodness to afflict our worthy brother, William Silman, by taking away suddenly one of his dear children, therefore be it

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of Victoria Lodge, No. 23, Sons of St. George, be extended to our worthy brother and his family in this their time of trial and affliction, and that this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the lodge and extended to our brother and his family.

When to Sit and When to Set.

A man, or woman either, can set a hen, although they cannot sit her; neither can they set on her, although the old hen might sit on them by the hour if they would allow. A man cannot set on the wash-bench, but he could set the basin on it and neither the basin nor the grammarians would object. He could sit on the dog's tail if the dog were willing, or he might set his foot on it. But if he should set on the aforesaid tail, or sit his foot there, the grammarians as well as the dog would howl. And yet, strange as it may seem, the man might set the tail aside and then sit down, and neither be assailed by the dog nor the grammarians.—Christian Union.

Our Manufacturing Industries.

THE NONANTUM WORSTED CO.

[The articles in this series upon "Our Manufacturing Industries" are founded upon the editor's personal investigation and inquiry. The conclusions, of course, are our own, and the managers and proprietors of the different mills or factories are in no way responsible for them.—Ed.]

In walking through the Nonantum Mills the other day the Tariff Reformer found himself "looking backward," and wishing that the past might see something of the present. The year 1880 would be no whit less wonderful to the man of the eighteenth century than the year 2,000 seemed to Mr. Bellamy's long-sleeping hero. Would that Cinderella's god-mother and Alexander Hamilton might have gone through the mills with us.

Darwin's discovery has made us cease to wonder at such trifles as the evolution of horses from mice, and as fox turning pumpkins into coaches, what do you say, fairy god-mother, of wool of sheep and hair of goat becoming mittens and stockings, shawls and dresses and a thousand things more? Can your wand create more brilliant hues than skin after skin in the spinning, the dyeing, and the weaving? All simple, all clear, all easy,—and yet only the more wonderful as it is so simple, clear, and easy. Ah! you wish to go all over it again? I cannot stop; but seeing is believing, isn't it?

And the other visitor from the past, what would he think of the marvel? But wonder as he might at the magic machinery of the nineteenth century, Alexander Hamilton would wonder more to hear how the government encourages this industry; modern methods of legislation would amaze him even more than modern methods of manufacturing.

The Nonantum Worsted Company is the largest manufacturing establishment in Newton, and employs over six hundred operatives. Its chief product is worsted yarns made in a multitude of qualities and sizes, each colored in over thirty different ways. The Star Tariff yarns find a market in every part of the Union. How do our beneficent tariff laws promote this industry?

The first way in which the tariff promotes this industry is by giving the owners the privilege of charging everybody seventy per cent. more for the goods than foreign manufacturers can. (Washington, Hamilton and Clay please note that seventy per cent.) It is certain that "we, the people," pay that seventy per cent., because the European paupers import and sell in the United States annually a million and a half dollars' worth of similar goods. If domestic yarns were only sixty per cent. higher than foreign ones, the latter of course could not be sent here and sold. However, we don't imagine that the Nonantum Worsted Company is making seventy per cent. Congressional largess has managed to divide it around. Read:

The second way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it 75 cents for every ton of coal used. It must need thousands of tons yearly to run the massive engines which give life and strength to all these marvellous machines.

The third way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it to the extent of ten per cent. upon the lumber it uses. Enormous quantities of this taxed lumber are sent out of the mill yearly in the form of packing boxes.

The fourth way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it forty-five per cent. upon its extensive and costly machinery—almost all of which comes from England.

The fifth way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it ten per cent. to fifty per cent. upon many of the chemicals used in dyeing and other processes.

The sixth way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it from ten per cent. to one hundred per cent. upon the wool, glass, iron, paint, and other substances which are used so largely by manufacturing establishments in repairs. In twenty years repairs amount to as much as the original cost.

The seventh way in which the Tariff promotes this industry is by taxing it from thirty per cent. to seventy-five per cent. upon the wool, tannin, hair, mohair, &c., from which its finished product is made. Foreign wools the mill must have. Certain lines of goods cannot be made with American wools, and from one-third to one-fourth of the immense quantity of wool used at Nonantum is brought across the ocean for our benefit.

A judicious reform and reduction of the tariff would "ripple" this industry by taking off the taxes now imposed upon it! When Nonantum ceases to pay tribute to wool men, and paint men, and glass men, and chemical men, and machinery men, and lumber men, and coal men, and many men of many kinds, then we think that seventy per cent. can be reduced one-half without harm to Nonantum. The Mills Bill left woollen and worsted yarns at forty per cent. And when relieved of these many burdens the Star Light yarns are sold at lower prices. Do the workmen of Nonantum know what that would mean? A reduction in the price of yarns means an increased consumption—this enlarged use creates a demand which in turn causes larger orders—larger orders means more work and more work means steadier wages and perhaps higher wages. Let us tabulate the disastrous results of Tariff Reform upon the Nonantum Worsted Co.:

1. Cheaper yarns for the people.
2. More orders for the mill.
3. Steadier work for the operatives.

Republican Free Traders.

No. VIII.

To the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the New England States: I request that you will insist upon the incorporation of the following provision in any revised tariff law that may be enacted:—

That iron, ore, coal, and coke shall be put upon the free list.

Bridgewater Iron Co., The Providence Iron Co., The Somerset Iron Co., The Parker Mills and the Weymouth Iron Co., The Old Colony Iron Co., and others.)

Massachusetts in Congress.

What a pitiful contrast with the old day in the Forties, when Webster and Winthrop were leaders of debate, or in the Fifties and Sixties when Everett and Rantoul, Sumner and Wilson, Burlingame and Rice, Banks and Hooper, shapely legislators for their whole country. Compare these names with those of today and we see at a glance why Massachusetts has become insignificant at the seat of power, unable to protect her interests in the fierce contest for commercial advantage which rages in Congress as everywhere. Who ever hears from a Massachusetts Representative? The men from Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Texas, are at the front, with new measures and ideas, leading, proposing, controlling. But the eleven men of Massachusetts sit in the obscure corners and listen for the crack of the party whip. A single conspicuous example will serve for all. It was with the fondest anticipations a few years ago that Massachusetts sent John D. Long to represent her in the halls of Congress. Was he not a scholar, a poet, an orator, a lawyer, a statesman, an ex-Governor? So indeed it seemed. But his congressional career is closed and we cannot recall that it ever made a ripple; his congressional record is made up and if it ever left a footprint on the sands of time the waves of oblivion have already erased it from sight. And what other result could be expected for a man who for long years could calmly watch the destruction of the forges and machine shops of his constituency and the embarrassment of its woollen mills, while at the same time declaring by his votes that the gilded millionaires of Pennsylvania had no divine right to tax the plain manufacturer of Massachusetts out of existence? He is a distinguished victim of the deadly high-tariff blight which poisons and paralyzes all within its influence. But Massachusetts cannot thus be neglected and abused forever. New elections are not far off. The grand old State has plenty of good blood, brains and backbone and her citizens must push them to the fore. Let us even now prepare for the elections of 1890, by searching out new men for congressional candidates, men of broad views, positive convictions, and with courage and ability to support their convictions.

A HONEYMOON LETTER.

FROM JACK BENEDICT TO HIS CHUM, WITH HIS LAST BACHELOR TESTAMENT.

—, June 24th, 1889.

DEAR TOM:—I find that in packing up my mugs to send to the house I really forgot to pick out a lot of things which I mean to distribute among the boys. I don't want any of the fellows to feel that I left them without some little remembrance, for of course I cannot see quite as much of them hereafter as I used to. Please take inclosed keys and go up to the house. The paper-hangers are still there, so you won't have any difficulty in getting in. Look over my pictures carefully. I think you had better have the "Two Hemmers"—you always liked them. Give Ned Ogden the three ballet pictures—they are about his style of art. Sam can have the statuette of John L.

I wish you would look carefully over my books. There are several which I am sure you would like. You might take away all the French novels, and perhaps, you might find some deserving person to whom you could give them.

It is curious how one accumulates rubbish. You will find a lot of photographs in the upper right hand corner of my desk, with the combination lock on. The combination is 7-23-19-11. You might as well destroy the photographs.

There is also in my desk (small drawer under the pigeon holes) a white satin slipper. It is one of my aunt's, which I once asked me to send to her shoe-maker, and I forgot it. She might run across it sometime and feel that I had neglected her commission. Perhaps you had better burn it up.

I hope the boys will be pleased to have these little remembrances. If you happen to notice anything else which in my judgment they ought to have, pick it out, and don't bother to write me about it. You may have my meerschaum pipe. I find I can not smoke a pipe any longer. I think it begins to affect my lungs.

We are having a splendid time. Please don't forget to attend to this little business at once, as I should hate to have any of the boys feel badly.

Don't take the trouble to write and tell me you have done it. Just scratch down on a postal: "Riding boots will be ready Monday," or something of that sort, and sign it "Mulvaney" or "Smith" or anything.

Having a splendid time.

Yours ever, JACK.

A State House Item.

The following item, of recent date, has not before been in print, and is given the Courant by one of our readers:

Dennis Chisel, a worthy Irish veteran, of North Easton, had proven his right to a pension and went to Boston to get his money. Entering the office he accosted the polite clerk:

"Good mornin' sur; I'm Dennis Chisel an' I want me money."

"All right my man, but I don't know you."

"But I tell you I'm Dennis Chisel?"

"You are doubtless telling the truth, but we don't know you, or what you are, and you must bring some one who can prove to us that you are Dennis Chisel—you must be identified—don't you know any one in the city?"

Dennis, after a moment's pause, doubtfully: "Would the gov'nor do?"

"Well, I rather guess he would."

So off went Dennis in search of the governor, only to find that he was sitting in the council chamber with his State advisors, and he was told that it would be impossible to see him then. But Dennis had no mind to be thus beaten, and a short time after, he quietly entered the door of the council chamber and stood hat in hand, opposite the august head of the State. Dispensing with preliminaries, he began:

"Oliver, who am I?"

The genial magistrate, after a moment's scrutiny, replied: "Why, you're Dennis Chisel of North Easton."

"That's what I tho't, an' phwat I could him."

A brief conversation revealed Dennis' needs, and the governor good naturedly took his hat, accompanied him to the willing but cautious clerk, and sent him home a happier because a richer man.

NEXT TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

The special election for an alderman from Ward Seven to succeed Judge Kennedy will be held next Tuesday and all who can do so should make it a point to vote. The vote will naturally be light, at this time of the year, when so many are out of town, and as there is only one official to be voted for in all the wards but Ward Five, which elects a councilman. But Mr. Hamblen deserves the compliment of a full vote, and if he can give so much of his time to the city, voters can surely give the five minutes that it will take to deposit a vote.

So far as now appears there will be no other candidate in the field, and Mr. Hamblen has worked so faithfully for the city that there should be no opposition to his promotion to the higher branch. He would have had the nomination anyway at the end of the year, so that it is only anticipating by a few months.

It was found to be impracticable to order another election for his successor as councilman, as was at first intended, as there was not time for the board of aldermen to get together and pass the order, so that another special election will be necessary in Ward Seven, but as it will affect only one ward the expense will not be great.

A caucus is to be held Saturday night in Ward Five to nominate a successor to Councilman Hale, and Mr. E. L. Collins will probably be nominated, so that the growing village of Waban may have a representative in the City Council. Upper Falls has the alderman, the Highlands one councilman, and with the other chosen from Waban, things would be divided very evenly in that ward.

As the polls will close at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, it will be necessary for all who wish to vote to do so before that hour. This is a change from the usual method, but as the most of the votes are always cast in the morning it will cause no great inconvenience.

ATTEND THE CAUCUSES.

In Professor Francis Newton Thorpe's recent work upon the Government of the United States there are several chapters on the caucus system, which is the foundation of our politics. If no interest is taken in the caucus and the disinterested citizens who do not want office stay away, then the management of conventions is sure to fall into unworthy hands. In a thinly attended caucus it is easy for the bosses to get their heelers out and defeat the wishes of the people. That this is so has been proved so many times that no one would think of disputing it. If unfitted nominations are made it is because the people do not take the trouble to see that proper delegates are selected in the caucuses.

In a few weeks the Republican caucuses will be called, and the voters of Newton should see to it that delegates are chosen who will represent their wishes. The sentiment of the majority of voters here is generally correct, and Newton has as few professional politicians as any city of its size, but it is always better to be on the safe side, and the State issues are such this fall as to appeal directly to the voters. Whether they favor one or the other of the two leading candidates for governor, the voters should see that their caucuses elect delegates who will represent the wishes of the majority. Prof. Thorpe says in regard to the subject:

"As an entire political system of free government in this country starts in the caucus, it is absolutely necessary for the welfare of the people, both in local and national affairs, that the caucus be kept just and pure. The responsibility of the citizen in such a government as ours requires him to be very bold, very just and very persistent in his demands for the purity of all political management. The subject is of the greatest practical importance and touches every right of the citizen, industrial, political, social and moral. It cannot be too plainly understood that the demoralization of our politics means the ruin of our institutions and our extinction as a nation."

The italics are made by the author and he certainly does not put the case too strongly. The contest between the politicians and the people is a never-ending one, and the voters cannot insist too strongly on being represented by the best men in the party, men who by reason of their moral character, ability and reputation are fitted to lead. The political manipulator has never been as successful in Massachusetts as in some of the other States, and it is only by having the best sentiment of the party largely represented at the caucuses that our politics can be kept pure.

We have an opportunity this fall to put the Republican party of Massachusetts back on the high plane it once occupied and it only remains for the people to do their duty at the caucuses to have such a program carried out.

THE NEWTON STREET RAILWAY.

In another column will be found an interview with President Morse of the Newton Street Railway company, telling of the plans of the company, the reasons for the delay in the building of the road and some changes that will be asked for. There is little doubt that the changes in the route from Watertown to Waltham will be granted, as they will be for the benefit of the people of the three towns through which the road will pass. The former route through Main street from Waltham to Watertown would accommodate but few people, some 500, most of whom keep carriages, and who are therefore independent of a street railway, but by the proposed new route, the road goes down Newton, River and Pleasant streets to Watertown, along which route some 5,000 people live, who have no other means of conveyance than a street railway, and it would accommodate those who work at the Bleachery, Davis & Farnham's foundry, Etna Mills, and be within two minutes' walk of the Nonantum Mills and North Village. The people along this route desire the railway, and there will probably be no objection to the proposed change. The Main street line will be built later, but the company wish their road to pay from the start and therefore seek the route that will bring them most patronage.

The company are to ask for some slight changes, which will necessitate a hearing in this city also, in regard to the manner of building the railway; for instance, the flood at Johnson washed out the factories so that steel chairs cannot be obtained, but it can build just as good a railway without them by another method which is being adopted by nearly all the electric railways. It also wishes to heavily concrete the road in certain places instead of macadamizing it. These changes will doubtless be granted without question. Contracts are now being made for the rails and ties, and with the contractors for the work, and if all the necessary orders are granted next week, the work will begin the week after.

EUGENE FIELD has evidently never visited Newton, but that does not prevent his writing it up in a very fascinating style. He describes how Marie Jan sen spent a month's vacation at Newton, which he declares is "one of the oldest sports along the New England coast; it used to be a prosperous whaling station, but many years ago it fell into decay, and now it is a veritable Sleepy Hollow. This semi-comatose community was thrown into a state of vast excitement by the arrival of the famous soprano, who travelled incognito as Miss Harriet M. Johnson. It was rumored that she was a Cuban heiress, but this false rumor was corrected by the Newton Weekly Palladium, whose editor had once visited New York on a free railway pass." Mr. Field then goes on to describe how Miss Jansen went bathing in the surf on Nonantum's beach, in a way to make his readers believe that Newton is really a sea shore resort, instead of being at the head of tide water navigation on the Charles. The article certainly proves the versatility of Chicago journalists, although it is hardly adapted for outside circulation.

In regard to the assault being made upon Councilman Moody by another paper it is only necessary to remember that the councilman is a member of the printing committee, and that a certain party did not get the contract for the city printing. He also gives a careful scrutiny to all printing bills against the city, as it is his duty to do, and if he has sometimes felt called upon to object to certain bills which he considered exorbitant, he ought not to be persecuted for only doing his duty. As the city solicitor at the beginning of the year told Mayor Burr that there was no legal objection to the almshouse supplies being bought of Mr. Moody, there is certainly no occasion for worry, if a few dollars of the city's money find their way to his store.

It is reported that Gen. Mahone has mortgaged part of his real estate for $60,000 to pay the expenses of his campaign, and the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal thinks it is very much to the credit of Mahone, that he is so willing to pay the expenses of his campaign. But as the campaign is solely for the benefit of Mahone, we don't know who should pay the expense if he does not. The Republican party certainly suffers enough from the Mahone alliance without spending money, but nevertheless the fact that such an amount of money is necessary only shows the depths to which Mahone has brought Virginia politics. Judging from the platforms of the two parties the Virginia people have only a choice of evils, whichever party wins.

GOVERNOR AMES has nominated Hon. Robert T. Davis, of Fall River to be the third member of the sewerage commission. Dr. Davis is a prominent member of the medical profession, an ex-Congressman, and a worthy gentleman, but Gov. Ames ought to have appointed an engineer for the third member, and it remains to be seen whether the executive council will confirm Dr. Davis. Gov. Ames has certainly not covered himself with glory by his course in regard to this commission.

Gov. AMES signed the petition for free iron and says that he did it to save the iron industry in New England, which is fast being exterminated by the present policy. The governor still professes to be a staunch protectionist, but he does not believe in letting politics interfere with his business. New England has paid tribute to Pennsylvania about long enough, is the concise way in which the signers of the free iron petition put it.

The special election next Tuesday is for an alderman from Ward Seven, who will be voted for in all the wards, and for a councilman in Ward Five. It was found impracticable to order an election for councilman in Ward Seven at this time and that will be held later, but as only Ward Seven will have to vote, the expense will be trifling.

CHAIRMAN Coffin will call a meeting of the Republican ward and city committee next week, to fix a date for the caucuses to elect delegates to the state, senatorial, county and councillor conventions. The date will probably be Saturday evening, Sept. 14th, as that will give plenty of time before the state convention meets, on Sept. 25th.

ALL nominations for State offices this year must be certified at the office of the Secretary of State by October 22 at the latest. Political committees will see the advantage of holding all caucuses and conventions at a date sufficiently early to give chance for corrections and preparation of papers before the 22d.

Mr. John H. Wright, one of the editorial staff of the Boston Herald, and one of the most popular newspaper men in Boston, will be tendered a banquet in recognition of his services upon his retirement from his present position.

The Board of Aldermen will hold their first meeting after the summer vacation next Tuesday evening, Monday being Labor Day and a legal holiday, and the returns from the special city election will be received at the meeting.

The Prohibitionists are ahead of the other parties in their call to elect delegates to the state convention, and the caucuses will be held at West Newton Saturday evening.

The County Commissioners advertise in this issue a hearing on that long talked of County Truant School.

OFFICE OF

OF MIDDLESEX COUNTY,

STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

EAST CAMBRIDGE, Aug. 26, 1889.

To Members of School Boards, Superintendents of Schools, Truant Officers, and all others interested in Educational Matters:-

The county commissioners will be in session in their room in the County House, East Cambridge, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1889, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to hear any and all persons who may desire to be heard, relating to the establishing of a COUNTY TRUANT SCHOOL, in Middlesex County, in accordance with section 14 of Chapter 48, Public Statutes.

The Board of Commissioners desire to ascertain the wishes of cities and towns in the matter, and to that end it is hoped that persons appearing will be prepared to give such evidence as will assist the commissioners in determining where the school, if it shall be located, the probable need of same on the part of the several municipalities, and all information relating to the same school.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food. It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country. Sold only in cans, full weight. CLEVELAND BROTHERS, ALBANY, N. Y.

THE IMPROVED SYSTEM OF PROPELLING STREET CARS.

A new system for developing and utilizing steam for power, without smoke, clinders, noise or escape of steam, at much less cost than by any other known method for obtaining and maintaining power. There is no failure nor uncertainty in its operation, and it is absolutely safe. For street cars and other service requiring portable power, it has no equal. Secured by U. S. letters patent. A prominent mechanical engineer says that the possibilities of this invention have not been equalled by any recent invention—except possibly the Bell Telephone and Sawyer-Mann for electric lighting. The Steam Storage Power Company has been organized for the development and introduction of this system throughout the New England States—which territory is owned exclusively by it—with a capital of $300,000—par value shares, $10—and is having a Power Car built by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which will be exhibited in Boston and vicinity in September. The first issue of certificates will be from the office of the company, 34 Broad street, after August 1st. Subscriptions may be made for the stock at par—payable 25 per cent. cash, 25 per cent. 30 days, 50 per cent. 60 days—to an amount not exceeding $20,000.

Soap Free.

A sample bar of Tenney's magic glycerine soap will be sent free to any one who will send a postal to Chas. W. Howe, Waltham. See advertisement.

Higgins & Nickerson, was unloading from the wagon a case of fine weighing 220 lbs., his foot slipped and the end of the heavy roll pinned the forefinger of his right hand to the bottom of the cart, taking the flesh and nail off from the bone below the first joint. He was attended by Dr. Hunt who filed off a portion of the bone, drawing the flesh over it and sewing it together.

—The funeral of the late George L. Whitney took place from the residence of the deceased, Washington Park, last Friday afternoon and was largely attended, many of his neighbors and friends gathering to pay their last tribute of respect to the man whom they had so highly esteemed. Rev. S. S. Butters officiated and in his remarks alluded to Mr. Whitney's efficient services as a member of the city council and as superintendent of the Newton Water Works.

—The Masonic bodies with which he was connected and members of Dalhousie Lodge, F. & A. M., attended the services. The floral tributes were very beautiful and included a broken column from the water board and other designs from the family, neighbors and friends. Among the officials present were Mr. Albert S. Glover, water registrar, Mr. H. N. Hyde, Jr., the present superintendent of the water works and Mr. George E. Briggs, chairman of the board of registrars of voters. The remains were taken to Stoneham and interred in the family lot in the Stoneham cemetery.

—The Newton Co-operative Bank has been a success and already has started a number of persons on the road to a good home, possibly and very probably but the beginning of the accumulation of considerable property. The following summary, for the past 6 months, of the bank's shares, loans and dividends will be read with interest: Number of shares in force at close of the first series, 1496; second series, 1198; total, 2694. A dividend of 4 per cent. was paid at the close of the first 6 months, and a dividend of 6 per cent. at the close of the second series. The real estate loans amount to $23,100, bearing interest at 6 per cent. and an average premium of 15 cents per month on one share. The real estate interest, premiums, fines and transfer fees for the last six months amount to $734.64; expenses, $212.97, leaving a net income of $521.67. The third series will be opened Tuesday, Sept. 3. Parties who desire can subscribe now, making their payments to any member of the board of directors or to Mr. J. C. Fuller, treasurer; also at the meeting to be held in Mr. Fuller's office on the date mentioned, when the third series will be formally opened.

—In court, Wednesday morning, Lizzie Beane, an English girl, citing the evidence in Boston, was fined $5 without costs for drunkenness. Being unable to pay her fine she was taken to the house of correction by Officer Libby.

—Mr. Robert Bennett, the genial station agent, returned Tuesday from Ashpoint, Me., where he has been spending three weeks' vacation. He had a very pleasant time and returns in the best of health, and in his usual good spirits.

—The Water Works department sent two beautiful floral tributes as an evidence of sympathy to the late George L. Whitney, formerly superintendent of the department. One was a broken column, a handsome design from Mr. Mansfield's conservatory.

—In the police court this week 20 cases were disposed of as follows: Drunks, 12; suspicious persons, 3; violation of the liquor law, 1; violation of city ordinance, 1; insanity, 1; assault and battery, 1; disturbing religious meeting, 1.

—W. H. Mague while driving on Washington street, Brighton, Sunday evening, collided with a farm wagon and was thrown from his buggy, sustaining painful but not serious injuries. The carriage was badly damaged.

—It won't do for a man to ride his cycle on the sidewalk even late in evening, owing to the vigilance of the police who construe the law literally. There is not much danger to pedestrians late at night that there is during the day, however.

—Mr. J. M. Brooks and Mr. W. E. Fuller, Jr., of Newtonville have been stopping at the charming little town of North Falmouth, Mass., after two weeks' cruise in the elegant and fast sailing schooner the Adel of Falmouth.

—A pair of horses attached to Roberts' express wagon became frightened and ran from near the depot into the yard of W. H. Mague on Chestnut street, coming in contact with the house and tearing off a number of clapboards, but fortunately doing no serious damage.

—Rev. Mr. Patrick has returned from Chatham and Cottage City, where he spent the last days of his vacation. He will resume his place in the Congregational church pulpit next Sunday morning. Communion service will be observed in the afternoon.

—In the evening of the missionary service there was a very interesting discourse on the missions learned at the Northfield conference.

—The board of registrars of voters were in session at the City Hall last Saturday, for the special election, Sept. 3. Those unqualified to vote were given an opportunity between the hours of 7:30 and 10 in the evening. Only one name was added to the list and there seems to be no reason to apprehend any serious change of sentiment as far as the vote is concerned in the upper and lower branches of the city government is concerned.

—Thomas Ryan was arraigned in the police court Wednesday morning for disturbing a religious meeting last Sunday afternoon, during the services of the Salvation Army contingent in Allen's Hall. The evidence failed to fasten the disturbance on Ryan and merely proved that some commotion had been raised during the exercises. Ryan was therefore, discharged and the Salvation Army witnesses filed out of the court room without the usual bad-sadum accompaniment.

—Mr. C. Seaver, Jr., has returned from Poland Springs and has completed a number of very fine pictures of the great hotel and its surroundings, including views of the famous six-horse tally-ho coaches, a landscape scene, looking across the lake towards the hotel, and the hotel with interior portraits of the principal rooms, including the large dining hall with accommodations for 500 guests. Quite a number of Newton people have tried the celebrated spring water this summer.

—Rev. D. W. Faunce, late of Washington, D. C., has accepted the uninvited call of the First Baptist church to become its pastor. He commences his work here next Sunday. Preaching in the morning at 10:45, Sunday school meeting in the evening at 7 o'clock. Recognition services will be held in the church Thursday, Sept. 5th, in the evening, commencing at 7:45. Leading clergymen of the denomination will take part. To all of the Sunday and evening services of the church the public are cordially invited.

—Sergt. Huestis and Officer Libby arrested Henry B. Felton, Henry Adams and George W. B. B. Sunday morning on Washington street near Slater's crossing, and locked them up at the Central police station pending an investigation. They, with another one who escaped, were seen lurking around the Newton National Bank building, and between 2 and 6 o'clock proceeded toward Newtonville. It is thought that they made an attempt to enter a house, but there is at present no evidence to substantiate the charge. One of the men admitted, on being questioned, that the man who escaped was considered a hard character.

—A young man named Cunningham, accompanied by a friend, were out enjoying a ride Sunday evening. When opposite Cole's blacksmith shop on Washington street, the horse became frightened and ran, colliding with a carriage, the forward wheel of the vehicle passing between the carriage and rear wheels of the other carriage and over the axle. The buggy was thrown partly over and both men thrown out, but neither were much injured. The runaway horse cleared the other carriage and dashed with the buggy down Washington street to Newton Highlands where the animal was stopped. The buggy was badly damaged.

A SEASIDE COTTAGE INTERIOR.

It Would Do As Well for the Interior of Any Summer Cottage.

The season of outing is at its height, and therefore the accompanying matter and illustrations, furnished to The Decorator and Furnisher by C. W. Clark, will be of interest. Mr. Clark has in mind especially the interior furnishing of a seaside cottage, but his design is suitable for a summer cottage anywhere. He offers his sketch to the rich and the poor, the owner and the tenant, hoping that not only professional decorators but home artists will find its suggestions of value in fitting up inexpensive and comfortable quarters.

INTERIOR OF A SEASIDE COTTAGE.

This article is also intended to reach that class of owners of miles and miles of ocean shore lands, who it seems prefer to let the lands remain barren waste instead of erecting thereon, at small cost, a number of portable bungalows, or one story cottages, which would not only be in great demand at the approach of the spring season, but would bring in quite a fair income. These little houses would be eagerly sought after by those who prefer the home quiet and privacy they afford to the discomforts of the stuffy and cramped quarters of the majority of our seaside hotels.

Houses like these can be constructed in such a manner that if occasion demands they can be readily moved or taken down, and from $200 to $1,000 would cover their cost and erect them in an artistic and substantial manner. The interiors offer a wide field for home or the professional talent.

A HOUSE FOR $4,000.

A Pleasing Plan for a Frame Suburban Dwelling.

The following is from Artistic Homes, issued by the National Building Plan association at Detroit, Mich.:

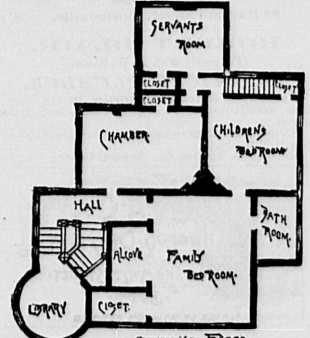

VIEW.

Stone foundation. Attic unfinished; principal apartments hard wood finished in oil; inside blinds, etc. Height of stories in the clear: First, 10 feet 6 inches; second, 10 feet; cellar, 6 feet 6 inches. First story contains vestibule, 5x5; hall, 8 feet 6 inches x 13 feet 6 inches; parlor, 13x16; sitting room, 14x14; dining room, 14x21; conservatory, 6x15; kitchen, 10x12; pantry, 4x10. Second story contains four chambers (one with alcove), library, bathroom, four closets and linen closets. The parlor, sitting room, dining room and three of the chambers have fire places. Estimated cost of building, $4,000.

Mantel Design.

A plain, easily constructed and with a neat appearing mantel, designed by H. P. Miller, of Philadelphia, is presented here with. The front and side elevations show the construction of the design so thoroughly that little can be said in explanation. We present a detail of the carved scroll that surmounts the mantel, and also a detail of the panel occurring immediately under the shelf.—Carpentry and Building.

A SONG OF THE SAND MAN.

For the sand man jolly old fellow,
With twinkling eyes and a gleesome smile;
He comes when the candles flicker yellow,
And he does his work in jantiest style.

With a light and a brisk and a generous hand.
Ho! for the sand man! merry old coddler,
His aim is firm and his shot is crack,
And the sharpest wiles of the nimblest dodger
Can baffle him never, nor hold him back;

Blue eyes, gray eyes, black eyes, brown,
He powders them soft—and the lids drop down.
Ho! for the sand man! funny old rover,
He stops the playing and halts the fun;
He doesn't wait till the games are over,
He doesn't care whether the romps are done,
His shaggy old head pokes in, and lo!
Mouths gape widely and feet lag slow.

Ho! for the sand man, blithesome old caller,
Mothers esteem him and nurses adore,
For he gathers the children, the big and the smaller,
And hurries them swiftly away before They know it's been done to the babbling creans.
And the singing birds of the land of dreams, —Emma A. Oppen in Good Housekeeping.

Plant Worship.

The plant worship, which holds so prominent a place in the history of the primitive races of mankind, would appear to have sprung from a perception of the beauty and utility of trees. Survivals of this still linger on in many parts of Europe. The peasants in Bohemia will rally forth into their gardens before sunrise on Good Friday and, falling upon their knees before a tree, will exclaim: "I pray, O green tree, that God may make thee good." At night time they will run to and fro about their gardens crying: "Bud, O trees, bud, or I will flog you."

In our own country the Devonshire farmers and their men will to this day go out into their orchards after supper on the evening of Twelfth day, carrying with them a large milk pail of cider, with roasted apples pressed into it. All present hold in their hands an earthenware cup filled with liquor, and taking up their stand beneath those apple trees which have borne the most fruit, address them in these words:

"Health to thee, good apple tree,
Well to bear pocket fulls, hat fulls, Peck fulls, bushel bag fulls!"

simultaneously dashing the contents of their cups over the trees. The observance of this ceremony, which is locally known as "wassailing," is enjoined by Thomas Tusser in his work entitled "Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry," wherein he bids the husbandman:

"Wassail the trees that they may bear
You many a plum and many a pear;
For more or less fruit they will bring,
As you do them wassailing."
—Gentlemen's Magazine (London).

The Shah's Mascot.

A new and noticeable figure among the numerous dignitaries and officials in the suite of the shah of Persia is a young boy of 12, whom the shah has covered with dignities and titles, and who is an object of envy and fear to most of his majesty's ministers. His name is Goolamali Khan. He is the director of the corps of "royal pages," and one of his titles is Azizus-Sultan, "Favorite of the Monarch." Neither minister, vizier nor royal prince has ever yet been allowed to sit at the shah's table, but Goolamali Khan is an exception to this law of the Persians. He is constantly by his master's side, and has more servants to wait upon him than any two of the royal ministers. The explanation of this extraordinary treatment is to be found in the Persian monarch's conviction that his life is inseparably and mysteriously bound up with that of Goolamali Khan, and that wise men have foretold that the shah's death will be preceded only a few days by that of his young favorite; that the health and prosperity of the latter will mean the health and prosperity of the former, and that, generally, whatever befalls this little one will also happen to his royal protector. This belief has resulted in the boy leading a life of ease and luxury unknown to the most fortunate courtiers in Teheran. He was seated on the knees of two magnificent grandees on the shah's entry into St. Petersburg.—New York Star.

The Cause of Fainting.

Chief among the causes of fainting attacks in churches and other places of public meeting are overheating and impurity of atmosphere. Both are to a great extent preventable, but, though some success has been gained in the way of prevention, much remains to be done before the air in our large assembly rooms can be regarded as pure enough to meet the requirements of a large audience. The introduction of the electric light has brought some relief, and the purifying effect of artificial ventilation, as represented by the fan system and the heated exit flue, is quite appreciable. There is still, however, a wide field open, and the inventor of a perfect system of ventilation for public buildings will not only be a public benefactor, but should also reap a very substantial reward.—New York Telegram.

It Doesn't Always Work.

Old Dobson (to his congressman)—You are right. Men often make a goal for themselves early in life and work up to it. Now, I knew a bright young fellow who told me that he intended to go to congress. I took more than a passing interest in his case. He worked like a beaver; went west, where everything was new, and at the end of twenty years—

Congressman (interrupting)—Had a seat in congress, had he?
Dobson—No; he had twenty-nine buck shot in his anatomy; got 'em while robbing a hen roost.

Doctors Disagree.

When doctors disagree who shall decide, as frequently has been remarked. Twenty-eight doctors in Boston were asked about the healthfulness of drinking ice water. Sixteen pronounced it beneficial. Twelve agreed it was very good if not taken in excess. Three didn't know, and only seven thought it ought to be left alone. So let the man who enjoys ice water go on with his beverage.—Detroit Free Press.

A HAUNTED SPOT.

The Mysterious Spirit of Myrtle Pond in Georgia—The Story.

There is a lonely and sequestered spot in the woods around Brunswick, where no negro man, woman or child will dare be found.

In what is generally known as Fulton's pasture, near Dixville and facing the boulevard, is a pond of stagnant water, the surroundings of which are all suggestive of quiet and solitude. The surface of the pond is dotted with small clumps of sand, upon which a myrtle bush grows. The pond itself is about 500 yards in circumference, with an average depth of one and a half feet.

It is said that no negro will go near this pond at any hour of the day, and investigation has proven this statement to be true. Upon questioning one of these prejudiced darkies, a reporter learned the following cause for shunning it by the colored people.

Way back yonder in the early part of the year 1869, a young negro girl was sent by her mother to gather wood in the neighborhood of the pond and she never returned. Search was made for her, but nothing was found except her wide brimmed hat, which was found floating on the stagnant water. The community was aroused and turned out en masse to find the missing child. They failed to find her.

One dark night, about one year after this strange disappearance, a lone negro fisherman landed at the bluff, near where the boulevard bridge now stands, and gathering up his oars, oarlocks and the few fish he had been fortunate enough to catch, proceeded on his way home. It being considerably nearer for him to "cut" through these woods, he did so and had to pass directly by the pond in question. As he picked his way carefully through the underbrush, his keen sighted eyes peering eagerly through the darkness, a strange sound met his ears. It was the voice of a child, singing some weird and discordant notes of a well known plantation air. The fisherman paused and listened. It seemed as if the source of the song was drawing nearer. At last, almost paralyzed with fear, the old negro called out:

"Who's there?"

The song suddenly ceased and an answering voice was heard:

"The spirit of Myrtle pond."

So weird and unearthly was the answer that the old negro turned and ran in the direction from which he came, while the ghostly music was resumed.

The fisherman reached his cottage by a more roundabout way that night, and his family, in their humble cot, listened to his recital of the thrilling experience he had passed through. The story spread until it was general talk among the superstitious negroes, and not one dared approach the pond.—Atlanta Constitution.

Relations of the Senses.

Dr. Urbanschitsch, of Vienna, has for some time past been engaged in a series of experiments on the mutual action of the sense organs, and the results he has obtained are most curious. The senses of sight and hearing were shown by these experiments to be to some extent dependent on each other. Colored plates were placed at a distance where the colors could scarcely be distinguished, but on the production of various sounds the colors were more readily recognized, the colors becoming the more distinct the higher the pitch of the same. Printed matter could also be read in a dimly lighted room much better if the ears were simultaneously employed in receiving sounds than in complete silence. In like manner the activity of the eyes aid in the recognition of sounds. The ticking of a watch was found to be more easily heard in the light with the eyes open than in the dark with the eyes closed.

Various colors of light were found to vary in their effects upon the auditory organs, red and green strengthening and blue and green weakening them. In the case of taste and smell corresponding effects were observed. Light in general, and particularly red and green, heightens their sensitiveness, while blue and yellow, and still more darkness, reduce it. If a person is exposed to red or green light he can taste, not acutely with the anterior edges of the tongue, but with its whole surface. There is a curious reciprocal action between the sense of touch and the heat sense, which, though they have not distinct organs, are certainly not identical. If the skin is tickled with a hair and the hand is then plunged into hot water the sensation ceases. If, on the other hand, any part of the body is tickled, the hand or foot is thrust into cold water, the chilly feeling is intensified.—Boston Herald.

Yellow Shoes.

Dr. Weyl also described the case of a young man in Munich who had been poisoned by the yellow dyeing matter used in coloring russet shoes. After wearing these shoes for one week the young man's feet were covered with small yellow blisters, which, in the middle of the second week, began to spread to his ankles. His doctor had him give up the shoes and cured the eruptions in ten days. The yellow leather was subsequently examined at the Munich Hygienic institute, and was found to be saturated with a dangerous yellow dye. Dr. Weyl's advice to his colleagues was: "Don't wear russet shoes."—Chicago Tribune.

Usefulness of Sandhill Cranes.

Several Orlando families have pet sandhill cranes, which they find alert night watchers. No tramp or thief can approach their premises without hearing a clear bugle note of alarm. Maj. Foster has a flock of cranes. He had one pair to which the wild ones paid frequent visits, and several were enticed under wire netting and their wings clipped. A farmer finds that a pair of these birds are as good as two hands at keeping the worms off his tobacco. They carefully take row after row, and it is a sly worm that escapes the keen eyes and the sharp bills of the cranes.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Cor. New York Tribune.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

The Father.

—The Newton Centre store boys defeated a picked nine of so called ball players to the tune of 36 to 4, last week Thursday. It was a genuine surprise to both parties, for the picked nine was composed of ball players who have had enough experience to make a far better showing. In fact they apparently thought there was but little show for the store boys when the game commenced.

—While the fire department horses attached to the tender were being unharnessed at the blacksmith shop, Tuesday evening, they took it into their heads to take a short run on their own account. They ran down Beacon street and up by the depot where they cleared themselves but were soon stopped. No damage was done and the excitement created by the occurrence quietly subsided.

—Last Sunday morning between ten and eleven o'clock, when respectable people were wending their way to church, a gang of young fellows, (we were going to say hoodlums) congregated at the corner of California and Bridge streets on the stone wall surrounding Mrs. S. Bemis' lawn and to while away the Sunday hours employed themselves in throwing stones at the globe of the electric light located at that point, and it was not long ere the globe was smashed, when the gang moved on. It is thought that an example was made of some of the fellows as this is not the first case of the kind.

—Tuesday evening Tommy McGrady went to the vacant lot on Dalby street to milk Mr. J. B. Murphy's cows, as is his custom. He had got possession of a small revolver and was anxious to understand the use and out of the thing and so on in his way to the lot he made a personal examination.

tion, and as a result it went off and the bullet passed through the window of a house near by, where Mrs. Philip Murphy was preparing supper for her family, striking her in the arm and cutting its way through the flesh, it fell to the floor. Mrs. Murphy screamed and Tom dropped the revolver as he did not know it was loaded. Dr. Stearns was called and dressed the wound and made Mrs. Murphy as comfortable as possible, while Dr. Davis attended to Tommy and his revolver, but as it proved to be only an accident Thomas was allowed to depart in peace.

A Change of Air Needed.

Some of the Republicans hereabouts look at the Governorship in this way, that the state house affairs have run along in very much the same groove since the time of Ex-Governor Robinson; that a vigorous hand to overhaul some of the departments and state institutions is needed, and in Hon. W. W. Crapo they see, or think they see, a man who has the ability and disposition to right that which is wrong wherever he finds it. A change of air around the state house might be healthy and if it extended into other departments and institutions no harm would be done.—Framingham Gazette.

Old Mrs. Smiley—"Next time I get took down sick, my dear, I wish you wouldn't have that there young sprig of a doctor come to attend me. I don't go much on young doctors, no how, Mr. Smiley—"Well, Maria, who would you like to have me call?" Mrs. S.—"I've kinder took a notion to the doctor around the corner. I dunno much about him; but I see he's got a sign out 'Veterinary Surgeon' and I think he must be a man of experience."

"See here, Mr. Grocer," said a Hartford housewife, "if you are going to bring me any more goods, I want them to be of the very best." "We keep none but the best," I presume so. But you sell the worst in order to keep the best."—Hartford Post.

GRANDMA'S GLASSES.

When grandma puts her glasses on And looks at me—just so If I have done a naughty thing She's sure somehow to know. How is it she can always tell? So very, very, very well! She says to me: yes, little one, I've written in your eye! And if I look the other way, Or turn and seem to try To hurt for some lone on the floor, She's sure to know it all the more. If I should put the glasses on And look in grandma's eyes, I do not suppose that I should be So very, very wise? Now what if I should find it true That grandma had been naughty too? But ah! What am I thinking of? To dream that grandma could Be anything in all her life! I'd better try myself to be So good that when she looks at me With eyes so loving all the day, I'll never want to turn away. A. A. M. Aug. 22, 1889.
